OTTAWA SETS TIME LIMIT

Mail Mediator Has 10 Days

More Meetings Held Today

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Trudeau says the government is prepared to give the new postal mediator a week to 10 days to achieve results in the mail dispute.

TRUDEAU WANTS PROGRESS
. . . announces postal time limit

Trudeau spoke against the background of a highwater mark in the wave of postal strikes with 10,987 workers out in 111 post offices as talks under mediator Thomas O'Connor of Toronto resumed today.

More than a million welfare and baby bonus cheques were undelivered as a result of the tie-up.

All mail deposted in Greater Victoria boxes over the past two days has been collected, Leon Hall, supervisor of public service, said this morning.

★ ★ ★

It will be on its way today, he added. There was rural mail delivery today and will be full delivery Monday.

A full staff is back on the job but Hall said it would be two or three days before they are able to catch up on the backlog of incoming mail.

Trudeau said he will be leaving for a Mediterranean holiday late this weekend or Monday, as Mr. O'Connor, a labor relations expert, has not yet completed his work. In any case, the cabinet is to discuss the postal situation again next Wednesday, Trudeau said.

★ ★ ★

O'Connor had preliminary exploratory meetings with government and postal union representatives Thursday and met them again today in what is seen as his first attempt to start real mediation.

President of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers William Houle said Friday in Kitchener he is pleased with the appointment of O'Connor as mediator.

Houle told a meeting of the postal workers that O'Connor "is a fast worker" and that more was accomplished at the initial meeting than in all negotiations with former mediators.

★ ★ ★

"I have a feeling that the government is trying to reach a settlement as soon as possible," Houle said. "They could pass legislation to end the strike but are afraid of the impact such action would have."

Negotiations resumed today in a hotel in the city's west end as all parties strove to avoid, publicity.

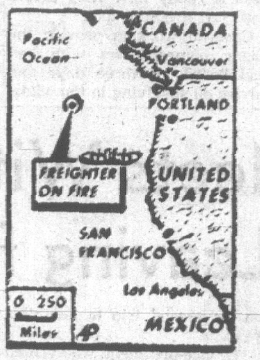
Flaming Freighter Abandoned



Times News Services

SAN FRANCISCO — The burning Philippine freighter Don Jose Figueras, her sides glowing "cherry red" with heat, was abandoned by her 40-man crew and two passengers today 900 miles out in the Pacific Ocean.

"Abandoning ship now. No recourse. No recourse," the Figueras' master radioed the coast guard. "Fire beyond control."

Before the message was sent, 38 persons already had set out in liferafts for nearby rescue ships. Five crew members, including the master, had remained aboard in a last futile effort to control the flames.

The Figueras, loaded with general cargo, was on a Great Circle route from the Philippines to Balboa, Panama. The coast

The Ogishima Maru, a 754-foot motor ore carrier, was the first of four nearby vessels to reach the Figueras and reported five hours later the freighter's captain said the fire was intensifying and that he needed more firefighting equipment. The skipper also said there were no injuries.

U.S. SENATORS CONCERNED

Cambodia Involvement Seen

FULBRIGHT
. . . outlines fear

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Fears of a United States involvement in Cambodia grew among key senators today despite administration assurances there are no plans to send American advisers to help Phnom Penh.

The senators are concerned that a new $40 million aid program to the Lon Nol government will have to involve advisers in its implementation.

The advisers could then be followed by U.S. troops in the same pattern that led to large-scale military involvement in South Vietnam.

The new program was outlined Friday by a top state department official in a closed-door briefing for the Senate foreign relations committee.

Senator J. William Fulbright (Dem.—Ark.), chairman of the committee, later outlined Senate fears when he said the aid probably would involve electronic monitoring equipment for guiding U.S. planes in operations over Cambodia.

The United States, he told reporters, "probably will use some advisers or whatever you want to call them to operate the electronic things."

Democratic Senate Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said of U.S. aid to Cambodia: "I am not happy about it. It is the involvement question which disturbs me."

Another committee member, Senator Frank Church (Dem.-Idaho), commented: "I feel that American bureaucracy has established a pattern of operation — that any sizable assistance to Cambodia would lead to a growing American pressure in Phnom Penh.

Immediately after the committee briefing by Marshal Green, assistant state secretary for Far Eastern affairs, the Senate passed by voice vote an amendment prohibiting the United States from financing South Vietnamese, Thai and other non - American troops fighting in support of the Cambodian or Laotian governments.

WEAPONS BILL

The measure by Fulbright to ban U.S. employment of so-called mercenary troops was attached to the pending $19,234 million defence weapons procurement bill.

Fulbright said he was hope*ful* the amendment would survive a joint Senate-House of Representatives conference committee which will try to work out differences in the separate versions of the bill.

Assurances that the United States would not get involved in the ground war in Cambodia were given by President Nixon after the U.S. troop incursion against Communist sanctuaries there.

Church said the briefing indicated that "it is clear that the dimension of American involvement in Cambodia is growing."

He said that Green did not deny the new aid program for Cambodia would cost $40 million, as was reported earlier. It is expected to involve substantial supplies of small arms and military equipment in the current

ISRAELI EVIDENCE 'IRREFUTABLE'

Truce Breaks Continuing?

By The Associated Press

Israel says it has new "irrefutable" evidence that Egypt is "continuing grave violations" of the Middle East ceasefire by moving more anti-aircraft missiles closer to the Suez canal.

The complaint, the fourth since the ceasefire went into effect Aug. 7, was based on material gathered Thursday, Israel said.

The Israeli military command said the evidence indicates "the construction of missile batteries and other preparational work still in progress" within 20 miles of the canal. The terms of the truce bar new military deployment within 30 miles of the waterway.

There was no Egyptian comment on the charges. Egypt has refused to acknowledge any of Israel's charges of ceasefire violations.

In Washington, the state department dismissed an Egyptian protest against United States surveillance of the ceasefire by U-2 spy planes and satellites.

The semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahram called such flights a "pretext for espionage," *but state depart*fent spokesman Robert J. McCloskey said the U.S. had received no official statement on the matter from Egypt and would continue the surveillances.

CPR OIL SPILL

B.C. River Polluted After High Runoff

FIELD (CP) — Tractors and other equipment were brought to Field today in an effort to stem the flow of oil from a sump, owned by the CPR, which escaped into the Kicking Horse River Friday night.

A national parks spokesman said the spill occured when the river, unusually high because of warm weather that melted mountain snow, overflowed its banks and filled one of three sumps a few feet from the edge of the river. The sumps were used by the CPR as a dump for bunker heavy oil when steam locomotives were used on the line more than 15 years ago.

The swirling waters tore away part of the bank and allowed the heavy oil to escape into the river.

IWA Set to Meet Peterson On Thursday for Key Talks

Negotiators for the International Woodworkers of America will meet Thursday in Vancouver with Labor Minister Leslie Peterson.

But the 10-man bargaining committee for 28,000 coastal forest workers will meet Monday to decide whether to postpone balloting on the Nemetz contract settlement proposal until that time.

Jack MacKenzie, new spokesman for the union's negotiating committee, said in Vancouver today a telegram from the labor minister has just been received proposing the Thursday meeting. It will be held at 2 p.m.

In telegrams to Jack Moore, IWA president, and John Billings, president of Forest Industrial Relations, Friday, Peterson said he would be prepared "to meet separately with the parties if they so wish during the course of the next 10 days.

"In the meantime," he continued, "I would ask that a vote on the acceptance or rejection of the report by both union and management be suspended."

Peterson said he was "alarmed at the positions taken by the parties both officially and unofficially" in respect to the report by Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz of the British Columbia Court of Appeals, special mediator in the dispute.

The IWA, whose negotiators Thursday urged rejection, accepted Mr. Peterson's offer, proposing Monday for the meeting because of "the urgency of an early solution to this problem."

MacKenzie replied: "We are prepared to do anything possible to settle the matters still in dispute so we welcome any assistance the minister can provide."

Billings said industry was complying with Peterson's request and that "no meetings are planned for several days until the study is completed."

The study so far, he said, has shown that the total cost of implementing the Nemetz recommendations over the proposed two years would be $35 million.

MacKenzie, who is regional vice-president of the IWA,

Search Continues For Lost Jet Pilot

MONTREAL (CP) — A ground and air search continued today for Capt. Denis Lambert, a Canadian Forces pilot missing since he was forced to bail out after a collision in the air between two CF-5 supersonic jets Friday.

A spokesman for the Canadian Forces base at Bagotville, Que., said 12 men were participating in the ground search while a Dakota from Trenton, Ont., and a helicopter, an Otter, a T-33 and some CF-5 aircraft were conducting the air search.

Capt. Lambert, about 30, is from Arvida, Que.

He and Lieut. Marc Fortier of Quebec City, both flying a routine training mission, were forced to eject early Friday over a wooded area 85 miles north of Bagotville.

Lieut. Fortier was picked up by a helicopter late Friday afternoon and was reported "in good condition."

The wreckage of the two jets was found a mile apart.

Warrant Officer Ray Cossette said the collision occurred while the two jets were on a routine training flight flying at about 14,000 feet.

Capt Roy Phillips from the Canadian Forces base at Trenton, Ont., was to lead 21 aircraft in the search for Capt. Lambert today.

A member of the search party which recovered Lieut. Fortier said in an interview the two DC-3s were to watch for some signal, either radio or flares, from Capt. Lambert.

He said the ejection seats are outfitted with flares, a radio pack and an inflatable life raft. No details on the collision were available.

Publishing Executive Dies

VANCOUVER (CP) — Frederick Boyd Brown, 69, chairman of Pacific Press Ltd. and a director of Sun Publishing Co., was found dead today on board his pleasure cruiser at a North Vancouver marina.

Brown, who had suffered from a heart condition for some years, was reported missing by his wife Friday night when he failed to return from a short cruise.

At the time of his death, in addition to his newspaper appointments, he was chairman of the board of Kelly Douglas and Co. Ltd.; chairman of Straits Towing Ltd.; president, Union Steamships Ltd.; vice-president and director of Inland Natural Gas Co. Ltd. and vice-president of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

China Plans 'Shock Work'

TOKYO (AP) — Communist China spelled out today a strategy of "shock work" — mobilizing giant work forces for major projects — to catch up with "advanced world levels" in industry and science.

The idea, a Peking broadcast said, is to break down "the barriers between trades and occupations, doing away with the arbitrary division of labor between enterprises." Workers from "a dozen, or dozens, or even hundreds of units" are brought together, it said, to "make a powerful fist."

The broadcast by the official New China news agency was made up of excerpts from a recent article in the Communist party newspaper People's Daily by Kuo Chi-wei, not further identified.

The article said: "We mean to use shock work to crush aside the usual ways of work, exert efforts to catch up with and surpass the advanced world levels, use indigenous and simple methods to outshine modern methods, use the mass line to replace that of exclusive dependence on experts, and use the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and arduous struggle to oppose the lazy bones' philosophy of asking everything from higher authorities and seeking things ostentatious and foreign."

Thousands Camping At U.K. Rockfest

FRESHWATER, England (CP) — Thousands of people are already camping out on the Isle of Wight waiting for what is expected to be the biggest feast of pop music in Europe this year.

Predictions are that 250,000 youngsters will attend the five-day, $1.25-million Isle of Wight festival beginning next Wednesday.

Canadian singers Joni Mitchell and Leonard Cohen are among the performers scheduled to appear at the festival.

Residents of the island, off the south coast of England, have fought a bitter battle against the affair for months with delaying tactics, threats and site sabotage.

However the county council after inspecting the site, near Freshwater on the western half of the island, gave their approval. Fiery Creations Ltd., the festival promoters, have built a tin and canvas city with double corrugated-iron fences nine feet high, between which 150 guard dogs will prowl.

SARDINE SYNDROME: Would Darwin Agree?

LONDON (Reuters) — Two British social biologists have put forward the theory that increased violence in the world has been caused by overcrowding, not by any inherent agressiveness in human nature.

The 20th century is exceptionally cruel and violent and becoming more so, the two scientists, Dr. W. M. S. Russell and his wife Claire, contend.

"If we could eliminate population stresses altogether, our societies could become as free, friendly and peaceful as those of wild monkeys, and infinitely more creative," they write in the August issue of The Ecologist, a new British monthly.

Their article, The Sardine Syndrome, draws a parallel between the behavior of monkeys and humans when subject to over-population.

Among monkeys living in the wild in Africa, quarrelling is rare and violence almost non-existent.

But in monkeys living under the stresses of an enclosure, "quarrelling is frequent and violence appreciable, sometimes leading to serious wounds and death," the Russells said.

Social advancement among monkeys confined in zoos is often attained "by brutal aggression and nothing else."

For thousands of years, there have been two schools of thought about human aggression and its expression in violent crime, riots and war, the Russells noted.

Some people maintain that aggressiveness is an inherent quality of human nature. Others have taken the view that it is a response to intolerable frustrations.

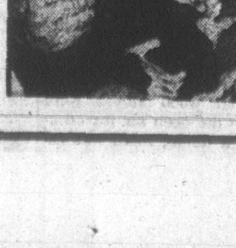
Russell is a lecturer at Reading University. His wife is a researcher into social behavior.



THE WEATHER

Weather will be sunny and warm Sunday.

The weather office at Victoria International Airport predicts an overnight low of 50 degrees and a high Sunday of 75 degrees.

Winds will be light over the city, and westerly 15 mph over the Strait of Juan de Fuca. See Page 26 for details.

U.S. Justice Dept. Backs Voting Age

WASHINGTON (AP) — The justice department, in its first substantive defence of a lower voting age, says denial of the vote to citizens aged 18 through 20 could be a violation of the equal-protection clause of the constitution.

The department, in a brief filed with a three-judge federal panel in the District of Columbia Friday, said Congress has the right to remedy a situation which many young Americans must fight for their country but cannot voice an opinion on its policies.

The brief was in reply to a suit filed by five, New York state residents who are challenging the lowered voting age, elimination of literacy tests and establishment of a uniform residency requirement for voting in presidential elections. All are part of the Voting Rights Act of 1970.

Both President Nixon and Attorney-General John Mitchell have expressed doubts about the constitutionality of lowering the voting age through a congressional act. Both favor the 18-year-old vote but say they prefer the change be through a constitutional amendment.

The brief filed Friday was signed by Assistant Attorney-General Jerris Leonard, head of the department's civil rights division. It drew on statements by Senators Edward M. Kennedy (Dem, Mass.) and Barry Goldwater (Rep. Ariz.).

Goldwater has said today's "youth is better informed and better equipped than any other generation" in regard to voting. The justice department drew on Kennedy for the slogan: "Old enough to fight, old enough to vote."

"It is apparent that Congress had a strong basis for its finding that denial of the right to vote to citizens between 18 and 21 is 'particularly unfair' . . . in view of the national defence responsibilities imposed upon such citizens," the brief said.

SPUTNIK LAUNCHED, THIRD IN FOUR DAYS

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Soviet Union launched today its third artificial earth satellite in four days to continue space research, Tass news agency reported.

The sputnik was named Cosmos 359. The two previous shots in the Cosmos series were launched Wednesday and Thursday.

Salt Spring Residents Offered Rezoning Facts

Full information will be offered Salt Spring Island residents before a public hearing is held on a proposed zoning bylaw.

This assurance was given this morning by Tony Roberts, planning director for the Capital Regional District.

The bylaw is being recommended to the regional board meeting this Wednesday by the district's planning committee.

Roberts said that assuming the board gives the bylaw initial readings Wednesday, copies and maps will be made available in advance of the public hearing.

He told the planning committee last Wednesday that the proposed bylaw contains changes in an earlier one, which was withdrawn, to overcome objections from businessmen finding their premises becoming a non-conforming use.

Thursday, Phil and Yvette Valcourt, owners of a building supplies and hardware business, said they are anxious to see the proposed zoning.

Marcus Holmes, Salt Spring's director on the regional board, said residents will be able to see the new zoning map and the bylaw before the public hearing.

He said that "nowhere in B.C. has any proposed zoning bylaw had so much public discussion."

. . . POSTAL

A spokesman for the 27,000-member Council of Postal Unions said Mr. O'Connor had tried to select a secluded spot where negotiators would not "be troubled with reporters."

Postal workers have staged rotating strikes since May to support their demands and the government has retaliated by closing down regional offices in some areas affected.

The cabinet is expected to discuss the situation again at a meeting next Wednesday.

Friday, striking postal workers were joined by 1,043 others sent home by the government from 56 offices closed in retaliation.

Quebec City and Montreal workers stayed out, along with those at main offices in Ottawa and Winnipeg. A total of 38 offices remained suspended in Quebec, 22 in the Ottawa district and 13 in the London, Ont., area.

Local Expert To Speak In Winnipeg

Nitrogen fertilizer and its effect on the balsam woolly aphid will be the subject of an address by Victoria forest research scientist J. Roderick Carrow on Wednesday in Winnipeg at the annual meeting of the Entomological Society of Canada.

Carrow, a specialist in forest entomology with the Canadian Forestry Service research laboratory will discuss his work with the use of fertilizers to reduce insect populations.

Also attending the meeting from Victoria are A. F. Hedlin, a specialist in cone and seed insects, and Ross D. Macdonald, program manager in charge of forest protection research. Both are with the forestry laboratory.

Saturna Wants Plebiscite

Saturna Island residents will petition Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell for a plebiscite on whether the island will stay in the Capital Regional District.

Petition organizer James Money said island residents have already been petitioned and are 98 per cent in favor of a plebiscite.

The delay in presenting the petition is due to the postal strike.

Saturna Island was incorporated into the Capital Regional District by the provincial department of municipal affairs in October, 1967, along with outer Gulf Islands and Salt Spring Island.

Property-owners complained that no vote was taken to ask if they wanted to be in the regional district. The province is divided into 28 regional districts, none of which were established by a vote.

expressed disappointment Friday at Premier Bennett's request to the union bargaining committee to reconsider its decision to recommend rejection of the settlement proposed by Nemetz.

'WRONG ATTITUDE'

"It is the feeling of our leadership that it was a wrong attitude for the premier to stand four-square on the side of the employers in view of the deep dissatisfaction over this report," he said in an interview.

There was a newspaper report Moore resigned as negotiating committee spokesman after the committee failed to support his stand that the proposed settlement be accepted.

Commenting today, MacKenzie said the decisions of the negotiating committee are made following voting and how people voted was just the committee's business and the members they represent. He would never divulge how an individual voted, he said.

He also said he had no knowledge of one local having already voted against the Nemetz proposal, as one news report said.

But, he said, it is essential voting be started immediately in the more remote logging areas because of the time factor.

The ballot boxes can be sealed and the count held up if the negotiating committee deems it advisable, he added.

MacKenzie said the union faces a three-month deadline on current negotiations and a membership consensus must be available before that time is up.

Mr. Justice Nemetz recommended an increase of 30 cents an hour in each year of a two-year contract, plus 15 cents an hour in each year for tradesmen. Base rate is $3.12 an hour.

Meanwhile, a joint study to be undertaken by the IWA and MacMillan-Bloedel of ways to prevent strikes has been postponed by the failure to reach a settlement in the industry.

A MacMillan-Bloedel spokesman said the first meeting would probably take place two or three weeks after any settlement.

FIRST PROVINCIAL MEETING

'Youth Helping Youth' Theme of Conference

By ROBIN BURGESS

The theme was "youth helping youth."

And ideas came fast and furious from the circle of young people sitting on the floor in the YMCA Lounge.

No conclusions emerged, but "we tossed a lot of information around," said chairman Don Bridgman of Victoria Cool-Aid.

"One thing I hope will become a reality is the visiting of staff persons from one Cool-Aid to another to exchange ideas," said Bridgman.

About 45 youth workers arrived here Friday from Prince George, Nanaimo, Vancouver, Crofton, Kelowna and Victoria to attend the day-long first provincial conference of youth-helping-youth organizations.

* * *

Two representatives from the federal government sat in as observers.

Kelly Ip of the secretary of state department questioned the young workers on the effectiveness of the national hostel program begun this summer.

Ip told the delegates that the cabinet is studying proposals drawn up by the task force on national youth hostels. He hinted the cabinet may decide to set up a ministry to handle the affairs of Canadian youth.

Also there was Byron Rogers from the Le Dain commission.

During the morning's general discussion it became clear that the youth-oriented organizations vary considerably in strucutre and approach from city to city.

In Prince George, said organizer Ed Ladeur, Cool-Aid began in April as an "underground" drop-in service for transients run from a private home.

* * *

The organization became public about six weeks ago and was able to obtain a school dormitory with 33 beds to use as a hostel.

Hostel organizers anticipated about 10 people per night but instead are coping with 35 or more, Ladeur said.

Many young people head north to Prince George with the idea of buying land and carving out a home in the wilderness.

"Some of the kids have no idea what the Canadian wilderness is really like. They arrive with just a hoe or axe."

Cool-Aid workers provide the young homesteaders with bed and board for three days and advice on surviving in the wilds.

Nanaimo Cool-aid is currently housing transients in a school auditorium but have to vacate at the end of August "just when all the kids are coming back from Long Beach," said Dave Milligan.

The local government is following a policy of hands off, said Milligan, but Cool-aid's main problem is dealing with the antagonism of Nanaimo residents.

"It's an uphill battle because people in Nanaimo seem to think the centre is a drug-oriented place."

Milligan mentioned in a seminar group discussion afterwards that the Nanaimo Cool-aid has posted a prominent sign banning all drugs from the hostel.

Other youth centre workers agreed that the worry that someone will be "busted" for drugs while staying at their hostel is a constant problem.

Sociologist David Adair of the Inner City project in Vancouver described the organization's giant feed-in project for transients.

* * *

Inner City provides food for 350 young travellers a day. The social welfare department finances the feed-in on a per-capita basis.

Adair said the feed-ins take place in a school ground, so Inner-City will be forced either to stop or find a new place in September.

In smaller discussion groups in the afternoon topics ranged from Cool-aid philosophy to hitchhiking hints.

A Vancouver girl accused the Vancouver and Victoria Cool-Aids of going to opposite extremes in policy and approach. The Vancouver Cool-Aid tries so hard to outrage members of the establishment that it actually alienates the young people it is trying to help, she said.

Victoria Cool-aid, on the other hand, has become so respectable many young people are beginning to distrust it.

A suggestion was made in one group that the youth organizations jointly prepare an information pamphlet for transients listing hostels in B.C. and giving hitch-hikers some tips on how to survive on the road.

Cool-Aid's Cash Stolen

A Cool-Aid cash box containing $60 was stolen from St. John's Church hall Friday night.

The theft occurred while Cool-Aid workers were attending a provincial youth conference at the YW-YMCA.

The thief entered the hall at Quadra and Balmoral through staff member Dale Brand's basement window, removed the box, which held the organization's August earnings, and crashed out through a padlocked door.

Brand said $100 was stolen last week from one of the persons staying at the hostel.

"Things like this never used to happen. The most we ever had taken before was articles of clothing, and that didn't happen often," said Brand.

He discovered the theft at 9:45 p.m. when opening the hall for overnight guests.

Agnew Meets With Nixon Before Leaving for Asia

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew was to confer with President Nixon and top White House officials today before setting out on his second trip to Asia this year.

The vice-president, who visited 11 Asian and Pacific countries during a three-week trip in January, will be gone a little more than a week this time. South Korea, Formosa, Thailand and South Vietnam are on his itinerary.

His mission is to talk with and listen to Asian leaders on the Nixon Doctrine, under which the United States will provide assistance only to those Asian countries which help themselves.

Agnew, who had been in the Los Angeles area since a political speech Thursday night, planned to come by helicopter to the Western White House for meetings with Nixon, national security aide Henry Kissinger and other officials before his scheduled noon departure.

After a refuelling stop in Hawaii, Agnew planned to continue west across the international dateline before an overnight stop at Guam.

Monday, he flies to Seoul, South Korea, for two days of talks with officials concerned about United States plans to withdraw 20,000 of the 63,000 U.S. troops there.

The rest of Agnew's schedule has not been completed, but he is likely to spend at least one night in Formosa, two nights in Thailand and one in South Vietnam. There had been speculation about a possible brief stop in Cambodia, but officials now say none is planned.

The trip is designed to provide the president with a report on the situation in Southeast Asia a year after he visited the area and unveiled his doctrine.

fiscal year that ends next June 30.

In Saigon, sources said President Nixon has placed no geographical restrictions on United States strikes inside Cambodia against North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops and supplies.

The sources said that although some historical shrines such as the Angkor Wat temple ruins northwest of Phnom Penh may be off limits to U.S. bombers, there are no geographical limitations if military officials believe Communists buildups might pose a threat to southern allied forces in South Vietnam.

This was the first time such a disclosure had been made, but the sources said it did not represent any change in policy.

The disclosure came in response to queries whether American planes had supported Cambodian forces during the heavy fighting Thursday and Friday within six to nine miles of Phnom Penh.

One source said no U.S. warplanes had supported the battle, but added that they would not be forbidden if military officials thought that a potential threat was posed to southern allied forces in South Vietnam.

Informants said most American air strikes in Cambodia are centred east of the Mekong River in the north-eastern part of the country against North Vietnamese supply routes running southward from Laos.

VC SLIPS AWAY

Meanwhile, Cambodian forces began clearing operations northeast of the capital. Reports from Phnom Penh said three Viet Cong battalions — perhaps up to 1,000 troops or more — apparently had slipped away.

Maj. Am Rong, the Cambodian military spokesman, said several air strikes were carried out against suspected Viet Cong base areas near Prek Tameak, nine miles northeast of Phnom Penh. He did not specify whose airplanes conducted the latest raids.

"There are no boundaries for American bombers in Cambodia," said one source. "If we felt interdiction of enemy forces would secure our positions in the event enemy forces became a potential threat to Vietnam, we would hit where we had to.

"Whenever possible, Cambodian and South Vietnamese planes are hitting as many targets as they can reach and handle. When they need help, the U.S. Air Force goes."

The latest disclosure confirmed the U.S. policy of providing direct air support to Cambodian ground forces, although the U.S. command prefers to describe the raids as "interdiction" missions primarily aimed at cutting off North Vietnamese troops and supplies that threaten southern allied forces in South Vietnam.

Ground action continued in a lull in South Vietnam with only small clashes reported.

North Vietnamese and Pathet Lao activity has decreased in Laos because of the heavy monsoon rains.

South Vietnamese headquarters in Saigon announced the closeout of a 10-day operation inside Cambodia and claimed 47 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong soldiers killed and 41 rifles captured. South Vietnamese losses were reported as 15 killed and 78 wounded.

The operation was just inside the Cambodian border and was aimed at blocking new North Vietnamese infiltration routes.

A spokesman said that due to termination of the operation South Vietnamese strength in Cambodia has decreased to 16,000 troops from 17,500. At the height of operations in May and June, the South Vietnamese had 49,000 troops operating inside Cambodia.

DANCING IN SQUARE

Square dancers from the Vancouver Island Western Square Dance Association will swing their partners in Centennial Square Monday at 7 p.m.

The dancers are sponsored by the Victoria Fair as an entertainment for theatregoers strolling in the square before the Duchess of Malfi production begins at the McPherson Theatre at 8 p.m.

Homeless Concern Sudbury

By BUD JORGENSEN

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — The plight of the 350 homeless was of wide concern today in this area of Northern Ontario, where a freak storm killed four persons and injured at least 150 Thursday.

Seven persons were in serious condition in hospitals today.

The tornado-like storm swept through the district in half an hour, destroying 66 houses in Sudbury and nearby Lively and damaged some 80 others.

Many of the homeless were being kept in schools, churches and private homes but the Red Cross said others were still living in the remains of their houses.

"Some of them are living in the basements of homes that were flattened," said Mayor Leonard Turner of Lively, a town of 3,000.

Insurance adjusters began Friday to assess damages. Some cash advances were distributed on the spot.

A special team of insurance adjusters was sent to the disaster area, said W. W. Owen, general manager of the Insurance Bureau of Canada in Toronto.

COOK OUTDOORS

At Field, which has about 600 residents, with another 325 in the surrounding area, residents were without electricity Friday. Communal wood stoves were set up in the open air for cooking and a dining room was established under a tent in a schoolyard.

International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. which employs more than 30,000 in the area, announced Friday that production was back to normal. A spokesman said facilities were "substantially unaffected" by the storm, although electrical failures had cost a day's production.

Estimates of damage Friday included $1 million in lost Ontario Hydro equipment, $100,000 in equipment lost by Sudbury Hydro, $220,000 to schools and $200,000 to Bell Canada equipment. Most services were fully restored by noon Friday.

The area was toured Friday by Robert Andras, federal minister without portfolio responsible for housing, and Attorney-General Arthur Wishart of Ontario. Both promised aid.

54 ROUNDS IN 11 SECONDS

FBI Confirms There Was No Sniper Fire on Kent Campus

KENT, Ohio (WP) — The presidential commission on campus unrest confirmed Friday that the FBI found no evidence of sniper fire at Kent State University May 1 when four students were killed and nine others wounded by National Guardsmen.

It was also determined, said George Warren of the commission staff, that 29 Guardsmen fired a minimum of 54 rounds in 11 seconds, that some of them admitted firing directly into the crowd of students and that others said they fired into the air or into the ground. One slug, Warren said, was recovered from an apartment house a mile away.

At least two rounds in the volley came from a .45-calibre pistol; the rest came from .30-calibre M-1 rifles, which have a range of 3,400 yards.

Warren said that rumors of a sniper may have involved a photographer who was on top of a building overlooking the scene. He was using a camera mounted on what appeared to be a rifle stock. He was spotted by a helicopter.

A student at the scene, James C. Woodring Jr., said the firing seemed to have been ordered by "a lieutenant or some kind of officer with a pistol." This officer, Woodring said, raised the pistol over his head, brought his arm down and fired a round into the ground. "Fraction of a second" later, Woodring said, the troops opened fire.

Fire Order

His was the first account thus far of an apparent order to fire. National Guard officials have maintained that no such order was ever given and that the firing was a spontaneous act of self defense by the troops after a shot — presumably a sniper round — rang out. Woodring's testimony could explain the mysterious shot that preceded the volley.

Woodring said that at the time they fired, the Guardsmen were being hit by many rocks — a rock "crescendo." "I saw one brick go in," he said, "and a fairly sizable piece of wood."

The commission's investigator, Warren, was unable to give a coherent account of the provocations before the firing, or to assess the danger in which the guardsmen may have found themselves.

He said 150 pounds of rocks, including one weighing 7½ pounds, were collected near the scene by the FBI and by the Guard two days after the shootings. Some Guardsmen, who fired their weapons, had been struck by rocks of undetermined size, Warren said, but he didn't know how many, and he didn't know at what time during the day they had been hit.

His testimony came at the commission's final hearing. It has conducted other hearings in Washington, Los Angeles and Jackson, Miss., and will hold a working seminar Saturday in Washington D.C. for state, city and campus security officials.

The commission's task is to complete a report by next month for President Nixon on campus unrest and ways to deal with it. The commission chairman is William Scranton, former governor of Pensylvania.

Major Conflicts

In the three days of hearings here major conflicts in testimony were encountered. One of them centred on the decision to put the Guard on the Kent State campus. Another involved the decision to break up a campus rally on May 4, a decision that led ultimately to the shootings.

The university president, Robert White, has said that university officials did not request troops on campus and that the decision to prohibit rallies on May 4 was made by the Guard. One of his vice presidents, Robert E. Matson, supported White's version of these events in testimony Friday.

The Guard came into Kent on the night of May 2 at the request of Mayor Leroy Satrom. The troops arrived after the university's ROTC building had been set afire by student demonstrators. Shortly thereafter, Matson said, the troop commander, Brig. Gen. Robert Canterbury, called the university and asked if troops were needed on campus.

"I said the situation was grave," Matson testified. ". . . but I didn't feel it was inviting them in."

The Guard maintains that a troop request was made by the university and that the troops would have been withdrawn whenever White requested it. At least on university official, Chester Williams, director of campus security, has given testimony tending to support the Guard's version. He said that when Canterbury asked if troops were desired at the university, the reply was, "yes."

Rally Planned

Gen. Canterbury told the commission Thursday that at a meeting with White and other officials on the morning of May 4, he was informed that a rally was being planned for the noon hour. Canterbury said: "in response to my question: 'Should this be permitted?', the answer (of president White) was: 'No. It would be highly dangerous'."

White's response Friday was that the Guard made the rules and that if there had not been a Guard "edict" against rallies "my response to whether the students should be allowed to assemble would have been affirmative."

He said he regretted the "discrepancy" between his testimony and Canterbury's. It could become a serious campus issue for students here who are already critical of White and of his handling of the May disorders.

Other discrepancies were encountered by the commission in the course of its hearings. Some students, including Robert Stamps, who was wounded on May 4, said they were optimistic about the possibilities for peace on campus this fall. Others, such as Michael Alweitz of the Young Socialist Alliance, predicted accelerating unrest.
1-14-1 no

No Consistency

There was no consistency either in the eye-witness discriptions of what happened here last May. Some students and faculty members told of a "carnival" atmosphere on campus and of minor provacation toward the Guard. General Canterbury, on the other hand, insisted that the lives of the troops were in danger and some students tended to support his assessment.

No witness, however, Canterbury included, approved of the shooting.

A final area of disagreement concerned the role of "outside agitators" in the May events. The local police chief, Roy Thompson, and university president White, have insisted that "outsiders" provoked much of the trouble. Others laughed at that notion and insisted that the May demonstrations were expressive of the attitudes of the students here.

Drugs Found At Tate House After Murders

By LINDA DEUTSCH

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A coroner said Friday that Sharon Tate was hanged as well as stabbed, and a detective said marijuana, hashish, cocaine and a hallucinogenic drug were found at the mansion where she and four others were slain.

Coroner Thomas T. Noguchi, testifying for the prosecution at the Tate murder trial, said there were rope burns on the pregnant actress's neck and left cheek, as well as 16 stab wounds.

"It is my opinion," he said, "that the rope contacted quite firmly.

"It is quite consistent that the decedent was hanged."

Police found a white nylon rope around the neck of the blonde screen beauty, looped over a living room ceiling beam with the other end round the neck of victim Jay Sebring.

Noguchi said there were wounds in Miss Tate's chest, abdomen, arms, back and thigh, and, "in my opinion, five stab wounds in themselves would have caused a fatal outcome."

Defence objections cut off questioning on the subject of hanging just before the trial recessed until Monday.

Noguchi testified that Miss Tate was eight months pregnant.

Earlier Sgt. Michael McGann, describing what police found at the scene, said the killers apparently did not ransack the mansion and left behind various narcotics and about $100 belonging to the victims.

His testimony followed a witness-stand appearance by Charles M. Manson, leader of a hippie-type clan, who is on trial in the killings along with three women followers.

Manson complained about his treatment in jail. Judge Charles Older took a personal look at the facilities and said he will decide Monday on whether to take action.

McGann said the Tate estate was searched thoroughly after the killings Aug. 9, 1969.

He said the search disclosed 75 grams of marijuana in a living room cabinet, 30 grams of hashish, a potent variety of marijuana, in a nightstand in a bedroom, 10 capsules of the hallucinogenic drug MDA, and — in the car of victim Jay Sebring — a gram of cocaine, 2.9 grams of loose marijuana, 3.4 grams of marijuana in a film can, and a two-inch butt of smoked marijuana on the floor.

BAKHTIAR
. . . fatal hunt

Shah's Foe Killed By Iranian

BEIRUT (AP) — Iranian Gen. Teimour Bakhtiar, a bitter opponent of the Shah of Iran, has been assassinated while on a hunting trip in Iraq, the Lebanese newspaper Al Nahar reported today.

The paper did not name the assassin, but alleged that three Iranian students who hijacked an Iranian airliner to Baghdad last June turned out to be Iranian intelligence agents who "masterminded" the assassination.

Al Nahar said travellers from Baghdad gave this account:

Bakhtiar, an Iranian aide, an Iraqi guard and the three students were on a hunting trip Aug. 9 in the Iraqi province of Dyala, close to the Iranian border.

The aide shot Bakhtiar and then tried to flee to the Iranian border with the students. Iraqi border guards arrested them.

Bakhtiar, a cousin of former Queen Soraya and chief of security in Iran in the late 1950s, died in a Baghdad hospital two days later.

Panther Denies Murder Order

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Bobby G. Seale, chairman of the Black Panther party, has denied that he ordered the slaying of Alex Rackley, a Panther who authorities say was killed as a police informer.

"I never ordered anybody to be killed," Seale said Friday at the trial of fellow Panther Lonnie McLucas. "The party does not ever order anybody to be killed."

Before his testimony, Seale had a brief reunion with his fellow co-founder of the Panthers, Huey Newton, free on bail from California after his 1968 conviction was overturned.

Seale, 33, is among seven Panthers awaiting trial in the slaying of Rackley 15 months ago. He testified against the advice of his lawyers.

George Sams Jr. of Detroit, a 23-year-old Panther who pleaded guilty to second-degree murder in Rackley's shooting death, had testified that Seale told him to "do away with" Rackley.

McLucas has testified that he fired a shot into Rackley's body on orders from Sams, whom he said he feared. Another Panther, Warren Kimbro, 35, has admitted firing the first shot into Rackley and has testified for the prosecution after pleading guilty to second-degree murder.

DOZENS DEAD, INJURED

Devastating Dorothy Past

FORT DE FRANCE, Martinique (CP) — Hurricane Dorothy swept westward across the Caribbean today, aiming a wet, glancing blow at the Dominican Republic after leaving behind a trail of devastation, dozens of dead and injured and hundreds of homeless on this French island.

Winds packing fierce gusts and accompanied by torrential rain lashed Martinique Friday, and first official reports put the death toll at 24. Unofficial reports said 38 died.

Rivers of mud carrying along cars, tree trunks, furniture and the bodies of drowned animals, swept through the centre of this capital.

The weather office here reported that 14 inches of rain had fallen in 24 hours. The government declared the island a disaster area and put rescue and relief operations into force.

As Dorothy moved across the Caribbean, residents of the south coast of Puerto Rico, northwest of Martinique, were told Friday night to prepare for rough seas and some flooding. However, the big blow was not expected to pose a serious threat to Puerto Rico.

Moving west-northwest at 15 miles an hour, Dorothy was expected to hold her course. At 6 a.m. EDT, the season's fourth tropical storm was centred 180 miles south of the eastern Dominican Republic.

Sustained winds were reported well below hurricane force of 74 miles an hour on Martinique, but the storm's cascade of rain caused heavy damage to dwellings in the valleys and on slopes on mountains that rise to a 4,000-foot height.

Safety Regulations For Cars Unveiled

OTTAWA (CP) — The transport department Friday announced a sweeping series of proposed motor vehicle safety regulations, including a provision aimed at limiting exhaust emissions given out by gasoline-powered vehicles.

Departmental spokesmen say the proposals are almost identical to those now in effect in the United States and would hit mainly some European and Japanaese cars coming into Canada.

Interested parties will be allowed about a month to make representations to the department before the proposals are drafted into formal regulations to take effect at the end of this year.

A bill permitting the government to set standards for auto safety was passed by the Commons this spring. It set out a maximum fine of $200,000 for any manufacturer or importer breaking the regulations.

A spokesman said the transport department also is working on safety regulations for snow vehicles and farm tractors, not included in the current regulations. He said the snow vehicle proposals should be ready in six weeks.

The proposal governing hydrocarbon and carbon monoxide auto exhaust emissions is a highly technical one.

It would limit the amount of hydrocarbon given off by a light-duty vehicle to 2.2 grams per vehicle mile and to 275 parts per million by volume for a heavy vehicle.

Carbon monoxide emission would be limited to 23 grams per vehicle mile and 1.5 per cent by volume for a heavy vehicle.

The crankcases of gasoline-powered vehciles would have to be built in such a way, under the proposals, that no crankcase emissions could escape.

The exhaust proposal also carries detailed instructions for testing of cars by manufacturers.

Spokesmen say the department is also actively studying possible measures to limit noise from motor vehicles. Such a regulation is already in effect in California and the idea is being studied in Britian.

Other proposals include:

- Control of such things as sun visors, ignition, lights, turn signal and windshield wipers which must be within "operation reach" of a driver restrained by an approved seat belt.
- Choke, lights, windshield defogging and de-icing buttons must be identified by words or signs.
- In cars with automatic transmissions, control between forward and reverse must be through neutral.
- A gear shift mounted on a steering column must move clockwise from neutral to any forward drive position and a "park" position must be at the end adjacent to the reverse drive position.
- Every vehicle must be equipped with a windshield defogging and de-icing system and a windshield wiper system with at least two speeds, maintained irrespective of engine speed or load.
- Braking systems must be such that if failure of a pressure component or leak of hydraulic fluid occurs, the remaining portion of the brake system will allow a vehicle to stop from a speed of 60 miles an hour in not more than 646 feet without excessive swerving.
- An emergency brake system must be mounted on the instrument panel illuminating in view of the driver in case of a brake failure.

shield wipers, horn rings and wheel devices to protect drivers from glare.

If the regulations take effect at the end of the year, they would apply to all vehicles built in 1971 and after.

Cheaper Not to Pollute

AS THE PUBLIC ON THIS CONTINENT and elsewhere today begins to get a better grasp of the magnitude of the anti-pollution program that will be necessary if man is to solve the problem of the ultimate poisoning of his environment, the dimensions of the cost of correcting present pollution and preventing future additions also become more evident.

United States government officials have talked in terms of $5-billion clean-up campaigns to counteract certain types of pollution. There are many serious sources, ranging through industrial smoke, industrial liquid and solid wastes, community sewage, automobile exhausts, community garbage, litter and discarded machinery, nuclear waste and military dumping. These are only a few of the major causes of concern for the future of mankind.

Some of them, such as litter, are due to carelessness and, given an awakened public consciousness, should be relatively easy to remedy. Sewage and industrial pollution promise to exact more complicated cures. But few if any causes are beyond the ability of modern techniques to eliminate. The wall against which many community governments and industrial concerns soon find themselves is the matter of cost.

There is some perturbation today about the price which will have to be paid in the future in order to keep pollution to a bearable minimum. The relentless expansion of industry and pollution-producing activities presages higher unit costs for many of the products which we view as indispensable. The inherent mistake which is being made lies in considering these costs as extra, as additional to what the "normal" cost level should be on the basis of what we have been paying. This approach is erroneous, for the existing lower price is a false one.

The fact is that a pulp mill, say, which has been operating and selling its product while it pollutes miles of river downstream has been ignoring an integral part of its proper costs. Included in the price of the product, along with wages, cost of machinery, rents, leases and other usual items should have been the item of pollution — an estimate of the losses suffered as a result of dumping harmful wastes into a stream, filling the air with harmful gases, or creating a noise or smell nuisance. Those "costs" to the environment should have been totaled in with the other more obvious costs of doing business. To do so now would be merely to put the plant's accounting on a realistic basis.

We shall see that in many instances we have been living on a false level of cost, that many products should be priced higher than we have been accustomed to do. But eliminating the losses to the environment may, by the same token, prove to be much cheaper than suffering them. The cost of anti-pollution devices on a chimney, for instance, may be less than the cost of fouling a neighborhood's air, dirtying houses and clothes, peeling paint and eroding metals. The difference will be that the plant has not been counting in the latter costs until now.

There could be a net gain to the community or the province as a whole. Paper or copper ingots or shoes might cost more, but fishing would be restored, community health would be better, housing surfaces might last longer, and so on.

When expert cost accountants take a realistic look at it, pollution as we have developed it may prove to be one of the most expensive luxuries we tolerate. How long can we afford to claim we are making profits when we ignore a significant part of the cost of operating?

Don't Burn All the Coal

ONCE THE WHITE ELEPHANT of the energy market, coal is looming up as a lucrative source of Canadian export dollars for the next few decades. Existing Japanese contracts call for 204 million short tons of coal worth $2.6 billions in the next 10 to 15 years. By 1975 Canadian mines will probably be delivering upwards of 13.8 million tons of coal to Japan each year. And even now Japanese customers are asking that the annual volume be boosted to 30 million tons five years hence.

Other major coal sales may be in the offing to Eastern Canadian steel companies, and perhaps Ontario Hydro, providing the price is competitive. The Steel Company of Canada has already taken delivery of an experimental load of Western coal. United States and European Common Market representatives have also expressed interest. The ECM envisions shipping coal around Cape Horn to European markets using giant ships.

With Canadian coal reserves estimated at 119 billion tons, the new bonanza—based on Western coal's excellent coking properties and low suphur content—may be hailed as one resource that Canadians can afford to sell off. Hesitant conservationists will be warned that steel makers have already perfected processes of refining that eliminate coal, and if nuclear power sources eventually prove cheaper and cleaner, fossil fuels, such as coal, may become obsolete in a few years time. Failure to sell now may leave Canadians holding the bag.

But obviously it is not that simple. While fossil fuels will eventually be replaced, science is just beginning to tap many other industrial and chemical uses for coal. After fractionating, coal distillates are refined and re-distilled to give benzine, toluole, xylolles—chemicals which are used in refined forms to produce dyestuffs, pharmaceuticals, explosives, plastics and a vast range of other materials. That coal will become a major industrial substance, rather than a fuel, is scientifically undisputed.

While a good argument can be made for selling off a portion of Canada's large coal reserves, the chamber-of-commerce approach that would sell it all as quickly as possible is short-sighted. In the near future Western Canada's coal could become the basis of important domestic secondary industries. Then we might regret that we had sold off our basic asset to other nations more ready to devise profitable uses for it.

Swimming Faster No Solution

NEWS THAT MORE THAN 100,000 coho salmon are struggling for ascendency over Lake Ontario's parasitic lampreys must have a lot of would-be eastern salmon fisherman agog. Funny, we would have thought there was more to worry about from the lake's notorious pollution. But according to an Ontario lands and forest official, when the salmon come to polluted waters, such as off Toronto or Hamilton, they just swim through them faster.

It sounds as if the Ontario man was briefed by some members of the British Columbia government. They sometimes use that kind of logic. Oddly enough, B.C. fishermen claim the salmon population is declining because of pollution. Any salmon should be able to take care of a lamprey but it remains to be seen if man can take care of pollution, which in turn, appears to be killing lampreys, salmon and men.

Source of Pride

During the building of the Rose-Blanshard housing project, we heard dire prophecies that the whole area would soon develop into a slum.

It is some time now since Blanshard Court was completed. Every unit is occupied, and judging from outside appearances, the tenants are taking pride in their new homes. The grounds have been landscaped and no rubbish lies around. On several occasions when we have passed by, we have been gratified to note an almost complete absence of litter, in fact the area is much cleaner than certain other parts of the city.

We of Outdoors Unlittered congratulate the management and tenants of Blanshard Court for making it something Victoria can be proud of, and we hope will remain proud of. — Kathleen E. Dickieson, 1759 Midgard.

First Concern

Administrators, both in the public and private hospitals, are put there to look after the welfare of the patients. This is their first concern. When they are hampered and their hands tied by labor relations boards and labor unions, where does the patient come in? This is a question the patients, their relatives and friends, and the public generally, would do well to look into.—Concerned.

COMING FACE TO FACE WITH IT

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

The Choice: Pollution, or Paying to Eradicate It

Hutchison

BROODING beside the once-clean Pacific Ocean not long ago, Pierre Trudeau noted that Canada, unique in so many other ways, had a unique chance to avoid the mistakes of other nations where pollution has almost reached, or passed, the point of no return. As if to dramatize this obvious truism a news dispatch from Tokyo, that same day, reported a wonderful invention — a cheap oxygen tank which all citizens can carry on their backs and comfortably endure Japan's poisonous economic miracle. The Japanese are a very clever people. They will wear their oxygen masks with style and panache. But still more impressive was President Nixon's sudden discovery that the United States faced an "ecological disaster" and must cleanse itself or go, quite literally, down the drain.

No one who has studied human government will be surprised when it begins to act in a desperate crisis with only a moment to spare or, more frequently, too late. Government has seldom acted otherwise, anywhere. What surprises the student of history today is that the ecological disaster may have been discovered in time to forestall it, though, like Wellington's Waterloo, it will be "A damned close-run thing."

But we need not despair. A species which hardly knew the meaning of the word "ecology" five years ago and now recites it as a daily chant perhaps has the intelligence to survive its own follies after all.

Flimsy Environment

We can be sure, however, that this new knowledge of our flimsy, tottering environment is only skin-deep, so far. Despite all the solemn pieties uttered about it, and all the laws designed to save it, the cost of actually saving it has not yet been reckoned, much less paid.

In practical politics, of course, that cost must be presented to the voters gradually, in small instalments, with the customary sugar on the the pill. Thus Mr. Trudeau remarks vaguely that in some cases Canadians may have to put their long-term environment ahead of their immediate economic growth which, up to now, has been the supreme priority, almost a new religion.

Mr. Nixon's Council on Environmental Quality goes a little farther by remarking, in sleek official idiom, that increased taxes alone will not be sufficient to finance the great clean-up and that "people may ultimately have to forego some conveniences and pay higher prices for some goods and services" when the manufacturers hand on their anti-pollution costs to the consumer.

In fact, the total cost, if we are to do this job, and the other necessary social jobs, will be so high that no sensible man can ever expect lower taxes (except temporary cuts at election times) or lower prices.

If these things are clear enough, I find it difficult to understand another statement in Mr. Nixon's report. It rejects the theory that economic growth must stop if pollution is to be cured, as if anyone were suggesting that economic growth should, or could, stop. But while it will doubtless continue, at least until the resources of the planet are finally exhausted, a few centuries hence, or sooner, yet a hard physical and mathematical fact remains. It is that virtually all growth involves pollution.

Production Pollutes

As the distinguished economic writer, Edwin Dale, says in a recent article, nothing of use to man (except foodstuffs, if no pesticides are used) can be produced without, in some degree, polluting the environment. Even if he does not poison the water he must poison the air with smoke of his factories. Even if he manages, for instance, to control the automobile, that most successful poisoner since the Borgias, he will replace its fumes with those of the jet plane.

Or even if, unimaginable as it seems now, the Western world somehow cleanses itself, the economic growth of the presently backward nations will undo all this progress, as Japan, the pioneer of progress in Asia, has so vividly demonstrated. Pollution, like peace, is indivisible since we all breathe the same atmosphere.

Grim Equation

Hence Mr. Dale's grim, unanswerable equation: World-wide growth equals pollution; also depletion of resources. Still, Mr. Trudeau is right in saying that Canada has the chance to escape the worst consequences if it acts soon enough, and is willing to pay the price, which includes, among other things, a drastic revision of the Economic Council's neat blueprints and the government's fiscal charts.

These long-term assumptions already are outdated by the discovery of something far more important to humanity at large and by a special discovery in Canada — namely, that a depleted neighbor will shortly be seeking all the raw material of growth he can find here for his own use at home, regardless of our convenience.

This prospect, and others, must haunt Mr. Trudeau because they cut straight across our old notions of inevitable, automatic progress, our obsolete political slogans, our familiar cliches and his plans for a Just Society. Just it may be, but poisonous as we are going now; or, if not poisonous, much more costly than we have yet begun to imagine.

A WATCH-AND-WAIT ATTITUDE

By JAMES RESTON

Washington Approves of the Moscow-Bonn Pact, But—

Reston

THE reaction in Washington to the Soviet-West German non-aggression treaty is very calm. The old fears of another Rapallo at the expense of the West have scarcely been mentioned. There is no excitement, no exaggerated claims or anxieties, but rather a mature tendency to watch and wait before reaching any thumping historic conclusions.

Twenty-five years after the Second World War, the United States now seems confident enough of the stability of Western Europe and the Soviet Union appears sure enough of its control of Eastern Europe to experiment with closer economic and social contacts between the two competing systems.

Nobody is saying the cold war is over, but merely that it may be passing into a new transitional stage in which the political competition will remain on both sides of the Elbe but a larger measure of economic co-operation may be possible.

The best-informed diplomats here tend to explain the Brandt-Kosygin treaty primarily in economic terms. They are aware that Moscow now regards China as the greatest menace to its security and may therefore prefer to reduce tensions on its European and Middle Eastern flanks, but they are inclined to think that the unsatisfactory economic situation in the U.S.S.R. and in most of Eastern Europe explains the new pact with West Germany.

Reject and Resent

The Soviets, of course, reject and resent any suggestion that they ever make arrangements with foreign countries because of any flaw in their system, economic or otherwise, but the spectacular productivity of the computerized industries of the West has not been overlooked in any of the Communist capitals, and they are apparently willing to take limited risks in order to increase their trade and their information in the West.

It is not only that they are well behind the West in computer hardware, but they are falling back even more in the techniques of producing the computer software, which is becoming increasingly important.

Ironically, it was the fear of the free flow of Western ideas that led primarily to the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia, yet Moscow is eager to learn all it can about the new technology of the West which has developed out of the freedom and competition in the Western states.

Much will depend now on political developments within Germany. Chancellor Brandt has a very fragile majority in the West German Bundestag and it remains to be seen what the popular reaction will be to his mission to Moscow. Also, the closer he comes to the Soviets, the more anxiety he is likely to create within Communist East Germany, and this question will come to the fore in the forthcoming negotiations on the position of Berlin.

By itself, the Moscow treaty is little more than a historical recognition of the present power realities in Europe. It is what follows that counts in the minds of officials in Washington. Nobody is likely to object here to an increase of West German trade with U.S.S.R. and Eastern Europe, but if this extends to exchanges of information on the most sophisticated computer technology, this could put a strain on Washington's relations with Bonn.

Accordingly, officials here are eager to talk with Brandt, President Pompidou of France and Prime Minister Heath of Great Britain over the mood and substance of the Moscow talks. Brandt has already proposed a meeting of the Western leaders for this purpose and it is expected to take place fairly soon.

It has always been recognized here that the Western nations have tended to unite whenever they have felt a common fear of the Soviet Union, and have also tended to loosen their ties with one another whenever the Soviet Union was taking a mild and co-operative attitude toward the West.

Revival of Isolation

Former Secretary of State Dean Rusk, for example, is still highly concerned about what he regards as a dangerous revival of isolation in the United States. This is not shared to the same degree by most officials at the State Department, but they feel that the Brandt-Kosygin treaty could be troublesome if it weakened U.S. links to the Western allies or stopped the movement toward the enlargement of economic and political integration in Western Europe.

These, however, are merely the precautionary amendments to a generally positive Washington reaction to the treaty. Officials are enthusiastic about any reduction of East-West tensions over Germany, which probably could be the only real cause of a world nuclear war, but while they are generally pleased with Brandt's adventure in Eastern diplomacy, they do not want to pay the price of a weaker Western alliance.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

Go for a hike along the Grand Fir trail in Francis Park, then turn west on to the Centennial or New Forest trails. There are very many interesting things to see.

Notice how some leaves have been partially eaten by insects; in some the leaf-cutting bee has taken out round pieces, in others they have been eaten by the larvae of flying creatures. Each one has a different pattern.

The salal bushes show their dark blue berries. They are ripe and many birds seek them for food. Along the way you will be able to find some of the self heal still in bloom with its purple head and trumpet-like flower.

★

Take note of the bracken ferns. Some are now brown while others are still green and fresh. This indicates a difference in root stocks.

Stop at the large ants nest. They are busy making ready for the winter, hauling material to build up the "roof".

When you come out into the sunny clearings take a look at the different spider webs that you can see. There is the rather sprawly dome web with the spider looking like a little stick in the centre. The beautiful web of the ray spider glistens in the sun. Deep in the grass you can see the tunnel of the spider that lives in the dark and will scuttle out and take any prey that is caught in the tunnel.

Where the grass is short you will find the little black jumping spider that does not build a web but relies on its speed to catch its victim. Among the tall grasses and the bushes you can see very many long thin webs: this will be the "travelling" web that the young spiders spin so that the wind may carry them to their new destination.

Examine the tips of the fir limbs; see how the new bud for next year's growth is now formed. No more growth will take place this year. Later on as the weather turns colder the tips will put on a coat of a wax-like substance that will shed the rain and protect them from harmful frost.

As you turn by the pond there are some cedars that have put out fluted trunks; this will indicate that they are living on marshy ground, so they have to anchor themselves.

★

After you cross the road going to the New Forest trail stop by the now dry swamp. The huge skunk cabbage leaves have become too heavy for the stems to support them and now are drooping, soon to be absorbed by the fungi that will turn them into soil for next year's growth.

Along this trail you will go by a very small marshy piece of land where some beautiful lady ferns are growing. There is a small red alder stand close by. Notice the different types of lichens growing on them.

In the beautiful shady grove of cedars stop and examine the old nurse log that is there. How many different kinds of plants can you find on it?

Japan Turns Right With U.S. Backing

By JEFFREY P. FREED

(A teaching fellow at the University of Oregon, Mr. Freed lectures on contemporary politics and foreign policy in the Far East, where he frequently travels. This is excerpted from an article he wrote for the magazine, The Progressive.)

The Second World War indelibly stamped Japan's presence into the American mind. Over time, however, the old memories of war have faded, replaced by the picture of an industrious people rebuilding their war-torn country.

Twenty-five years after surrender, the men who rule Japan continue to nurture this image of growth, prosperity, and progress. But images are deceptive, and behind this mask can be found an increasingly grim situation.

While the focus of current international attention on Japan revolves around the world's fair, "Expo '70," and its themes of tremendous growth and progress, the overbearing reality of postwar Japan is that this is a nation ruled by many of the same men who pillaged Asia, and made war against the United States.

These are men who have carefully retained or regained their power, selected their successors, and waited for the time when the international political climate would present the opportunity to resurrect their quest for the "Greater East Asian Co-Prosperity Sphere."

Remarkably, this reactionary restoration has been underwritten by the United States as an extension of its Cold War policy, with the process accentuated by the war in Vietnam.

Militarist Revival

For most Americans the possibility of a militarist revival in Japan in some way aided or fostered by the U.S. government seems patently absurd. Yet there is the nagging fact that a growing number of Japanese are expressing, as part of the apprehension over their own government's rightward drift, definite signs of anti-Americanism.

In 1960, Japan was wracked by massive demonstrations strongly anti-American in tone; the specific aims of the protests were the repudiation of the U.S.-Japan Security Treaty and the ousting of Prime Minister Kishi Nobuske's government.

Writing nearly a decade ago in Foreign Affairs, just prior to his tour of duty as U.S. Ambassador to Japan, Edwin Reischauer observed that these demonstrations were "a sign of a huge current of discontent within Japanese society — a frustration with present trends and a strong alienation from the existing order."

A decade later these same "trends" still exist, with Japan having become an appendage, if not a full partner, in the United States' Asian counter-revolutionary crusade.

In outward form the protests now sweeping Japan are focused, as in 1960, on the security treaty. But opposition to the treaty is not just confined to its stipulated alliance system welding Japan to U.S. Asian policies and allowing the use of national territory for American military bases.

Nor will the inclusion of the issue of the reversion of Okinawa to Japanese control fully explain the intensity of manifested emotion. A deeper feeling is that Japan over the last twenty-five years has been integrated into the U.S. "military-industrial complex," an anathema to the people of a nation apprehensive about the institutions of war.

Even beyond this is the definite knowledge that whatever the details of the relationship with the United States, this system has been developed and operated in co-operation with a reactionary Japanese ruling class once responsible for bringing fascism to Japan — and again moving in the same direction.

Students protest revived militarism

Nothing more clearly epitomizes the hold of the wartime reactionaries over Japan than the regime of Prime Minister Sato Eisaku.

Sato rose to power under the tutelage of his step-brother, Kishi Nobuske, who was Prime Minister from 1957 to 1960. Kishi was a minister in the wartime cabinet of General Tojo, a post awarded for his key role in organizing the plunder of Manchuria in the 1930s.

During the post-Second World War occupation Kishi was imprisoned as a war criminal, but later released, and then "depurged." This "depurging" was not the result of finding him innocent, but rather the culmination of accommodations between the U.S. occupation authorities and the Japanese ruling class.

By 1947, the spread of Communist-led revolutionary movements throughout Asia pushed the United States to seek Japan as an ally. The price of this alliance was the release of such powerful political and economic leaders as Kishi.

Moved Into Power

Almost immediately Kishi and many others on the "depurged" roster assumed leading positions in Japanese politics and moved into power through the formation of the so-called Liberal Democratic Party (LDP) in 1955.

Under Kishi's sponsorship men like him were unabashedly brought back into government service, including his step-brother Sato Eisaku, who was appointed Finance Minister — a position somewhat higher than his role as a ranking bureaucrat in the Transportation Ministry during the war and immediately after.

An LDP "Who's Who" could read like an occupation list of personalities purged after the Second World War.

It could include former Prime Minister Ishibashi Tanzan (1956-1957), who during the war helped plan and execute the conquest of Asia, and former Foreign Minister Fujiyama Aiichiro, who was a leader and spokesman for the huge corporations, monopolies, and cartels known as zaibatsu that helped to initiate Japan's expansionist tendencies.

The list could be extended. Most came from the Japanese upper class and had joint relationships with the bureaucracy and business, and only a few in the postwar era have changed their political views.

The predominant ideology of Japan's rulers stresses subservience to the state by the masses, guaranteed by a rigid social structure based on obligation and responsibility. In this respect there is little of substance that separates the present political system from its prewar counterpart.

The role of the United States in the development of this political aberration is clear. Almost before the occupation reforms had time to work, U.S. officials moved to restore wartime Japanese leaders to power.

The context for this dramatic reversal was the gathering of a revolutionary storm throughout Asia. It was reasoned that if Communism were to be stopped, Japan might have to become the workshop and arsenal for the Free World in this area.

Keep Status Quo

Under these circumstances, what was needed was continuity of leadership, not reform, and with the Communist victory in China, and the outbreak of the Korean war, the resurrection of reactionaries began in earnest.

As elsewhere in the world, the U.S. global strategy of counter-revolution put the emphasis on the status quo.

Under American guidance Japan became a secure base area for military operations and a willing surrogate for insuring capitalist development in Asia, yet at all times the Kennedy and Johnson Administrations kept this expansion within the bounds of U.S. economic and military interests, a fact that irritated those Japanese who wanted more independence in their relations with other Asian nations.

But with the election of Richard Nixon to the Presidency, the Japanese saw their opportunity to remove some of these barriers and equalize the relationship that had previously made Japan the United States' junior partner.

From his experience as Vice President in the Eisenhower Administration, Richard Nixon had developed a close working relationship with key Japanese conservatives, especially Kishi Nobuske.

During later years when he was out of public office, Nixon made a number of trips to Japan and had ample opportunity to let himself become convinced of the position of Japan's government leaders.

Both Nixon and Kishi are obsessively anti-Communist, and both have had the experience of being forced from office by "liberals." Moreover, both are ardent believers that government should be the handmaiden of business.

Therefore, when Mr. Nixon won the Presidency it was almost inevitable that his projected Asian policy would strongly reflect the views of Kishi's political heir, Prime Minister Sato. As outlined in the "Nixon Doctrine," the United States was going to "Asianize" Asia.

Notwithstanding the desire for a return to past glories, it is not likely that the Japanese leadership in the immediate future will make any moves with a potential for making the Japanese seem interventionists or aggressors.

There are indications that over the next several years efforts will be concentrated in expanding existing trade relations, buying friends through the dispensation of aid, and a buildup in military forces.

The most fundamental development in these areas has been the increase in facilities for military production. Leading the field is the giant Mitsubishi Heavy Industries, followed closely by Tokyo Shibaura Electric, Japan Aircraft Manufacturing, and Japan Steel.

KISHI

SATO

These companies have worked out licensing arrangements with their U.S. counterparts such as Westinghouse, General Electric, General Precision, Litton Industries, and most of the other top companies in our own "military-industrial complex" to secure the plans and technology for producing military hardware.

Plans released by the Japanese Defence Agency call for a buildup in naval and air strength. There are already projections for a navy with nuclear powered submarines and cruisers, and for an air force with the most modern fighter-bomber capability, complete with missiles. The expansion planned would probably give Japan a navy larger than that of Communist China.

In the most immediate terms, any military buildup will not be directed toward external security, except for possible forays into modest displays of "gunboat diplomacy."

Rather, these forces will be directed toward dealing with the anti-treaty movement. The Japanese government is prepared to engage in massive, systematic repression of its own citizenry.

The government's network of secret police and spies has also been increased, with more than 5,000 persons added to the police payrolls for this type of work last year.

Rounding out this array of force is a contingency plan for organizing civilian anti-riot squads. These squads would be drawn from hundreds of thousands of junior executives given "national moral rearmament" training with the Self-Defence Forces over the past several years.

As long as the conservatives are able to perpetuate their hold over the government, the only short-run result to be expected from this year's turmoil is a continuation of the move to the right — supported, of course, by the United States.

Vast Dependency

Nor are fears of the emergence of an aggressive, reactionary Japan confined merely to domestic left dissidents. In the December 18, 1969, New York Times, Philip Shabecoff reported the fears of many Asian leaders, "in countries that had felt the weight of Japanese military might during World War II," where "any hint of possible military build-up by Japan is viewed as cause for concern."

Indeed, as one Southeast Asian government official told Shabecoff, "the Japanese are now creating through economic power what they failed to achieve militarily —the Greater East Asia Co-Prosperity Sphere."

If this is the trend, and all indications point toward it, then the United States may be able to do in Asia something similar to what it did in earlier decades in Latin America; create a system of pro-American reactionary governments starting with Thailand and extending through Laos, South Vietnam, Indonesia, South Korea, and Taiwan, with Japan serving as pro-consul for this vast dependency of nations.

Film Board's New Man a Happy Choice

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — There's been wide and enthusiastic approval of the appointment of Sydney Newman to the chairmanship of the National Film Board.

The job is a hard one. Morale among employees is poor; there's an internal French-English bitterness in the Montreal-based operation; the budgets have been cheese-pared in the past two years; the specific purposes of the board have been widened and blurred; the board, like the CBC, has run out of enthusiastic backing from both the commonalty of politicians in Ottawa and the general public.

●

Newman's predecessor, Hugo McPherson, was a rather sensitive academic who never played the Ottawa ministers well and who, despite a record in essays of being almost preciously aware of creativity, couldn't bridge well to the producers and writers on his staff.

Newman has the benefit of that extra respect we give one of us who left, did very well and then has returned. The establishment he takes over has just over 1,000 employees and a gross budget of just over $18 million, almost half of which is earned from sales of films and services.

●

I've never met Newman nor seen him perform. Therefore, I turned to two men, not in government, to get an estimate of his character and talents. One has only come to know him well since he returned last year to advise Pierre Juneau and the CRTC. The other man is a former co-worker of Newman's. Their estimates are as follows.

The newer acquaintance said:

"Newman is much more practical and commercially-minded than either McPherson, the professor, or the man before him, Roberge, the bureaucrat. He'll need to be because the costs of NFB stuff are out of sight. He's got to get the costs down of stuff produced for sale to television (including ETV) or film houses if he's to get the revenue to do much. His key breakthrough here — and he knows it —must come through producing programs that are more susceptible to TV distribution.

●

"The NFB can't afford to major in all the areas it has or into which its producers would like to go. And Newman knows this. O.K., despite some predictions he can hardly head into feature-length movies. The government's got the film corporation for that. The minister concerned, Gerard Pelletier, has a White Paper on the board in his hands which he read to McPherson. It sets out what the government considers the NFB purposes should be; it spells out ideas for amendments to the act under which the NFB operates.

●

"The feature of the present statute is that the NFB should interpret Canada to Canadians. Sounds great as a prime function, but how? I don't believe Newman has assimilated the White Paper. It's merely been read to him. Pelletier hasn't taken it to the Liberal caucus so there's no guarantee it will be the blueprint.

"Newman needs to know what the government wants. Is it to specialize in training people? Should it be able to ram into distribution channels — theatres, TV networks, educational TV, cable — or should it turn back into a larger production for government departments and shining of our image abroad?

"I believe Newman will stabilize the union and manpower situation first and go after the distribution problem. He's lucky in that he worked with Juneau years ago and they have a good understanding. He's going into a lousy situation and he knows it."

●

The second man etched this picture of Newman: "He's a thruster; a gregarious, talkative man who likes politicians. He knows he has to spend a lot of time in Ottawa. His real strength is that he has a good faculty of working with production people. They'll recognize him as a brother. He's a doer, a getter, a weeper and wailer. He has the great quality of being able to spot and help better people; that is, those who are smarter and very creative.

"He has lots of security and confidence. Funny that. He and Murray Chercover of CTV have a mutual chill for each other. And I think it's because Murray is so insecure, despite his talents, that he must dabble in everything done by those he orders, whereas Syd with his certainty about himself can delegate easily.

●

"Newman is a lazy man mentally. He won't spend time to understand situations or plan them coolly. He pitches into things and works himself through them, never intellectually or with a cool rationality. Since he came back he's spent very little time finding out what goes here. Instead he's been rife with views based on British and world standards. He really hasn't landed back in Canada yet. But he will.

"One of the paradoxes today is that Newman knows that distribution is the key to NFB progress and is looking to TV for it; and yet his friend, Juneau, is hipped on production and can't appreciate why broadcasters need to own their own distribution facilities.

●

"Newman is a liberally-minded guy like a lot of old left-wingers whom age has mellowed. Remember that he's inclined to be a technician, with a thorough understanding of the mechanics of production. He himself is not a creative man, In fact, he distrusts intellectuals and has little time for academics. He's a good man and it's well he's leaving the CRTC. He didn't bring them much help because he's still an expatriate emotionally but he should be a bonus to the film board."

From those candid views it would seem Newman is far from an undifferentiated genius — but impressive.

Oil Stocks Lead Upward Swing

By ART JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Oil stocks gushed upward this week on Canadian stock markets, posting their best gains in more than a year.

The Toronto Stock Exchange's western oil index finished the week up 15.39 points to 172.35, the largest five-day climb since July 4, 1969.

Analysts said upward pressure has been mounting on oil and gas issues for the past several weeks.

They say American investors are buying up Canadian oil stocks in anticipation of fuel shortages in the United States which will lead to increased imports of Canadian fuel.

The most dramatic illustration of the price climbs made under the pressure was Dome Petroleum, which jumped up $9.50 to $59.50 on the week.

The stock's greatest rise was made Friday. The National Energy Board gave the company the go-ahead Friday on a project which would result in sales of 55.30 million barrels of Alberta-produced propane during the next 23 years.

The propane is to be sold in Eastern Canada and the United States beginning in January, 1971.

Oil stocks were down fractionally last week, but had made strong advances during the previous five weeks.

However, the current boom has not reached the proportions of the huge advances early last year when the western oil index boiled over the 300 mark.

Conditions leading up to the inflated oil shares prices in 1969 were different, however. Staggering advances were made on the strength of speculation that Canada's Arctic would yield vast quantities of oil.

Several companies staked out large exploratory areas and oil stocks as a group jumped upward with every rumor of a productive test well.

CONFIDENCE FLAGGED

Several months and several abandoned wells later, investors' confidence had edged progressively downward with each drop in their stock value.

Other areas of investment were generally higher this week.

The Toronto exchange's industrial index, the broadest indicator of stock movement, increased 1.55 to 156.67.

Most of the strength was attributed by observers to predictions United States administration officials of a better economic picture in the last half of the year.

Treasury Secretary David Kennedy said Thursday that the U.S. economy has already passed through the most difficult period of transition.

He said "we will begin to see the tapering off in inflation" during the next few months.

On index at Toronto, golds were up 1.27 to 153.40 and base metals lost .63 to 93.01.

Volume was 8.75 million shares, 8.31 million last week.

Gains outnumbered losses 413 to 268 with 273 issues unchanged.

At the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index climbed 2.89 to 155.76.

Combined volume was 4.10 million shares, up from 3.36 million last week.

Gains outnumbered losses 165 to 142 with 108 issues unchanged.

Capital Issue Fares Well

Discounts ranging from .69 per cent to 2.11 per cent were offered by seven bidders on the Capital Regional District's first debenture issue this week.

Best price offered on the $750,000 9¼ per cent issue was 99.31 tendered by Nesbitt, Thomson and Co. Ltd., to yield the district $744,825 for capital projects including Family and Childrens' Court, Juan de Fuca swimming pool, acquisition of land at Colwood recreation centre and miscellaneous items.

Other bids were 99.148 by A. E. Ames and Co. Ltd.; 98.542 by Royal Securities Corp. Ltd.; 98.523 by Burns Bros. and Denton Ltd.; 98.37 by Odlum Brown and T. B. Read Ltd.; 98.11 by Wood Gundy Securities Ltd., and 97.89 by Richardson Securitie of Canada.

The regional district said prices were better than the market would indicate.

Slowdown in U.S. Price Increases

WASHINGTON (WP) — While far from curbed, inflation is definitely easing according to figures released Friday by the government.

The bureau of labor statistics' consumer price index showed a seasonally-adjusted increase of 0.3 per cent in July, the same as in June for the smallest two-month rise in nearly two years.

This contrasts with 0.4 per cent monthly advances from February through May and 0.6 per cent at the turn of the year.

Put another way, the cost of living is now rising at an annual rate of 3.7 per cent against 4.9 per cent last spring and more than 7 per cent early in the year.

Before seasonal adjustment, the CPI rose 0.4 per cent last month to 135.7 per cent of the 1957-59 average.

Thus, a cross section of goods and services selling for $10 roughly 12 years ago would now bring $13.57.

Over the past 12 months the index has climbed 5.9 per cent. It was the first time since last November that the 12-month increase was less than 6 per cent.

The June and July figures appeared to confirm oft-repeated claims by Nixon administration that the rate of price increases in tapering off. But the reduced annual rate of 3.7 per cent of the past two monhs is still nearly three times the 1.3 per cent annual average that prevailed between 1959 and 1965 — the last period of relatively stable prices.

BUYING POWER UP

A companion report from BLS showed that the purchasing power of payroll workers increased for the third straight month; a combination of a penny-an-hour rise in hourly earnings and an 0.2 hour increase in the work week more than offset the increase in prices.

Consequently, average weekly take-home pay of the nation's some 50 million private, non-farm payroll employees expressed in 1957-59 dollars rose 31 cents to $78.03. This was 0.4 per cent above June but down nearly 1 per cent from a year ago. And it was 2.3 per cent under the all-time peak of $79.86 set in September, 1965.

Most of the July increase in the CPI was attributable to food (particularly a 14.6 per cent jump in eggs), household services other than rent, transportation and medical care services.

Food rose 0.4 per cent but after seasonal adjustment the rise was only 0.1 per cent. Food prices have actually been a moderating influence on the index recently, rising only 0.2 per cent in the past three months after seasonal adjustment.

HIGHER PRICES

Helping fuel the July rise were higher prices for gasoline, cigarettes, newspapers, water and sewerage charges, hotel and motel rates and local transit fares.

The rise was held down by a larger than seasonal decline in apparel prices; smaller increases than usual for houses, movie admissions, bowling and golf fees and tailoring charges; and a slight decline in used cars. There was no increase in mortgage interest rates, which have risen 9.4 per cent over the past 12 months.

BLS officials, who are supposed to outdo Caesar's wife when it comes to keeping politics out of cost of living statistics, have been considerably more reluctant to comment on the protent of index charges than White House spokesmen.

Friday, however, assistant commissioner of labor statistics Joel Popkin pointed to "a slowing down (in the rate of prices increases) since the first of the year that has become more pronounced in recent months — specifically June and July."

Price Hike Planned By Chrysler

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. has become the second major U.S. automaker to announce a tentative increase in the price charged dealers for its 1971 models.

Chrysler said the increase will be five to six per cent—an average of about $125 a car. Ford Motor Co. announced earlier a five-per-cent wholesale price boost for all lines except the Maverick and a six-per-cent increase in the price of the economy compact.

The price increases announced so far affect only cars shipped to dealers before 1971 prices are formally set. Both Ford and Chrysler say the final prices paid by dealers can be adjusted up or down.

American Motors Corp. officials have indicated they plan to raise the dealers' price Motors traditionally does not by about five per cent. General bill its dealers until after final prices are announced.

Gas-Driven Car Proves Success

OTTAWA (WP) — More power, longer engine life and 60 per cent less pollution are the benefits reported by the Ontario department of public works from conversion of two trucks and a car to burn propane gas.

Bill Magill, head of vehicle maintenance and repair for the provincial government department, drove a converted 1970 Ford from Toronto to Ottawa this week, covering the nearly 300 miles with only one stop to refill the car's 19.2 gallon propane tank in the trunk.

"We're delighted with the performance of the vehicles on propane," he said. "Everyone who has driven our conversions says they are more peppy. They have more scat."

Magill said tests had shown the propane fueled engines emit hydrocarbon pollutants in exhaust fumes in a volume of 250 parts per million, compared with 650 parts per million for comparable gasoline-powered vehicles. There is reason to believe that even the 250 parts per million can be reduced, he added.

Engineers of the works department believe the life of the engine, lubricating oil and spark plugs will be increased by between 50 and 100 per cent with propane, Magill said.

It cost about $450 to convert each vehicle to propane. Magill said the price of propane is about the same as that of gasoline, and the mileage on propane and gasoline is about the same.

Loan Renegotiated

NEW YORK (AP) — Diners Club Inc. has renegotiated a $150 million refinancing of its bank debt in the view of a reported $29.1 million loss for the fiscal year that ended March 31.

The refinancing came after the Continental Corp guaranteed repayment of the loan. The giant insurer owns 88 per cent of Diners Club's stock.

The loan was based on a three-year $150 million revolving credit at an interest rate of one-half percentage point above the prime rate, currently eight per cent.

GOVERNMENT, BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY ALL NEED R.I.A.'s TODAY!

Over 10,000 corporation and government executives in Canada support the Registered Industrial Accountant educational program because the R.I.A. program trains secondary school educated men and women to become financial executives and company controllers. But they need more R.I.A.'s than are available. What about you?

If you have secondary school education or better, you can become a Registered Industrial Accountant.

Our evening lecture or correspondence course lets you continue earning money in your present job, while you work to become an R.I.A.

The knowledge you gain as you study will help you in your present job so you will have the opportunity to move up as you learn.

In the last few years over 5,000 young men and women have graduated as R.I.A.'s. Most of them earn salaries on a par with university graduates.

They have moved up to better paying, more interesting, and more secure jobs. Many more R.I.A.'s are needed in business, industry and government. Some R.I.A.'s have moved right up to become presidents in large Canadian companies.

Enrol today, Become an R.I.A.!

Worldwide

Worldwide Energy Co. Ltd. reports consolidated net income rose 255 per cent in the six months ended June 30 to $540,000 or 17 cents a share compared with $152,000 or five cents for the first half of 1969.

Gross revenues were up 73 per cent to $1.9 million compared with $1.1 million. Earnings before taxes were 165 per cent higher at $781,000 or 25 cents a share compared with $295,000 or 10 cents a share.

President Robert B. Tenison said increases were due to higher oil production, land sales and the sale of an interest in Arctic acreage on Banks Island and Mackenzie River Delta.

Toronto Star

Toronto Star Ltd. reports earnings of $2.7 million or $1.13 a share for the nine months to June 30, up from $2.48 million or $1.04 a share for the corresponding period of the previous year.

Beland Honderich, president and publisher, said circulation and advertising revenue were up 5.5 per cent despite an uncertain economy.

Gross revenue for the nine months was $40.26 million, up $794,000 from the previous year. Honderich said a better showing by Canadian Magazine helped increase earnings.

BOAC

Britain's biggest state-owned airline BOAC, announced a record profit and said it had wiped out all its debts to the government.

The annual accounts of British Overseas Airways Corp. showed an operating surplus of $79.3 million, its highest ever. Profit after tax amounted to $48.3 million.

BOAC said government advances for purchase of aircraft were being paid off ahead of time.

Home Oil

A loss of $1.46 million on the sale of investments contributed to a Home Oil Ltd. deficit of $223,000 for the six months ended June 30.

Also a factor were low operating profits of $1.24 million less than half the $2.5 million the company earned in the first half of 1969. Higher interest rates cut the operating net.

The loss was equal to three cents a share compared with 1969 first-half earnings of 38 cents a share.

Gross revenue was $14.6 million, up from $12.96 million.

Canex

Canex Exploration Ltd. has completed 38½ miles of line cutting, magnetometer and induced polarization surveys preparatory to diamond drilling on Whitehorse property of Wolf Creek Mines Ltd.

Anomalies were to be drilled this month to test limits of the copper prospect, which is adjacent to New Imerial's property. There are 155 claims, about 100 more than originally held.

Canex can earn up to 70 per cent interest in the holding by spending a maximum $650,000 by Jan. 31, 1974, and receive Wolf Creek stock.

Westcoast

Westcoast Production Co. Ltd. had a net loss of $218,506 or five cents a share in the three months ended June 30 compared with a profit of $88,417 or two cents a share in the same period a year earlier.

The company lost $163,143 from operations and incurred a further deficit of $406,263 when the Canadian dollar was freed May 30, increasing in value.

The loss on operations was due mostly to surrendered leases and unsuccessful wells.

The company also gained $350,900 from the sale of investments.

EMPLOYEES OF IOS DELIVER ULTIMATUM

GENEVA (Reuters) — Employees of troubled Investors Overseas Services called on management Friday to negotiate with former chairman Bernard Cornfeld in hopes of preventing a destructive proxy battle for control of the giant mutual-fund group.

In an ultimatum issued at a meeting of more than 700 employees at the IOS offices in Ferny-Voltaire, France, near here, the company's staff said that if serious negotiations were not begun by Wednesday between the two parties, other means of pressing their point of view would have to be considered.

Wall St. Loses Familiar Names

NEW YORK (AP) — Familiar names and faces have been disappearing from Wall Street and oldtimers can't help but think of the 1930s.

Five member firms of the New York Stock Exchange are in the process of being liquidated because they couldn't meet capital requirements, another already has been liquidated, and last week five more candidates were added to the list.

Moreover, many firms have been forced into the arms of more well-to-do suitors, strictly marriages of convenience with stronger firms, dictated solely by financial considerations. Other firms have had a frightening lack of cash.

This has been the greatest shake-out since the Great Depression, but there the comparison may end. The remaining firms, we are told, will be stronger for having battled their way through the crises of recent years.

At first the problems resulted from an avalanche of orders that brokers were unable to handle efficiently. Now, in an ironic flip-flop, the problem is a lack of value.

VOLUME IS DOWN

Last year, the NYSE estimated, a daily volume of 12 million shares was needed for member firms to break even. Volume averaged 11.4 million. The break-even point this year is lower, but not as low as volume, which fell to 10.7 million.

Last week the crisis deepened, as only 38.8 million shares were traded for the entire week, or an average of only 7.7 million. And in the previous week the volume was only 40.6 million.

Trading interest simply isn't responding to efforts, and some well-known firms are going farther into the red than anyone could have contemplated. Through April the NYSE said, 80 per cent of retail houses surveyed lost money. It could be worse now as volume continues to recede.

BOARD MAKES SURVEY

Based on another survey, also by the big board, this is what firms are doing to counteract apathy:

—Cutting media advertising, even the size of ads, but increasing direct mail efforts.

—Developing quotas of cold calls for registered representatives.

—Tours of branches by top executives, analysts and others to talk to customers and to encourage branch office managers.

—Expanded office hours, especially into the evenings and Saturdays.

—More sales meetings; more stress on initiative.

—Special counselling of younger representatives by older salesmen who have been through depressed markets.

—More seminars and forums.

—Reassignment of inactive accounts; assignment by partners of their own accounts to newer men.

STILL UNCERTAIN

Will it work? Some houses report encouraging news but the statistical evidence so far doesn't support their optimism. Last year, for example, the "costs of occupancy," or rents, rose 19 per cent, but commission income fell.

Without doubt, some of the failures on Wall Street and other financial streets across the United States are due to mismanagement. It was an easy ride astride a galloping economy during the 1960s, but this was the time to put houses in order. Now, with crisis piled on crisis, there isn't enough money to do the job.

But the failures, the layoffs, the dwindling incomes also indicate that the resolution of them may take years more.

$2 Billion Gas Pipeline Planned

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Plans have been announced here for construction of a natural gas pipeline, costing an estimated $2 billion, to bring natural gas from Alaska to the United States as far east as Ohio.

The plans were outlined by Herbert M. Sampson, a vice-president of the Northern Natural Gas Co. of Omaha and president of Consolidated Natural Gas Ltd., of Calgary, Alta., a Northern subisdiary.

The new line, Sampson said, would stretch 300 miles across Alaska, then about 1,500 miles through the Yukon Territory, Northwest Territories and Alberta.

Sampson also reported that Northen has abandoned plans to build a link 1,700 miles from the Northwest Territories to Northern's present lines in Minnesota.

According to Sampson, the Canadian portion of the project would be built by Canadian firms headed by Alberta Gas Trunk Lines, Ltd.

The new line, Sampson said, would take advantage of new oil drilling expected in Alaska. He said there are about two trillion cubic feet of proven natural gas reserves in the area of the North Slope, where the line would begin.

The line would connect with existing lines in Alberta and run about 550 miles to the Alberta-Saskatchewan border, Sampson said.

There it would connect with one already proposed by Northern — a 900-mile segment from Empress to North Branch, Minn.

Strike Hits Sun Income

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sun Publishing Co. Ltd. reports that net income for the six months ended June 30 this fall fell to $286,768 from $1.4 million for the corresponding period last year.

In his annual report to shareholders, company chairman C. B. Delbridge attributed the drop to a three-month shutdown of Pacific Press Ltd. earlier this year and a decrease in profits from sales of marketable securities.

He said, however, that earnings for the second half of this year were expected to compare favorably with those last year.

Sun Publishing Co. publishes Vancouver's afternoon newspaper, the Sun, under agreement with Pacific Press Ltd., in which Sun Publishing holds a 50 per cent equity.

YOUR TAXES

By I. H. ASPER

Hikes Appear Inevitable

The public discussion of tax reform is nearing its conclusion. The parliamentary committee has finished its tour of the country and returned to Ottawa to write its report. Finance Minister Benson has confirmed the one year hike in the implementation date of the plan and within the next few months will reveal the government's final intentions on the mechanics of the new system for collecting federal revenue.

And as the intensity of the debate wanes it becomes clear that the core issue, the fundamental premise on which the tax reform plan rests, will not be given the serious attention it deserves. That crucial issue is best summarized by the question: should government generally freeze or even reduce its spending; or put another way, are governments already taking too much from the public and would it be best to make a general reduction in taxes?

The white paper begins on the premise that government spending should continue to escalate and therefore tax revenues must continue to increase. If one accepts the validity of this thesis, then give or take corrections required to make the proposed system more fair and effective in achieving national objectives, there isn't much room for change in the taxing government.

GROWING EVIDENCE

Perhaps Canadians do not consider themselves overtaxed, and if that is so, living with the tax reform plan will not be too onerous. However, there is growing evidence, inarticulate though it may be, that a very large and increasing number are nearing the breaking point in tax burden acceptance.

The finance department report for the first quarter of fiscal 1970 demonstrates the point. Spending is up by $300 million over the same quarter last year. Thus government also had to increase its revenue (mainly through taxes) by the same amount. Inflation continues, and while the government has taken many commendable steps to arrest it, it remains irrebuttable that the largest single factor in the increase in the price of goods over the past five years is the increased taxes on producers and consumers.

SHARP FOCUS

A glance at the fiscal figures for the last five years graphically illuminates the point and brings the issue into sharp focus. In 1965 the federal government took about $7.9 billion from the public; by next year that extraction will have nearly doubled to $15.5 billion, without the tax reform hike.

Taking all federal, provincial and municipal government together, the picture is somewhat worse. In 1965 all governments took $14 billion from the public, but by next year, mainly because of increased provincial and municipal spending, that take will have more than doubled to reach $30 billion.

It all raises the question: if in slightly over half a decade taxes have doubled, is it worth it; has the human condition in Canada also improved by 100 per cent; would we be better off with the 1965 standard of government service and pay only half as much tax? Of course it is self evident that government services haven't doubled in the past five or six years — it is the 1970 cost of providing the 1965 services that has increased in the main.

BLEAK PROSPECT

If one is not satisfied with the result, then he will be somewhat more alarmed as he views the near future tax and government spending trends.

The federal-provincial tax structure committee reports that government spending will continue to outpace the growth in the economy — over real ability to pay. In 1965 government spending amounted to 29 per cent of the gross national product. By 1971, government will spend just under 35 per cent of the GNP.

The committee further reports that over the foreseeable future the federal government will be able to live within the income generated by the present tax system but the provincial and municipal governments will not. They will fall further and further behind. The tax revenue-government spending gap will continue to widen and by next year, the provincial governments' deficit will be in the order of $2 billion.

It appears that the existing tax system gives provincial governments an annual revenue increase between 5 per cent and 14 per cent, but expenditures are rising annually between 7 per cent and provincial deficits totalled provincial deficits totalled about $530 million. It is projected to reach spending of over $2 billion in excess of revenue by 1971-72.

All of which makes one thing quite certain. There are vast tax increases in store at all three levels of government over the next five years — unless the public demands a stop to the current progression. If it does not, then by 1975, the individual tax load being carried by Canadians in 1970 will look small in comparison just as the 1965 load is a dwarf beside the current burden.

Vietnam: The Great American Mistake

By ROBERT G. KAISER

Winding up an 18-month tour, Washington Post reporter Robert G. Kaiser departs Vietnam with a feeling of gloom. He feels the war will prove as difficult to end as it has been to win.

Despite U.S. and South Vietnamese military successes — in fact, because of them — Hanoi becomes more and more recalcitrant about negotiating a peace. Hostilities may drop to a barely perceptible level but, Kaiser thinks, the VC will continue guerrilla activities.

He feels the U.S. already has lost its chance to achieve most objectives. America has failed to contain Chinese influence in Asia and has failed to show revolutionaries that wars of national liberation cannot succeed.

SAIGON (WP) — "You are lucky," one of the American government's senior experts on Vietnam assured me just a year and a half ago. "At least during your 18 months out there, you'll be able to see how the war ends."

In February and March of 1969, that was the conventional wisdom in the American establishment, both in Washington and in Paris, where talks to end the war were then not quite a year old. I was a correspondent about to take up a new assignment in Vietnam and was making the rounds of government offices in Washington and Paris to talk about the war. At every stop the same message was repeated: Now the war is ending, they said confidently at the Pentagon, the state department and the CIA.

●

Alas, the war was not ending then, and it is not ending now. The war in Vietnam may prove as difficult to end as it has been to win. The conventional wisdom of 18 months ago was wrong. All the conventional wisdom about Vietnam, since the days when Ngo Dinh Diem was the Churchill of Asia, have been based on the assumption that the United States could solve the Vietnam problem. There seems to be more evidence now than ever before that this is a mistaken assumptionn — that Vietnam and Indochina are not going to be neatly arranged and taken care of by American power and influence.

This seems to be true even when, by an conventional measure, the American side appears to be dominating the war in South Vietnam, and quite decisively. The American problem now is to turn advantage into "victory," or even into a satisfactory conclusion. That just may be impossible, perhaps not for any rational western reasons, but because this is Indochina, not Indiana.

●

The American governments that have struggled with Vietnam seem never to have appreciated the ethereal quality — it may be madness — of the war. The United States has never accepted the fundamental differentness of Vietnam — those aspects of this society that allow, for instance, its public officials to lie brazenly and daily to their American allies, or which compel beggars to buy and steal babies who might help them look more pathetic in Saigon's filthy gutters.

Cause and effect don't work here the way they do in America, and as a result, the fact that South Vietnam and the U.S. are currently winning the war in no way means it will never be won. Indeed, the allies' success in the last two years of fighting may have been negated by its expansion into Cambodia. That is not meant to be a frivolous remark. It is a good example of Indochinese paradox.

When the American side was doing badly in the war — perhaps at any time until the spring of 1968 — the Communists might have been willing to strike an honest bargain. But an honest bargain those days would have been a defeat for the United States, and Lyndon B. Johnson was not interested in that. Today, because of the U.S. and South Vietnamese successes in the countryside, an honest bargain would be a defeat for North Vietnam, which apparently does not interest the men in Hanoi.

So by doing better in the war, our side may have convinced the Communists to fight longer. At the same time, South Vietnamese and American success in the war forced the Camodians to re-evaluate their foreign policy, which had long been based on the assumption that the Communists would win in South Vietnam. The Cambodians had to revise this assumption during 1969. Even Prince Sihanouk decided that a rapprochement with the Americans as required by the new turn of events inside South Vietnam.

This was a dangerous admission for Sihanouk. It was a voluntary renunciation of what had been his strongest card — his ability to placate the Vietnamese Communists, attract international support for his peculiar form of Cambodian neutrality, and still maintain an independent Khmer kingdom. These talents lost some of their value at a time when Cambodians were deciding that their interests might lie more with America and South Vietnam than with North Vietnam and the National Liberation Front. At least many of those under Sihanouk — who had strong personal quarrels with the Prince anyhow—concluded in a heated moment that in the new circumstances they could get along without him.

With Sihanouk suddenly on their side and a pro-American government installed in Phnom Penh, the Communists saw a new opportunity to expand the war to their own advantage. By opening a new front in Cambodia, they could make efficient and dramatic use of their mobile army, force the Nixon administration to choose between a new commitment in Asia and, probably, a Communist regime in Cambodia, and try to outflank their enemies in the continuing war for South Vietnam. In sum, the new Cambodian situation gave Hanoi an opportunity to try to compensate for its recent failures in South Vietnam.

So now there is a vast new battlefield in Indochina, a new if imprecise American commitment to Cambodia, and the prospect of a longer, more complicated war. Ordinary life in Cambodia has been destroyed; many of the country's major towns no longer exist. All of these discouraging developments might never have occurred if the U.S. and South Vietnam hadn't begun to dominate the war in Vietnam so decisively.

Life in Vietnam breeds gloomy thoughts, and a year and a half here may have left an unreasonably large residue of gloom, but it seems to me that an unsatisfactory conclusion to the war is still likely. That opinion follows from personal, unexpert observations. It is based on a few truths about the Vietnam war — if there are such things — which Americans responsible for the war seem never to have been able to accept.

●

The most important of those truths, probably, is that North Vietnam is not going to give up. Their war is not just an experiment in expansionism, or a front for international Communism. The leadership in Hanoi is fighting to complete a revolution with origins in the 1920s, a revolution that has long been the central fact in the lives of the men who now rule North Vietnam. If they could have been dissuaded from their goals by adversity, the war in Vietnam would have ended long ago.

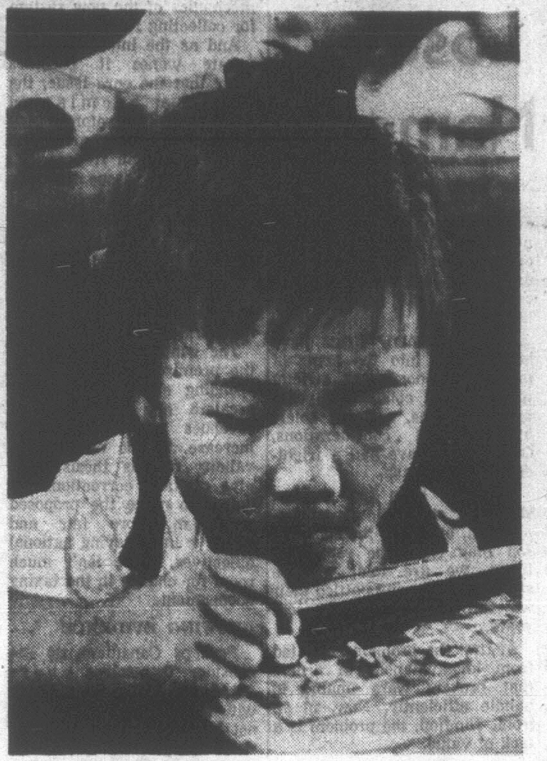
It would be comforting to think that the men in Hanoi had no interest beyond reunifying Veitnam, but the available evidence all points to a gloomier prospect. Their forces are already deeply involved throughout Indochina. One would be wistful or foolish to say their ambitions are any smaller than all of it.

●

American officials are still hoping to bring the Vietnamese Communists to their knees — even to one knee. Justifying the U.S. operation into Cambodia last spring, a spokesman for President Nixon on international affairs, one of the most influential men in the administration, revealed that the old temptation is still strong.

"It just cannot be that the North Vietnamese are the first people in history that are immune to any sort of material consideration," he said. Perhaps not. But after many conversations with Viet Cong and North Vietnamese prisoners and defectors, I have a different impression. Obviously the Communists need food and bullets to carry on the war, but they can get these things relatively easily, if not from their own supply channels then from ours. What they really depend on is determination and resourcefulness — not to win, but to keep going. They seem still to maintain a large supply of both.

Even now, when the Communists' military apparatus seems desperately weak in much of South Vietnam, the Vietcong organization is active. There have been more terrorist incidents this year in South Vietnam than last. South Vietnamese casualties have been higher this year than at any time in the war, except for the big Communist offensives of February and May, 1968. The Communists are changing their tactics, after tacitly admitting that military victory is beyond their corrent capabilities. They are not quitting.



VIETNAMESE STUDENT KIM LIM, 6
. . . in her future, many years of strife

●

This does not mean that the war will continue at a high level of intensity. It may actually quiet down to the point that many Vietnamese think there is no war at all. But a pause in the fighting will not remove the fundamental causes of the Vietnamese civil war.

One of Saigon's best-known fortune tellers assured me last week that there will be complete peace in 1973. And, he added, quickly, it will last until 1975.

●

Another unhappy and officially unacknowledged truth about Indochina is that America's allies and clients in the region are neither strong nor very competent. There is even a strong case to be made for the proposition that in Vietnam, at least, the people on our side are incapable of saving themselves. It is all too easy to forget or ignore the stupefying venality of South Vietnamese society, the selfishness of ordinary Vietnamese, the almost total lack of civic spirit in this society. Vietnamese kill each other, steal from each other, lie to each other by habit and tradition. Civil war may be Vietnam's apple pie — civil wars have gone on in one guise or another for most of Vietnamese history. The fundamental American optimism about human nature can be put to a severe test in this society.

My notebooks provide a dismaying collection of Vietnamese horror stories. The workers at a Catholic orphanage outside Saigon regularly steal the toys and gifts outsiders have donated to the orphans in their care. A Vietnamese woman could not learn if her soldier-son was in the hospital, because she could not pay the bribe a hospital official demanded for the information. A water-taxi driver in the Delta who was asked to take care of his village's new ambulance boat sank the craft rather than take on a new responsibility. A national assemblyman, Ngo Cong Duc, who has made a name for himself as a bitter enemy of government corruption, supported two notoriously corrupt candidates for the council of his native province. These corrupt men, both losers of government jobs because of blatant malfeasance, ran as Duc's men.

I do not mean to indict an entire people. Vietnamese are also capable of all the kindness and goodness the human spirit can produce. The same orphanage where workers steal the children's toys is visited every noon by a Vietnamese doctor who volunteers his time to take care of the orphans. And much of the dark side of the Vietnamese personality undoubtedly has been brought out by 25 years of war. But the Vietnamese character is an important factor in the war. It may, by itself, preclude the success of America's efforts here.

●

A more important source of American helplessness in Vietnam is the persistent American habit of ignoring or missing what is actually happening here. Thousands of American advisors in this country just do not know anything about the people or programs they are supposedly advising. Vietnamese have no qualms about lying to their big American brothers, and a surprising number of Americans obviously have no qualms about being lied to. Vietnamese Americans regard as real tigers often turn out to be corrupt cowards, or sometimes even enemy spies. A combination of barriers — linguistic, cultural, psychological — separate Vietnamese reality from the American consciousness.

Americans are also rendered ineffective in Vietnam by their own incompetence.

It is a difficult admission for an American with a normal allotment of pride and patriotism to make, but the United States has made a mess of the war in Vietnam in the most basic, practical ways. This is particularly true of the army, which has simply been unable to cope with Vietnam.

●

All of this amounts, I think, to an unconscious military admission that this is not the war for them — it's too difficult, too complicated, too uncomfortable. So the army makes the best of it, by breaking most of the rules of common sense and military behavior one can think of. The My Lai massacre was undoubtedly an aberration but, curiously, it did not surprise many experienced Americans in Vietnam. An army that didn't really know what it was doing had to make some enormous mistakes occasionally.

The United States has distributed aid in Vietnam the way an extravagant pastry chef applies icing to a cake. Undeniably, millions of American dollars spent in Vietnam have had positive effects. They have bought hundreds of miles of modern roads, rural electrification, improved crops and much more. The commercial imports financed by U.S. aid have transformed Vietnamese society, wrenching it out of a rural past into a motorized electrical present.

●

In the long run, though, these achievements may be less significant than the negative effects of American aid. And they are many. We have made the Vietnamese utterly dependent on us, almost like a father who has to prove his importance by spoiling his children. Not only do Americants have to provide all of the resources to maintain the fictionalized Vietnamese standard of living: Americans are also the distributors, accountants, repairmen and often even the managers of their own largesse.

The fundamental weakness on the South Vietnamese side of the Vietnamese civil war is that North Vietnam is a well-organized, disciplined, motivated nation, while South Vietnam has traditionally been a relatively lazy, disorganized, corrupt collection of factions. This may now be changing slightly, but if it is, the United States can claim little if any credit.

●

We have iced the cake magnificently, however — so magnificently that South Vietnam, still sloppy and corrupt and divided, has a good chance of surviving against North Vietnam for a long time. The South Vietnamese have too many soldiers, guns, helicopters, tanks, cannons, trucks, boats, airplanes and whatnot to lose any time soon. If they are to lose, it will take prolonged stupidity, compounded by corruption, divisiveness, economic chaos and a few other factors — of which the South Vietnamese are fully capable.

The fact is that the U.S. has already lost the chance to achieve most of the objectives that we once thought had pushed us into the Vietnam war. America has failed to contain Chinese influence in Asia. The U.S. has failed to show the would-be revolutionaries of the world that wars of national liberation cannot succeed. A real revolutionary would probably draw exactly the opposite conclusion from the history of the war in Vietnam.

The North Vietnamese appear to have done that when they decided this spring to open a whole new war of national liberation in Cambodia. The United States has failed to deter aggression or aggressors, as the Cambodian war also shows. We are left with the one objective we talked about most, and probably believed in least — defense of South Vietnamese "self determination."

●

Will 50,000 American dead be justified if we succeed in propping up an authoritarian government in Saigon while the Chinese smirk and the future of Southeast Asia remains in doubt?

One fact about the war seems to be indisputable: The United States made an enormous mistake in Vietnam, perhaps the biggest international mistake in our history. There seems no easy way to apportion the blame for that mistake; its origins are 25 years old, and the original error was compounded at regular intervals — in 1954, in 1961, in 1965.

I think the fundamental aspect of the mistake was to think that Americans could fix things up in Asia. The lesson of Vietnam should be that Americans can do no such thing. Our skills, our power and even our national character are not suited to the war in Vietnam, or to the war in Cambodia, or to any similar problem.

MEMO TO ADVERTISERS

"I am a Druggist"...

"To best serve the people of this community I maintain a stock of carefully selected merchandise. To be able to recommend the best product for every need, it is part of my training to know the standards of quality and measures that have been established by science and experience. When I order goods my selection is based on the known merits of these widely recognised standards.

"Then I advertise to give people the news of my store. Because I know that nearly everybody reads a newspaper I use newspaper advertising regularly. When people pay for newspapers they read them carefully for all of the news that is interesting to them. When my ads are newsy and contain useful information I know that people will read them because they are news."

Another fact that merchants like about newspaper advertising is that they can buy it on the basis of known values that are just as definite as the measures of weight and quality that apply to merchandise which they handle.

Businessmen cannot afford to speculate with advertising. When they buy newspaper space they can make their investments on the strength of circulation facts and figures that are verified. It is good business practice to buy advertising by such methods just as it is good business to buy and sell merchandise on the basis of known standards.

This helpful information is available from reports issued by the Audit Bureau of Circulations, a cooperative, nonprofit association of nearly 4,000 publishers, advertisers and advertising agencies.

At regular intervals the A.B.C., of which this newspaper is a member, sends an experienced circulation auditor to make a thorough inspection and audit of our circulation records. The FACTS established by his audit are published in an A.B.C. report which tells you: How much circulation we have; where it goes; how obtained; how much people pay for our paper; and many other FACTS that you need in order to KNOW what you get for your advertising money.

This newspaper is a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Advertisers are invited to ask for a copy of our latest A.B.C. report.

BILL WALKER

Now, the charitable thing to do is to dismiss the past lacrosse season as a year of trial and error, with many lessons learned, several key questions still unanswered, but in the main an honest and sincere attempt to lay the groundwork for a successful future.

Because the summer, if nothing more, has been vastly educational for the new group which this year assumed control of the Shamrocks, and formulated plans for the club's well-being.

They learned much, or should have, from the year's operation, and now must have more than a working knowledge of the particular problems that lie ahead, and more than they had five months ago.

Their problems lie deep, much deeper than appear on the surface. For it is no secret that before the present season began, the Shamrocks, if not almost dead, were just about to breathe their last. They had been shattered by defection, and torn by dissension, and it was problematical for a time if they were even wanted in the league.

Behind the scenes there were two moves to keep the club operative. The city association was willing, but bowed out in deference to the new group, which offered a brand new approach, a new executive and the usual life-saving plan for success.

●

However, in doing so, the Shamrocks got themselves involved in another sticky mess, not wholly of their own making. The city Senior B League, which also has enjoyed a fairly successful season, more or less went off on its own, and this didn't produce a pleasant working arrangement between the two groups, and probably, in the long run, had an adverse effect on the fortunes of the Rocks.

It is not the purpose here to say which side was at fault, because a case can be made for any argument, but it does appear that the disputants made little effort to resolve their differences during the season, and this didn't help to promote the game to its fullest, which must be done if it is to succeed. This should be obvious.

Still, a new beginning had been made.

Immediately the Rocks embarked on a recruiting drive, a dual coaching program was set up, and it was announced that the purpose was "to make the Shamrocks the personal goal of every kid in town."

"We have promised the league a contending team," said club president Chris Randall.

That was in the spring, and it must be said, fairly, that this was to be a contending team, but a contender that at times defied description.

Of course the final misery was that the team didn't make the league playoffs. Which in itself, isn't unusual, because in only one year in the past six has a Shamrock club made the post-season party.

●

But their failure was not total, nor their efforts completely undeserving of commendation, for even though the out-of-town player drive failed miserably, and the merits of a dual coaching plan are still a live topic for discussion, there often was hope for better.

For after all, the team record of eight victories, though hardly designed to stimulate a much-needed renewal of fan interest, was twice as good as the previous year's record, and in a season where the underlying theme was "out with the old, and in with the new," this had to be termed as acceptable, even if disappointing.

But somewhere along the line, something went awry.

It was inexplicable then, and still is, because the inconsistency of the club was hard to explain. It was a continual embarrassment to the coaches, particularly to Bert Bertoia, who will claim to this day that "his team can do better."

●

He said it very early in the year, and again when the Irish seemingly had an excellent chance to wrap up at least third place after winning three out of four over one two-week period. But the ink was hardly dry on the headlines extolling the virtues of the club when the team just as suddenly stopped producing.

Why? No one professes to know, and neither does Bertoia.

Because there still is the lingering suspicion that this is a nucleus of a pretty fair lacrosse club, and with hundreds of youngsters coming up from the minor ranks there should be no shortage of talent for the future.

And so the Rocks should bounce back. They have too much going for them, and the future of inter-city lacrosse, not to.

But first the lines of communication with the minor leagues must be mended. The rift shouldn't be that difficult to repair, and the efforts would be well rewarded.

Probably with a real contender.

Because, otherwise, an excellent start has been made.

Namath Says No, But Giants Ready

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — The big question about Joe Namath today is not does he or doesn't he, but will he or won't he?

The question concerns his playing in Sunday's National Football League exhibition game between New York's crosstown rivals, the Jets and the Giants.

Expected to attract 70,000 fans and provide the stage for a rehearsal of their first regular season meeting in history on Nov. 1, the game now has also become the setting for what might be Namath's debut as a quarterback whose main concern is the Giants' pass rush.

Namath, AWOL from the Jet camp the first two weeks of training, reported last Tuesday and said he was being plagued mentally because football no longer was his main concern.

"I don't think I can play," he added.

Those words, reflecting Namath's fears his knees would not stand up to the rigors of another season, have made this more than the usual pre-season for the shaggy-haired quarterback with the million-dollar arm and dime-store knees.

At the top camps earlier in the week, Coach Weeb Ewbank of the Jets did not rule out Namath's playing against the Giants, but did emphasize that "it would be foolish to play him to win" and said if he played, it should be considered a bonus.

Alex Webster, the Giants coach, has said he expects to see Namath and has realigned his front four to get the best pass rush.

The best guess is that Namath, with only four days work behind him, will not see any significant action.

CONTRACT PROS EYE TROPHY

DONATED FOR AMATEUR TENNIS IN 1900

This May Be Last Year of Davis Cup

Because of the possibility tennis pros might compete, this may be the last year of the Davis Cup.

Dwight F. (Pete) Davis, Jr., whose father first donated the cup for amateur competition in 1900, said at New York he would retire it after this year if contract pros are allowed to participate.

Davis said in an interview he has been approached by United States Lawn Tennis Association officials about allowing contract pros to compete for the cup.

"When my father donated the cup, there was a spirit of competition he was seeking," said Davis. "It was a spirit for nations to compete with each other and at least every other year to bring out the players and spread the game to all countries.

"But if the pros are allowed to participate, which country could get into the challenge round beside the U.S. and Australia? No other country has the contract pros capable of winning.

"I can't see the acceptance of pros in this. It would definitely kill the spirit of the cup as it was given."

United States amateurs will attempt to retain the trophy for another year when they meet West Germany in the challenge round at Cleveland, Aug. 29-31.

West Germany defeated Spain at Dusseldorf this week in the inter-zone final that was delayed several days by rain. Christian Kuhnke gave the Germans an unsurmountable 3-1 lead in the five-match series when he routed Spain's Manuel Orantes 6-3, 6-3, 7-5.

Earlier, Kuhnke and Wilhelm Bungert had defeated Manuel Santana and Juan Gisbert in doubles after the teams had split the opening singles matches.

To defend the trophy, U.S. non-playing Captain Ed Turville has selected the four players — Arthur Ashe, Bob Lutz, Cliff Richey and Stan Smith — who won the cup last year.

Kuhnke, Bungert, Ingo Buding and Jurgen Fassbender have been selected by West German officials, who have agreed to the nomination of Harry Hopman, former Australian captain, as chief umpire for the challenge round.

Meanwhile, World Championship Tennis, which has under contract such outstanding players as Rod Laver, John Newcombe and Pancho Gonzales, has announced a 10-year contract to promote the $200,000 tennis champions classic.

The $200,000 Classic Field for 1971 again will be drawn from the 24 players under contract to World Championship and non-contract pros competing by invitation.

The program in its inaugural year established a unique concept in tennis with a series of $10,000 winner-take-all matches leading up to a final tounament, in which the winner's prize was $35,000 — more than double the largest prize ever previously offered in traditional tourney play.

Balding Has Lead In Alcan Race, Too

HOLLY BOTHAM
. . . spectacular shot

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — The course was tougher but the birdies were just as plentiful for Toronto's Al Balding who took the lead Friday in the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association tournament.

Balding fired a 68 to go with Thursday's 69 and a 137 total to lead Gary Bowerman, also of Toronto, by three strokes heading into today's third round of the 72-hole, $25,000 tournament with $5,000 going to the winner.

The 46-year-old regular on the United States Professional Golfers' Association tour carded five birdies in his 34-34 round Friday and registered his only over-par hole in two days.

The low 100s and ties among the 163 who teed off Friday qualified for the next 36 holes today and Sunday. The cutoff was 161.

"I played much better golf Thursday," said Balding, who explained he had to work harder Friday because his tee shots were not as long or accurate as they had been the previous day.

FAIR STROKE MARGIN

Balding's steady round also moved him to the front of the competition for the Alcan Golfer of the Year award for Canadian pro golfers.

The award is decided by scores registered in two of three open tournaments (Ontario, Quebec and British Columbia) plus the CPGA.

After 36 holes of the 72-hole PGA, Balding had a low-gross stroke total of 559, four fewer than Bill Wright Jr. of Edmonton and Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont.

Wright entered the CPGA with a seven-stroke lead on Balding.

Wright fired a 77 Friday for a 148 total and Norman was in at 145 after a round of 71.

WAKEHAM THIRD

Bill Thompson of Copetown, who held the lead after 18 holes with Bill Rose, also of Copetown, shared third place with Bob Panasiuk, the 29-year-old Windsor, Ont., player who set a course record 64 Wednesday, and Bill Wakeham of Victoria. They had 142 totals.

Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg and Dick Munn of Vancouver were at even-par 144 while Leon DeCaire of Buttonville, Ont., Adrien Bigras of Rosemere, Que., and Phil Giroux of Montreal shared 145 with Norman.

At 146 were Bruce Murray of St. Catharines, Ont., who had a 70 Thursday, and John Henrick of Brampton, Ont.

Grouped at 147 were Gary Maue of Breslau, Ont., after a spectacular 68 Friday, Doug Bruton and Frank Whibley of Toronto, Herb Holzscheiter of Ashburn, Ont., and Rose.

Defending champion Bob Cox Jr. of Richmond, B.C., staggered in with a 77 and a 152 score.

Vaughan Trapp of Victoria had a 77 for a 150 total. Ron Wiley of Vancouver soared to an 81, and 156; Dick Silverberg of Glen Meadows, in Sidney, also had an 81 for a 161.

Holly's Double Eagle Features Golf Contest

Holly Botham, the current Canadian and provincial junior champion, fired a double-eagle at Uplands Golf Club Friday but the spectacular effort wasn't enough to keep her four-player Vancouver team from losing a match for the Marilyn Palmer award against a Vancouver Island junior squad.

With an amazing display of power for a girl, Miss Botham collected her double-eagle on the 430-yard, par-five 9th hole, where her second shot, with a No. 5 wood, hit the green about six feet from the flag and rolled into the hole during the event that was played in conjunction with the Vancouver Island junior women's championship.

The Islanders — Jill Smith, Dawn Coxford, Sue Metcalfe and Marian Main—wound up with a 300-321 victory in the handicap team competition.

Playing with Miss Botham on the Mainland squad were Kathy Hobkirk, Lorna McPherson and Margo Roxburgh.

Miss Smith, the Victoria champ, took the Island crown with a 90 gross score. Miss Coxford was second (93), Miss Metcalfe, third, (95), and Maureen Barnes, fourth, (100).

Eldorados Edge Molsons in 13th

VANCOUVER — Victoria Molsons fell victim, 7-3, in 13 innings Friday to the powerful Vancouver Eldorados in the opening round of the B.C. senior "A men's softball championship.

Following Campbell River's 5-4, 11-inning victory over Vancouver Molsons in the tourney opener Friday night, Victoria Molsons and Vancouver Eldorados battled until 2 a.m.

Each team scored a total of three runs in the seventh and eighth frames, forcing the extra innings to break the deadlock.

Victoria's Glen Bullen, who pitched eight innings, struck out a total of 14 Vancouver batters while allowing only two hits.

Reliever Mike Rye finished the game, allowing four hits, Vancouver's Bob Carrick cracked the second of his two home runs in the contest in the 13th to drive in three runs.

Winning pitcher Ron Ormsby went the distance, striking out 14 Molson batters and adding a solo homer in the last frame.

Defending-champion Bate Construction of Victoria was scheduled to play its first game today.

The tourney winner will play Alberta champion Calgary Chiefs August 29 and 30 for the Rocky Mountain region title and the right to play in the national championship in Winnipeg, September 5-7.

New Zealand Nips Canada

OSAKA, Japan (Reuters) — Australia, New Zealand, Mexico and Japan won games during the first day of play in the women's world fastball championship here today.

Canada, presented by Saskatoon Imperials, was defeated 2-1 by New Zealand. Australia defeated the Philippines 4-1, Mexico won over Formosa 7-4 and Japan defeated Zambia 11-0.

YACHTING TRIALS

Intrepid Scores First Win

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Intrepid pulled ahead less than a half-mile from the final mark and handed Valiant her first defeat in a shortened race as the America's Cup defence candidate trials resumed Friday on Rhode Island Sound.

At the same time, the Australian yacht Gretel II and the French yacht France opened their best-of-seven series for the right to challenge the United States defender, and Gretel won by 6 minutes 30 seconds.

Intrepid, raising her record to 3-1, and dropping Valiant to the same mark in these trials, took advantage of a shifting breeze on the first leg and gained a lead of 1:08 at the first mark. She increased it to 1:43 on the next leg.

Valiant came back on the third leg and gained a brief lead, but Intrepid took it back less than a half-mile from the mark, and crossed with her narrow margin.

The boats took more than four hours to sail the 10.8 miles of the three legs in light and flukey winds, leaving them less than two hours before the time limit expired. Rather than have that happen, the race committee decided to stop the race at that point.

The French yacht, handled by 68-year-old Louis Noverraz, led Gretel at all the turning marks on the 24.3-mile course, but fell back on the 4.5-mile final leg.

Their second race will be held Monday.

Happy Day For Mayor

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Mayor Muni Evers described Friday as "one of the most gratifying days I've had since I've been mayor."

On Friday the city of New Westminster and the adjoining community of Burnaby were chosen by the federal government as co-hosts for the 1973 Canada Summer Games.

"Sometimes as a mayor you win some and you lose some, and you're frustrated in others, but this happened to be a brainchild of two or three of us on my second day in office last January 1969, Evers said.

TAX CONCESSION GRANTED EXPOS STIRS UP STORM

TORONTO (CP) — Mayor William Dennison strongly attacked the federal government Friday after he learned that owners of the Montreal Expos are to receive tax concessions from the national revenue department.

"That's the last straw," Mr. Dennison said. "I can't comment calmly. This is so upsetting.

"The federal government has gone much too far.

"They're just throwing away the money and as usual, Toronto isn't getting any part of it."

Stanley Randall, Ontario trade and development minister, said the Expos are getting the concessions because the "the squeaking wheel gets the most grease" from the federal government.

* * *

Lew Hayman, president of Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League, said he knows of no such tax concessions available to CFL teams nor of any efforts by football teams to gain such concessions.

A spokesman for Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League said professional hockey teams in Canada do not receive any such concessions but would definitely press for something similar if the Expos gain such a financial break.

BILLY CASPER
. . . frustration ends

Course Owes Bill a Bundle

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Masters champion Billy Casper figures the Pleasant Valley Country Club golf course owes him something—and he's anxious to collect in the $150,000 Avco Classic.

Casper, frustrated in previous visits to the 7,212-yard layout, fashioned a second masterful round and charged into a three-stroke lead Friday at the half-way mark of the 72-hole test worth $32,000 to the winner.

"This course owes me a bundle and I'm going to be back to collect," Casper said just one year ago after being embarrassed by a first-round 81 and failing to make the cut for the first time in 50 tournaments.

DAN SIKES SLIPS

Casper fired a four-under-par 68 in the opening round Thursday, but trailed by two strokes as Dan Sikes fashioned a brilliant 66. Sikes slipped to a 74 for a 36-hole total of 140 Friday, after Casper had applied heavy pressure with a 67 for a 135, nine under par.

Casper, playing with what he called "about the best timing I've had in some time," missed just two greens and carded five birdies without a bogey on the par 36-36—72 layout.

SOLID FAVORITE

He earned his birdies on putts of 8, 20, 6, 2, and 35 feet and established himself as a solid favorite to collect a fourth tournament victory on the tour this year.

As Sikes slipped, Chuck Courtney, who had a first round 72, made a run at the lead. Courtney had seven birdies and one bogey for a 66 to come within one stroke of the competitive course record. He moved into sole possession of second place with a 36-hole score of 138.

The only two Canadians in the tournament, George Knudson of Toronto and Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver, failed to make the 147 cut. Knudson had rounds of 79-70 while Vollmer was 78-74.

Summer Swim Meet Produces 19 Records

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nineteen meet records were broken at the second day of the British Columbia summer swimming and diving championships Friday, led by Pat Gilmore and Bill Mannahan of suburban Burnaby.

Miss Gilmore, 18, who trained only four weeks for the meet after medical problems, set meet records in the 17-and-over 220-metre individual medley and the 110-metre freestyle.

Mannahan, like Miss Gilmore a summertime-only swimmer, easily won the boys' 17-and-over 220-metre individual medley, cutting 9-10ths of a second from his old record of 2:29.9.

In diving finals completed Friday, Kathy Doherty of North Vancouver won the girls' 13 and 14 division with a record 217.35 points while Andrew Whitmore of Kamloops took the boys' 11 and 12 title with 150.15 points.

Kathy Saucier, also of Kamloops, won the girls' under-10 diving crown with a record 109.80 points. Jay Sherry of Coquitlam took the boys' under-10 diving trophy with 95.85 points while teammate Heather Crawford was first in the girls 11 and 12 at 177.90 points.

The girls' 13 and 14 winner was Kathy Doherty of North Vancouver with a record 217.35 points.

The three-day meet ends today with finals for older swimmers and divers.

Bowling Victory

Hilda Turner and Percy Middleton captured the Dogwood Trophy Friday, defeating Ed and Isobel Heard, 18-16, in the final of a mixed-doubles competition played at Lake Hill Lawn Bowling Club.

The event started Monday and attracted a total of 23 pairs.

HAVEN'T HAD MUCH EXPERIENCE

OTTAWA (CP) — A revenue department source Friday said Montreal Expos of baseball's National League will be permitted to write off part of their investment in player contracts as a business expense for tax purposes.

While a spokesman for the department said he could not disclose the business affairs of any individual taxpayer, he indicated that normal business accounting practice will be applied so far as possible to the Expos.

"We haven't had too much experience with professional athletic clubs, and there is no mention in the Income Tax Act of the cost of acquiring athletes," he said.

* * *

For taxation purposes, the revenue department will regard the price paid for acquiring ballplayers as an initial capital investment by the club.

"The contracts with the players are an asset," an official said.

Then, each year, the tax department will allow the club to charge part of the capital cost of the players as an expense of doing business for that year before levying income taxes on the club's net income.

OUTDOOR SCENE

By Barry M. Thornton

Deer hunters on Vancouver Island this season will have difficulty finding adult animals, says regional biologist Ian Smith. The shortage of adult animals is a direct result of the severe winter of 1968-69. Hoever, should we have suitable hunting weather late in the season, hunter success will probably be up from last year.

Marking the 1969 season was a shortage of yearling deer as this age group suffered the greatest during the big freeze. As fawns going into the 68-69 winter they were unable to cope with the heavy snows and severe temperatures with the result that their age group was seriously depleted by winter-kill. The 1969 season also saw a shortage of fawns as a result of abortions by the does during the severe winter.

Many of those that were born were in such a weakened condition that they were unable to survive. However, "the winter of 69-70," to quote Smith, "was one of the best winters in history." "There will be a shortage of adult animals resulting from the small number of yearlings and fawns surviving the winter of 68-69, but we will see an abundance of fawns this season."

The total deer kill in 1968 was approximately 28,000 for an approximate 22,000 hunters. In 1969, the total kill was only an approximate 19,000 for an approximate 16,000 hunters. Publicity of poor deer showings accounted for the decreased number of hunters last year. However, the success ratio for the 1969 season was only slightly below that of the 1968 season. The fact that the 1969 season was shortened by two weeks, during the time of the best deer shooting, almost certainly was responsible for the lower success percentage.

Road checks showed that the Cowichan and the Nimpkish were the areas worst hit during the severe winter. These were the sections where the deer couldn't get near the coast and hence had to fight deep snows during the winter. Other small herds throughout the Island, isolated from the coast were also severely stricken. Habitat in these areas will dictate how quickly the herds improve.

Poor deer habitat in the Cowichan will greatly prolong the recovery period in that area. In the Nimpkish area, however, spring counts have shown an excellent recovery because of prime habitat. In fact, when asked what area would provide the highest hunter success during the coming season, Smith was quite emphatic that the Nimpkish Valley was the section to hunt.

Smith stated that serious consideration had been given to closing the elk hunting season for this year. However, there was such a limited kill of bulls last year, only about 10 animals were reported, that he could see no possibility of an overkill.

"As a game manager," Smith said, "if I can see a harvestable surplus of animals and no valid reason for not shooting these animals, then I believe that hunters should be allowed to hunt them."

Little is known of the habitat requirements and life history of the Roosevelt Elk on Vancouver Island. Comparable studies of the Roosevelt Elk in the state of Washington cannot be related to Vancouver Island for here they inhabit both the east and west coast of the Island.

Recent studies this past winter conducted by the fish and wildlife branch were hampered because of a lack of snow. This made it difficult and in many cases impossible to find the herds. However, to quote Mr. Smith, "Elk continue to have top priority on Vancouver Island for wildlife management and study."

★ ★ ★

On Vancouver Island few hunters seriously hunt the Roosevelt Elk because of the difficulties encountered hunting them in their required habitat. However, for those that do, it is truly a quality outdoor experience an dprovides the ultimate trophy for Vancouver Island big game hunters.

Counts on blue grouse populations are not yet complete but, said Smith, "blue grouse populations look good." Some concern has been expressed by bird hunters that inclement weather late in June may have seriously depleted broods of young grouse. For all upland game bird populations, wet weather in June can be disastrous if prolonged. It is at this time that the chicks of the year, because of their age and size, are very susceptible to illness from dampness. What effect our late wet June had on grouse populations this year will not be known until hunter effort and success is recorded.

Island grouse hunters have larger daily bag limits this year, Smith added, "because there is no biological reason for the low limits of past years. Daily limits on grouse have been equalized throughout the province this year. This is because there is no indicated effect on grouse populations by hunters — ever. We do not know what factors limit grouse populations."

The daily bag limit this year is ten blue grouse and ten ruffed willow grouse.

Migratory bird hunting seasons have been announced by the Canadian Wildlife Service. Following are starting dates, seasons and daily bag limits:

Bandtail Pigeons	September 1 to October 25	Ten
Ducks	October 10 to January 10	Eight
Snipe	October 24 to January 10	Ten
Geese	October 24 to January 10	Five
Brant	December 26 to March 10	Four

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

Mets Close Gap on Pirates Behind 'Koosman of Old'

By Associated Press

Jerry Koosman, New York Mets lefthander, was in the driver's seat for a change Friday night as the Mets handed Cincinnati Reds a 4-1 National League loss, the third straight game the powerful Reds have dropped.

Koosman, a 17-game winner last year, completed his first start since June 25th, limiting the Reds to seven hits. He has been plagued by a sore arm this season and shows an 8-6 record.

"That was the Koosman of old," said Mets manager Gil Hodges after Koosman struck out four Reds and issued only one walk.

The run he gave up was unearned when Bud Harrelson booted a fourth-inning grounder, his second error of the game.

That ended a record-tying 54 games of errorless ball by Harrelson.

Claude Osteen of the Dodgers won his fourth straight over Pittsburgh Pirates at home, stopping the Pirates 2-1 on a seven-hitter, sending the Mets to within 1½ games of the East Division-leading Pirates.

In other National League games, San Francisco Giants trimmed Chicago Cubs 5-1, Montreal Expos tripped Atlanta Braves 6-4, St. Louis Cardinals trounced San Diego Padres 14-8 and Philadelphia Phillies and Houston Astros split a doubleheader, the Phillies winning the opener 9-3 and the Astros the nightcap 9-1.

THREE EXPOS HOMER

The Expos rolled to their fourth straight triumph behind the home-run hitting of Bob Bailey, Rusty Staub and John Bateman. Carl Morton, who needed eighth-inning relief help, picked up his 15th victory. Clete Boyer and Bob Tillman homered for the Braves while Hank Aaron had a pair of RBIs, sending the right-fielder into eighth place on the all-time list with 1,829.

FIRST HOME RUN

In the American League, Tom Tischinski hit his first home run to give Minnesota Twins a 4-3 victory over Washington Senators. Tischinski was subbing for regular catcher George Mitterwald who was meeting a military reserve committment.

Twins manager Bill Rigney said he was looking for a spot to lift Tischinski for a pinch hitter, but presented him with a fishing rod instead.

Victory moved the Twins six games ahead of California in the American League West. The Angels bowed to Baltimore Orioles, 5-0, as Dave McNally became the first 19-game winner in the majors this season. Cleveland Indians trimmed Oakland, 6-3, for Sam McDowell's 18th victory, and Detroit Tigers edged Milwaukee Brewers, 6-4.

Kansas City Royals edged Boston Red Sox, 2-1, as Bob Oliver singled home the winning run with a bases-loaded hit in the 12th inning, and the New York Yankees remained 10 games behind Baltimore with a 4-2 win over Chicago White Sox.

Hockey Canada Handed Largest Federal Grant

OTTAWA (CP) — Grants of more than $1,000,000 to 50 sports governing bodies and sports programs were announced Friday by Health Minister John Munro.

The minister also announced that Hockey Canada is to get $273,227 to promote amateur hockey, especially in smaller towns and communities.

Mr. Munro said in an interview it is highly unlikely that Canada would have a team in international competition this year "but I am always hopeful."

Hockey Canada has been entrusted the job of getting Canada's national team back on the ice but only on the condition that it is allowed to dress the best players available.

In Hockey Canada's view, and that of the government, this means being allowed to use professional players, an idea that is not accepted by the International Ice Hockey Federation.

With Canada out of international play, at least for the time, Mr. Munro said the grant to Hockey Canada would allow that organization to fulfill its other role of getting more young Canadians onto hockey rinks.

The grants run from a high of $121,265 to the Canadian Track and Field Association to a low of $971 to the Canadian Amateur Speedskating Association.

THE GRANTS:

Canadian Badminton Association, $24,888.
Canadian Federation of Amateur Baseball, $47,261.
Canadian Amateur Basketball Association, $39,718.
Canadian Amateur Boxing Association, $10,047.

Want a New Bicycle? Just Land Top Salmon

Dozens of youngsters will be taking boat rides Sunday at Saanich inlet and for one of them the trip on the water will open the gates for plenty of future rides on roads and paths.

The 16-and-under boys and girls will be competing in the annual junior salmon derby of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association and all will be aiming at the top fishing prize of a three-speed bicycle, donated by the Victoria Daily Times, which is assisting the VSIAA in this year's derby.

Entering the scramble for prizes is easy. The young anglers just go fishing during the derby hours of 6 a.m. to noon. Any salmon of legal size may be entered for prizes provided it is presented no later than 12 noon at weigh-in stations located at Anglers-Anchorage, Brentwood Boat Rentals, Gilbert's and Hall's boathouses.

Dozens of prizes, which will be presented at the Anchorage about 12:30 are up for grabs, VSIAA junior members will also be competing for trophies, and free ice cream and soft drinks will be available at Hall's and the Anchorage.

In short, it's a day for fishing and fun, and, hopefully a day to take along the sunburn lotion.

Three Drivers Share Second Stocker Spot

Ross Surgenor will be trying to pad his lead in driver standings over Larry Walker tonight as late-model stock cars return to race at Western Speedway.

Surgenor, who drives a 289 cubic-inch 1958 Ford, currently has 481 points, 110 more than Walker.

Walker campaigns in a 318 cc 1957 Dodge.

In the stocker class, scheduled to share the program tonight, three drivers will be attempting to snap a deadlock for second place.

Ted Mortel, Gary Madden and Larry Pollard each has collected 326 points, 30 less than Larry's father, Earl.

Time trials start at 7 p.m. with racing at 8.

By Any Number Aces Are Sweet

By any number, there is one hole at Uplands Golf Club that must look just as sweet to Mike Perks.

Last December, Mike gave himself a slightly-early Christmas present by scoring a hole-in-one on the 175-yard 11th hole.

This week Perks collected another ace on the same hole, now the 8th because of an experimental change in the order of holes.

View Royal Girls To Test Vicettes

View Royal, holder of the provincial juvenile girls' title, will test older opponents Sunday when they play a pair of exhibition games against Vicettes, champions of the Victoria Senior Women's Softball League.

The games are slated for Central Park, at 1 and 3 p.m.

Canada's Northland: Time for Caution

By GEORGE WOODCOCK

Once again, as in Diefenbaker's roaring days, the North had swung into the focus of Canadian interest. Then — in those bounding times before we had been sobered by so much talk of ecology — the idea was how best to exploit and populate that glittering dreamland.

Now the perspectives have shifted; in one way or another we are concerned with preserving the North, saving it from foreigners, saving it even more from ourselves.

One of the books I am reviewing is about that question of preservation. The other, which can be dismissed fairly quickly, is about a North that has already almost vanished.

NORTHERN REALITIES: The Future of Northern Development in Canada, by Jim Lotz. New Press. $8.50.

THE HOWLING ARCTIC, by Ray Price. Peter Martin Associates. $7.50.

Ray Price, author of The Howling Arctic, wrote once a kind of boom-dream history of his home town, Yellowknife. Now — in a volume rather inexplicably commissioned by the government of the Northwest Territories — he has written, according to his sub-title, on "The Remarkable People who made Canada Sovereign in the Farthest North."

Perhaps the most cogent criticism is implied in the preface by that expert side stepper Pierre Trudeau for not once does the Prime Minister actually mention the book he is introducing!

And, in the sense that a book is a controlled and constructed artifact, this is certainly a non-book, a rambling tissue of anecdote and fragmentary history, mostly on the level of gossip, occasionally rising to epic, like that tale-telling which goes on so endlessly in the North, fascinating for the first hour of each evening, rather boring for the rest.

However, the great fault of The Howling Arctic has nothing to do with construction. It is a matter of omission. Mr. Price can be described as Farley Mowat's opposite. Where Mowat perhaps over-plays the sins of the white man in the Arctic, Price atrociously underplays them.

He spends much time telling us about Eskimo murderers, but little is said of the legal and extra-legal crimes of men from "outside", murder and — in terms of destroying ways and means of life—worse than murder.

Mr. Price unfortunately sees Northern history through those bright spectacles colored with progress which too many people wear in the fringe towns where North and South meet, like Yellowknife, Churchill and Whitehorse.

Jim Lotz's Northern Realities is quite another matter. Again, it is no model of writing, for the author finds it hard to avoid lapsing into the dry abstractions and the dryer jargon of the social sciences, and this makes his book at times rather unpenetrable and always rather unevocative. Nevertheless, Northen Realities is worth reading by anyone interested in sub-Arctic problems; it is sane, humane, and lacks the comforting and uplifting illusions.

The title is, indeed, rather misleading, since basically this is a book about the Yukon rather than the whole North. Though he knows regions of Arctic Canada as scattered as Ungava and Ellesmere Island, most of Lotz' experience has been of the Yukon Territory, and it is from this experience that he draws his facts.

His concrete proposals also relate entirely to the Yukon. At the same time he does have a wider view of the North, of its people, of the potentialities of the land, and of what it means to Canada.

▣

But that view is marred by the fact that he does not reveal a real appreciation of the ways in which the Yukon, climatically a sub-Arctic area traditionally dominated by the expectations of miners and populated mostly by whites, differs from the Northwest Territories, where, except in the Mackenzie Valley, the climate is Arctic, the majority of the people are Eskimos and Indians, and the economic base of life is more varied.

Apart from the cold winters, in fact, there is not much in common between the tree-clad Yukon and treeless Keewatin, though in recent years they have come to resemble each other in the development of government as the main industry.

Mr. Lotz suggests that we should give up the old megalomaniac dreams of the North as a reservoir of riches and a potential settlement area. Realistically drawing his facts from his knowledge of the Yukon, he demonstrates that the North is not likely to become much more thickly populated than at present, because only a few Canadians enjoy its rigors.

Its ecological balances are so fragile that it will stand comparatively little development. Its minerals are too expensive to get out, and in any case as we move into an age of "doing more with less" they may not be needed for centuries ahead.

We should, he suggests, think of the North as important in four ways.

It is necessary to maintain sovereignty, to keep Canada free towards the Pole.

It is necessary to preserve and renew the cultures of the people who belong to the North and to make it an environment in which they will choose to remain.

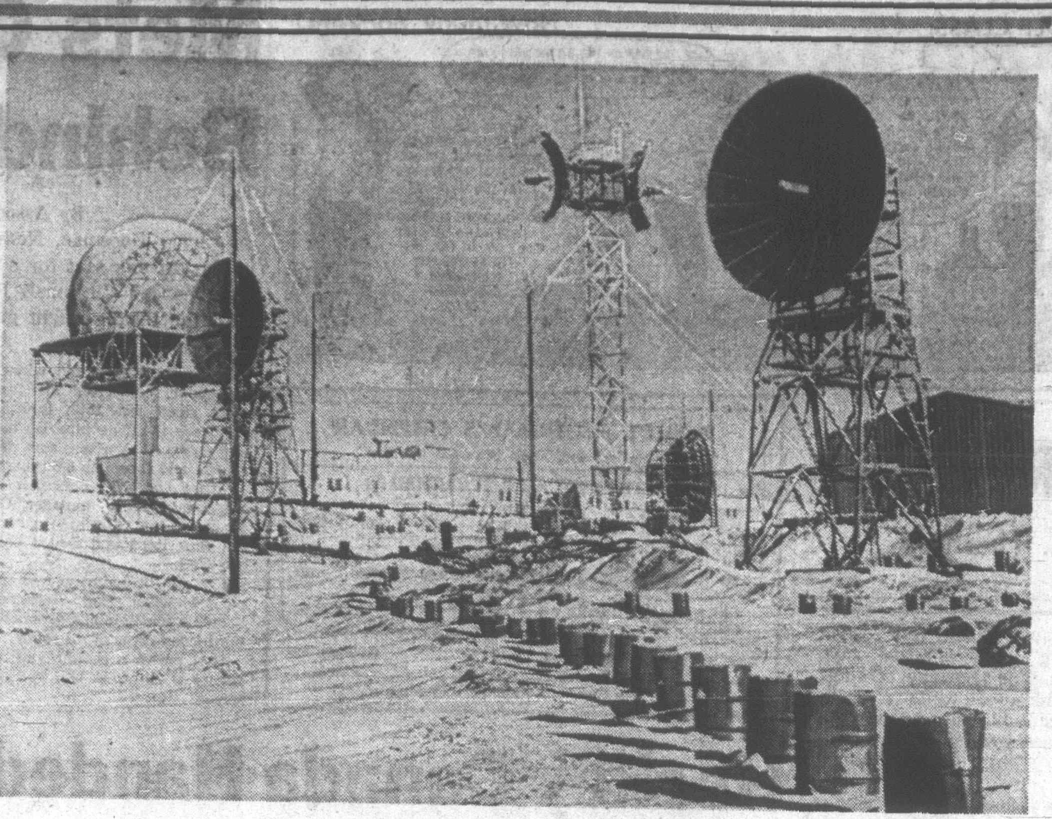
It is necessary to conserve its resources, and here he considers tourism as the most important present resource because it is renewable and in relative terms harmless to the environment.

Finally, there is an almost spiritual dimension to the North as the wilderness that must be kept as the complement to an increasingly urbanized southern Canada; this may be the best function of the North, to exist as a learning environment, where all kinds of skills can be acquired, including the skill of enduring and the skill of solitude, and where many forms of research can be centred round a new kind of open university.

Northern Realities is a provocative book, and Mr. Lotz' suggestions must be considered seriously, particularly now when we should be holding back on any further exploitation of the wilderness until we have begun to overcome the urgent environmental problems that at present face us.

When we have at last learned to use unspoilt areas without irremediable damage, it may be time to move into the North more decisively.

The Bennett Dam — our own B.C. responsibility — is already doing great and totally unforeseen damage in areas of the North far outside our provincial boundaries. It is a lesson in the caution that must be used in invading a harsh region where paradoxically the natural balances are infinitely delicate.



A delicate ecological balance

Fact, Legend Blended for Nature Lover

By BEATRICE CARROLL

For anyone who is tired—and frightened—by accounts of the dumping of nerve gas in the Atlantic Ocean, or the latest story of pollution and the dying life of our rivers, Old Man's Garden is recommended reading.

The dedication of this beautiful little book by the artist and naturalist, Annora Brown, reads: "Dedicated to All Nature Lovers everywhere, who can see a tree and leave it standing, who can see a flower and leave it growing, who can see a bird and leave it flying, who can see a moth and let it live" . . . and everyone who feels these words personally will treasure it.

Old Man's Garden is a potpourri of Indian legends, classical mythology, history, excerpts from the journals and records of famous explorers in the Canadian west and north including Alexander Mackenzie, Sir John Franklin and those inveterate travellers, Lord Milton and Dr. Cheadle, also the Americans Lewis and Clark, and sound botanical knowledge skilfully and lovingly blended. Miss Brown calls it "a book of gossip about flowers of the West."

Her telling of the creation of this garden by Old Man, a mythical being common to all Indian tribes, is the story of Genesis, Indian version. Old Man, who created the World, and sometimes known as Glooscap or Raven, was part sun, part god, part man. He first created a world of water, then added land, with mountains and hills and prairies, but still found it bare and bleak, a desert landscape.

OLD MAN'S GARDEN, by Annora Brown. Gray's Publishing. $5.50.

So he covered his World with grass and flowers and trees, and then created animals, birds and finally Man, and set him down to live in this garden. One can only wonder what Old Man would say if he could see the ravages of the late 20th century in his forests and meadows and swamps.

With poetry, legend and a naturalist's experience Annora Brown writes lovingly of the flowers, plants and trees of the west; of their magical properties in the making of ancient medicines, of their use in making dyes, of their food properties, and of their beauty.

She tells the reader that rock tripe, an edible lichen, once saved the life of Sir John Franklin when he was starving in the Arctic; that Pliny called sage a restorer of youth if placed under the pillow at night; that prickly pear, in a well-known Blackfoot legend, has a direct connection with the seven stars of the Big Dipper, as its magic power saved seven brothers from the fearsome Bear-Woman. Even the humblest wild flower or grass seems to have some curious or little-known inheritance.

The author's charming illustrations appear throughout this handsome book. There is a good index, and Miss Brown gives the Latin botanical name as well as the more familiar and imaginative plant name. Who would not wish to know more about St. John's Wort, Monkey Flower, Grass of Parnassus, Wolf Willow and Shooting Stars?

Old Man's Garden was first published in 1954, and has been out of print for several years. The fortunate collaboration of the Alberta-born author, who now lives and paints at Deep Cove, and her publisher, have resulted in a revival of this delightful and valuable addition to Canadian nature lore.

A Loving Portrait Of Bard as Artist

By DAVID DUNSMUIR

Anyone looking for a general volume on Shakespeare's life and times, to point a moral or adorn a table, could do much worse than choose Anthony Burgess' new book.

Attempts to recapture the flavour of Elizabethan England often suffer from Falstaff's problem: they have "a kind of alacrity in sinking." And the reader's heart sinks with them, weighed down by accumulated evidence, footnotes, and afterthoughts.

Burgess, though, wears his scholarship with a difference. He is cheerfully (and persuasively) selective as he picks his way through the critics' killing-ground of Shakespearean biography, without dallying to snipe at counter-theories. The result is an affectionate portrait of one artist by another, not an anatomist's casebook.

SHAKESPEARE, by Anthony Burgess. Clarke Irwin. $14.75.

To modern trivia-lovers, the playwright seems to have left remarkably little except his work as proof that he passed this way at all.

We have a few business contracts, a marriage bond and baptismal records whose dates show why he married Anne Hathaway with such insensate speed, and financial accounts involving a man-about-theatre named Shagspere, or Shaxberd, or what you will. As far as hard facts are concerned, the rest is silence.

A first sketchy biography broke the silence in 1709, almost a century after his death. Since then, as each new era saw its tastes reflected somewhere in the surviving plays and poems, works have been interpreted or virtually rewritten to match the times.

Burgess has no patience for the Romantic snobbery that sought to transform his subject into a Byronic figure.

(In one sense, he has already done that bit. His novel Nothing Like the Sun celebrated the four hundredth anniversary of Shakespeare's birth with a tragical-historical-comical-pastoral pastiche on his sexual versatility.)

He also gives short shrift to the "Baconian heresy" and to similar theories that Shakespeare was simply a front man for his betters.

▣

Victorian England was especially anxious to believe that a publicity-shy Top Person had written the plays and rented the name of an ill-educated actor. Claimants have been thrust forward in droves — Mary Queen of Scots, an illegitimate son of Queen Elizabeth, the Countess of This, and Earl of That, even a syndicate of Jesuit priests. In discounting them, Burgess makes some perceptive comments on the nature of the creative process and the belief than only the best schools can set it stirring.

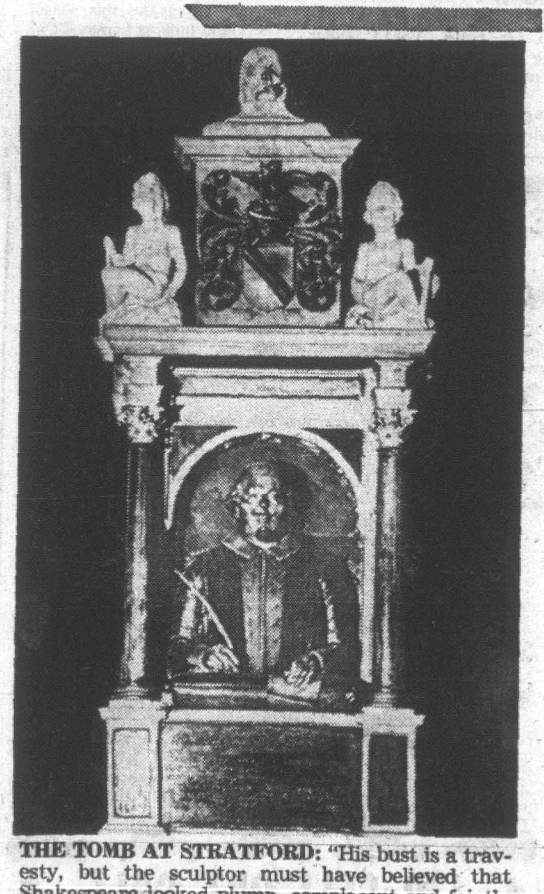
Sections offer views on the basic function of language ("to maintain social contact in the dark"), the ritual origins of drama, and Elizabethan word-lore. They have the flair that the author showed in his contributions to linguistics, and more recently in a brilliant study of James Joyce.

An exuberant way with words and a vivid narrative style have marked Burgess' 16 novels. Both gifts enliven his latest work. European intrigues and court scandals echo from the stage. The sounds and smells of London, the horrors of plague and public executions, are all starkly described. An inspired grab-bag of contemporary illustrations adds to the effect, with courtiers in oils heraldically aglow.

Best of all, the plays are shown developing as entertainments for an age rather than statements of moral conviction set down for all time.

The dramatist himself is as elusive as ever, but this biography should deepen appreciation of the scope of his labors. He was a theatre owner as well as an actor-director, and made a decent living out of his stock in the company. He avoided political trouble, stayed on good terms with his business associates, and retired with honor to the country.

As a success story in the arts, that's hard to beat.



THE TOMB AT STRATFORD: "His bust is a travesty, but the sculptor must have believed that Shakespeare looked plump, complacent and faintly imbecilic." (Anthony Burgess).

New Turcaret Translation Was Made for the Actors

In addition to its program of plays and concerts, Victoria Fair has begun a series of paperbacks which, it is hoped, will leave a more lasting impression of Victoria's commitment to the Arts. The new translation of Turcaret, now in repertory at the McPherson Playhouse, is the first of these books (Peter Garvie's music-drama, The Ancient Wound, is the second), and it is expected that each year will see at least one addition to the series.

The book is handsomely designed and exceptionally well printed. It is also furnished with an engaging and informative afterword by Dr. Jennifer Walters of the University's French department that clears away many of the misunderstandings about what Lesage was attempting to achieve in writing this play.

Turcaret, or The Financier, is a picaresque satire on greed. "Big fleas have little fleas" . . . etc., and the tasteless, nouveau-riche tax-collector who fleeces the nation is himself cheated by his mistress, who is cheated by her lover, who is cheated by his servant, ad infinitum.

Ralph Allen's translation is an attempt to capture the spirit rather than the letter of the original play. Its world is not the assured one that Moliere depicted, but a jostling company of gulls and cheats, the sort of society that Fielding and Hogarth were to pillory later in Eighteenth Century England. Despite its ugly subject matter, there is a vivacity, a lust for money, if not for life, that drives the characters onward while their letters-of-credit fly from hand to hand. It is this zest that the new translation captures so well.

TURCARET, by Alain-Rene Lesage, New English version by Ralph G. Allen. Victoria Fair Drama Series, No. 1. Paperback. $2.

For, above all, this is an acting version. The only other modern translation of the play was originally produced for the BBC's Third Programme, and it is almost literal in its fidelity to Lesage's text. The result is clumsy, formal English impossible to put over on the stage.

In this new version, the characters play off one another, and their speeches constantly build toward explosion point. Their wit depends frequently on irony, where looks and gestures betray the real intentions behind their seemingly polite formality. There is an inventiveness and speed in Dr. Allen's dialogue that is perfectly attuned to these characters who must turn any new circumstance to their advantage.

Indeed, the fifth act is almost a new play within the bare framework of Lesage's original, as Turcaret's pretensions come tumbling down amidst the elegant wreckage of the Baroness' dinner table. The frenzy of the action is spiked with malice, gossip and heartless attitudinising that recreates the ruined glamor of the Sun King's fallen Empire.

Now that the new Turcaret has been added to Samuel French's latest list of plays, it is to be hoped that this spendidly actable version will bring a half-forgotten classic down from the study shelf and onto the stage where it belongs — A.W.J.

Behind Africa's Ivy Walls

By ANTHONY JENKINS

Perhaps the most pressing modern issues, next to pollution, are unrest among the young and dissatisfaction among the emerging nations of the Third World. This new novel by the Nigerian writer, Chukwuemeka Ike, gives one an inside look at both these problems in an amusing, if simple way.

The newly independent African nation of Songhai has decided to stem the flow of its youth to foreign universities by establishing a model one of its own. Naturally, the American and the British are anxious to help them do it — in their own way.

The plot-line enables Ike to score some neat hits at the Ph.D-worshipping Americans and at the British love of university Senates and their regard for solid, unflashy scholarship.

In the middle of all this are the Africans themselves. Young Dr. Okoro, having distinguished himself in the bedrooms and the examination-halls of the U.S.A., is picked by the Americans on the campus as the man who will take over the vice-chancellorship once the university becomes fully Africanized. On the other hand, Professor Ikin, an older man who has come back from England with a simple BA, is supported by the British.

At first this struggle for power seems to group around the two opponents, but it soon becomes clear that the real issue lies between the two academic life-styles. And the battle rapidly widens to take in wives, mistresses, the local press, foreign embassies and the CIA.

It is here that the book turns into something more than a comic glance at a fluttering among the academic dove-cotes. It's not hard to see parallels between this and the general struggle for influence in New Africa, for it turns out that Dr. Okoro is from a province that is largely Protestant, whereas Professor Ikin comes from a Catholic province so that the whole campus dissolves into turmoil.

THE NAKED GODS, by Chukwuemeda Ike. Collins. $5.

A WINTER IN THE HILLS, by John Wain. Macmillan. $6.75.

The familiar ground is covered with a spritely freshness which is above all due to Ike's understanding of the African mind.

Ike is on less firm ground with his Western characters. He has no real ear for the quirks of British or American speech, and though their main characteristics are dimly recognizable from his sketchily blocked-in caricatures, none of them seems to talk like an actual person. Nevertheless, one can forgive a great deal in this deftly turned charade.

By contrast, John Wain's A Winter In The Hills appears positively middle-aged. Although it has a rattling good plot and some well-drawn characters, its wistful and romantic values seem soft and flabby at the centre.

Roger Furnivall has spent most of his adult life tending to his invalid brother, Geoffrey, in an effort to allay his feelings of guilt at having been the only one of his family to escape from the rubble of their blitzed house. Released by his brother's death, he decides to make up for the lost loves and ambitions of his life.

He chooses North Wales as a likely place to pick up the threads of his identity along with a knowledge of colloquial Welsh which will enable him to secure a lectureship in the department of Celtic Studies at Uppsala, where the female students are tall, blonde and perfect.

However, Roger accidentally becomes involved in a battle with an unscrupulous entrepreneur who is determined to buy up all the privately owned buses which chug up and down the mountain roads so that he can sell the entire group to a large, city-based company which wants a monopoly in the area. In the process, Roger overcomes the distrust of the locals for "foreigners," and comes to learn far more about them than their language.

As a suspenseful story about proudly independent individualists, the novel recreates a thoroughly recognizable and three-dimensional world. The old leather bus-seats, stone-walled roads, and suspicious but goodhearted mountain people are all so completely realized as to be almost tangible.

But this makes the romantic ingredients of the plot glaringly unsatisfactory.

Woodstock: An Explosion of Joy

A Film Review

By PETER McNELLY

The mind staggers as the heart explodes with joy. Woodstock.

Any words a reviewer can tack to the trailing and dying imagery of this incredible movie cheat its overwhelming power.

I am reminded of the words of St. Paul after seeing Heaven: "The eye has not seen and the ear has not heard . . ."

Woodstock, of course, was not Heaven, but a real human event which brought 400,000 people together in 1969 for three days of music and fun to a farm in the foothills of New York's Catskill Mountains.

The movie, condensed to three hours from an original 120 hours of raw footage, is an epic documentary of sheer brilliance.

With 120 hours of film and a cast of 400,000, a director could shape that material into nearly any kind of statement he wished.

Director Mike Wadleigh and his assistant Thelma Schoonmaker produced a celebration. Not a carnival ride of freaks, but an ecstatic vision of the finest qualities of man: gentleness, joy, creation, and dance.

They saw Woodstock (the event) as a coming together of mankind. not just the hippies, freaks, the curious and the musicians, but people. They're not like the folks next door with power mowers and television sets. But they are people.

To live together in such numbers for three days required "emergency" measures such as sharing food, clothing, toilet facilities, bathing grounds and each other's company.

The miracle of Woodstock is that it worked. And no one seems more surprised than the promoters. Their mood changes from cautious optimism to exuberant overstatement as the festival nears its end. Naturally the gathering cannot last. A society could not sustain itself camped cramped upon a hill forever by the woods.

They may be strength in numbers, but there is also frailty. The movie shows this. The crowd is vulnerable. Everyone needed everyone else's help. The more they helped each other, the more they seemed to surprise themselves.

While the outside world declared the site a disaster area, the Woodstock nation danced and made love.

As the crowds gathered to the point that the state of New York had to close down a freeway to prevent more people from arriving, the promoters realized they could not prevent people from attending for free.

So they made the event free, and the spirit set the tone of those three days. An NBC newsman asks one of the promoters whether they would lose a lot of money. But the question is ridiculous. Of course they would and of course it made no difference. Look at the crowd. It seems endless. Do you charge admission for life itself?

▣

Even a special, momentary kind of life? When a child is born, could a doctor refuse to help the delivery simply because she cannot pay? Not at Woodstock.

As one of the townspeople put it: "The kids are hungry. They have to be fed."

The music is stunning. Wadleigh often splits the screen into two or three parts, and rythmically blending close-ups of the performers, he transfers some of the experience and much of the energy which flashes between music and the musician, his instrument and its electric amplifier.

Watch the musicians. They work hard.

Woodstock shows as many of the different attitudes and experiences of those days as it can dramatically sustain.

These experiences tumble upon the screen, each to its own character, nearly all a moving statement on some aspect of human life.

The editing is done with such skill that it becomes impossible to tell whether one is witnessing simply facts or an esthetic transcendence of those facts.

Wadleigh has probably done the most effective public relations job of all time. But he has also created a soaring vision of those three days when half a million young people proved, however briefly, that life is Dionysian.

Bastion Takes Pause But Just Briefly

This afternoon in Centennial Square, Bastion Theatre actors romped through their final children's theatre performance for this season.

As of now, The Dandy Lion is being tucked away in theatrical trunks and the show wagon dismantled after a record season, thanks to the co-operation of the weather.

There were only five rainouts of the 84 scheduled performances of the show and its companion piece, The Three Bears.

But the between-season hiatus for Bastion Theatre will be of small duration, for the eighth season, up to Christmas, is set and ready to go.

The first children's show, Flibberty-Gibbet, directed by Peter Mannering, scheduled to start on Sept. 19 at Newcombe Auditorium, is cast with John Heath in the title role.

On Sept. 30, the first major show of the season — Neil Simon's The Star Spangled Girl — will open at McPherson Playhouse. Direction will be by Toronto's Edwin Stephenson, who will also play the lead role.

The girl will be played by Judy Radu who recently joined the Bastion staff as actress-designer.

The company's school tours will start a little later in the season. Marge Adelberg's musical version of Hansel and Gretel will be taken to elementary schools on the Island whule secondary schools will see a special adaptation of Thornton Wilder's The Skin of Our Teeth.

Carnival by Bob Merrill and Michael Stewart will be the December musical. It will feature a young professional singer, Janie Woods, who is at present rehearsing the role of Adelaide in a Winnipeg production of Guys and Dolls.

The Woodstock Scene

. . . Never to Happen Again?

By TOM ZITO

Just a year ago a group of young people almost as large as the American force in Vietnam converged in Bethel, N.Y., for the Woodstock music and art fair. The resulting community of 400,000 long-haired, blue-jeaned Americans who lived together for three days has been analyzed, glorified and condemned.

But despite all the pondering, the only thing that can be said with certainty is that there will never be another Woodstock.

Woodstock stands as a mythical incarnation of the aspirations of many young people today. People got together, took care of the needs of their neighbors, shared food, water and dope, enjoyed music and conversation and made love, not war.

Woodstock worked because it just happened. Nobody went hoping that there would be 400,000 other people there. Nobody went because this was going to be the scene of the year. Nobody promoted Woodstock in hopes of amassing a fortune overnight. People just went, and kept going, and all of a sudden, once upon a time, Woodstock happened.

Woodstock may well have marked the highwater point of rock culture. In the year that has passed since, things seem to have taken a downward turn. Last December, the Rolling Stones decided to give a free concert in Altamont, Calif., largely for the purpose of making a movie. Hell's Angels were hired for $500 worth of beer to guard the stage, and in the ensuing concert 18-year-old Meredith Hunter was beaten to death as he tried to rush the platform where their satanic majesties were performing "Sympathy for the Devil."

Other festivals have also been less than festive. In July, 200,000 people assembled in Byron, Ga., for a gathering that featured too much sun, too little water, overloaded sanitation facilities and a lot of bad drug trips.

Also in July, the Randall's Island pop festival was doomed by infighting among New York's radical-left groups, few of the scheduled acts ever appeared. Last month's Powder Ridge festival in Connecticut wound up with no music, a polluted Powder Puddle and a bad drug trip for nearly one out of every thirty festivalgoers.

People heading to the recent Strawberry Fields festival encountered innumerable hassles as they tried to cross the border into Canada. Those who finally made it found a macabre carnival of commercialization, overstrained medical facilities and, again, a lot of bad drug trips.

But more important than this there was an overriding expectation that things would be just as they were at Woodstock. "Hey, has anybody had a baby up here, yet?" a girl asked a friend. The two most frequent questions at the festival were "Were You at Woodstock?" and "How do you think this compares?"

What has doomed all these other festivals from the start (with the exception, perhaps, of the Goose Lake, Michigan gathering, which also appeared spontaneous and unexpected) is the overt and crass attempt of naive promoters, who neither know nor care anything about rock, to consciously create other Woodstocks. In trying to set up festivals as one more way to make a little money, the promoters not only rob the whole festival idea of its magic, but also generate the kind of bad vibrations that lead to commercialization on every level.

Another factor that may well be generating a lot of bad festival vibrations is the frenzied use of drugs — not simply the marijuana and mescaline of Woodstock, but heavy usage of LSD, cocaine and herion — by a huge number of people at recent gatherings.

To see thousands and thousands of people tripping together might be a beautiful sight to some, but it also raises a great fear that a whole generation may burn itself out.

Library a Familiar 'Jewel'

Looking at Art

. . . With Gordon Rice

The gallery scene is always less active in the summer, in Victoria just as elsewhere. Changing exhibits will begin in September and until then viewers must content themselves with the permanent collections displayed in most art galleries and museums.

Having nothing to review then, we can always take ourselves on a stroll around town, to view some of the old buildings that give the city of Victoria much of its particular flavor. Like the Public Library, for instance.

●

This beautifully-put-together edifice at Blanchard and Yates is familiar enough to Victorians, yet a word or two should be said about it now and then. It's small, but in many ways it's a jewel. Soft rough-hewn natural stonework like this is seldom if ever used today, and here it is employed most imaginatively.

Take note, some time, of the way the builders of this library alternated layers of the very rough-hewn stone with layers of finely-chipped stone, each layer setting off the other perfectly. The touches of lacy stone carving, very fine work, are quite sparingly applied, and this restraint in ornamentation is quite impressive.

The architect, in other words, had just that sense of "enough"; the ornament does not overpower or outshine the most important feature which is that alternation of rough and regular surfaces.

●

One can stand and marvel a while at the really fine carving and fitting of the stones around the front door and the semi-circular windows above it, a quality of hand-craftsmanship unknown in architecture today. The big stained-glass window, seen from inside, is a fine piece of design work too, reminiscent of Tiffany glass and other such features of Art Nouveau . . . the art style so popular in 1904, when this building was made.

Even the floor at the entryway is something to notice, with its spidery circles of mosaic tiles. One suspects Victoria will not see as classy a job of building as this again, unless we see in our lifetimes a completely different spirit toward our environment.

A look around on the inside betrays the present spirit. As in most buildings today (it must be admitted) there is little care. The reworking of the inside of the old building shows now awareness of the specialness of the original architecture. The newer wing is worse, being merely adequate. One sees and feels economy, and nothing else.

●

The City Hall, done in a sort of Frontier Victorian style, is really a plainer sort of building and yet it does lend itself well to colorful paint (mauve, white, light-blue) and the trimming of boxloads of flowers.

All this "color" disappears once one is inside. Everything is renovated, and enervated. A few brick archways have been retained — just enough to remind us of what might have been—and these soften slightly the general effect; architecture which otherwise belies the colorful exterior of the building, and makes it just like any other municipal building anywhere.

However, the way this old building is joined to its new wing, on the west side, shows some imaginative planning.

As you pass into the new wing it is almost like stepping outside. The ivy-covered brick walls inside the high ceilinged passageway seem hardly separated from those outside, and it is hard to believe at first that one is in an entirely enclosed area.

This large open area has a fine conservatory-like effect, with many large, real (not plastic) plants, all tended with care and flourishing, something which can be a real architectural asset . . . or if you like, compliment.

●

The architecture of the new wing is nothing extraordinary, but it does have a clean, spacious, generous look, and must be a pleasant place in which to work. Some other buildings around town will be described next week, including some of the moldering beauties which we never notice much, until they're suddenly gone.

Sounding Board

. . . By Audrey Johnson

Slowly, subtly and painlessly we are coming to the end of a long and perfect summer.

There are still, hopefully, a few weeks left but as each one passes one holds one's breath, conscious that it may contain the last of the golden days.

One of the signs that the height of summer is beginning to wane is the closing this weekend of two popular entertainments.

Jerry Gosley's Smile Show packs it up for the 18th season in Langham Court Theatre and Bastion Theatre's show wagon trundled through the city streets from Bastion to Centennial Square for the last time today.

There will still be concerts in Beacon Hill Park, entertainment in the Butchart Gardens and Victoria Fair productions at McPherson Playhouse until Labor Day weekend.

But the tempo is slowing toward the full stop and the brief following pause that marks the end of the summer and the beginning of the fall season.

Time was when the summers were timeless — a long arc of days when musicians locked up their instruments and went outdoors from May to late September. And everybody thought of the theatre as being, like stew and dumplings, a concomitant of winter.

Now most of the performers, especially actors, but many musicians also, are glad to be able to grab a two-week break between seasons, in early September.

Some organizations will have already launched their seasons for the public. Victoria Symphony's first pair of concerts will have been played and Bastion Theatre's new children's show in its new location — Newcombe Auditorium — will have had its premiere.

▣

The Symphony Society is well in the lead for the fall and early winter with the number of events scheduled. No less than 11 regular and special concerts between the end of September and mid-December.

Bastion Theatre has two adult productions planned for that period and the Theatre Guild at least two.

One event at the McPherson Playhouse, scheduled for Nov. 11-13, has some unusual features and should prove a unique as well as highly amusing affair.

In the first place, the piece. It is not a play nor a revue exactly, but a series of James Thurber sketches and dialogues with musical accompaniment, arranged by the humorist under the title, A Thurber Carnival.

Secondly, the group of well-known and experienced Victoria actors who will be directed by a top Victoria director, are not members of any single organization, old or new.

They have come together to donate time and talent to a special cause — the bursary fund of the Victoria Conservatory of Music.

The Royal Winnipeg Ballet, Canadian Opera Company presentation of Offenbach's Orpheus in the Underworld, the guitar-playing Romero family and three Beethoven Festival concerts are among the goodies being offered by the Symphony between Sept. 27 and Dec. 13-14.

The Musical Art Society and Victoria Operatic, the latter with their all-out production of South Pacific, are also fitted into that period.

All of which is just the beginning of what clearly is to be a long, interesting and, in anticipation, rich winter season.

And now, a temporary farewell, readers. This column won't be appearing for a month because, as you read these words, the writer will have exchanged Victoria for London, England.

Yes, it's a holiday. But you guessed it. I'll be doing all the shows, going to all the concerts and festivals I can squeeze in.

And maybe I'll have something to say about them when I get back.

NEWLY appointed general manager of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra is Thomas Gerald McHale. McHale formerly held senior executive positions in the administration of the Automobile Association of Great Britain. He is also a practising musician and has played with a number of British orchestras. He has lived in Victoria for five years and has been manager of the B.C. Automobile Association. He assumed his new duties this week.

Typhoon Anita Death Toll 20

TOKYO (AP) — Typhoon Anita dissolved into a tropical storm today as it headed north in the Sea of Japan for a second swipe at land.

Police said 20 persons were killed, 10 reported missing and 360 injured when the storm roared through western Japan Friday.

Nearly 600 houses were destroyed, 2,500 damaged and 55,000 flooded as Anita whipped across Shikoku, Japan's smallest main island, and the southern part of the main island of Honshu.

The weather bureau said the storm was headed north at 22 miles an hour and still packed winds of 67 miles an hour.

New Dimensions For Film-Goers

NEW YORK — That short, expressive three-letter word "Wow¾" is warranted by a recent announcement by a controversial director who has otherwise helped make the screen safe for the four-letter word.

Joseph Strick, director of "Ulysses" and "The Tropic of Cancer," told a press conference that he has obtained a licence to make the first movie in which actors will be seen in the round, and will even jump into the laps of the audience, without anyone wearing trick glasses.

The film will be a hologram motion picture, shot with the use of laser rays. Holograms can be projected so that the audience can see completely around the image presented — and a hologram actor can even mingle with the audience, like an incorporeal ghost.

The word hologram means "a depiction of the entirety" and the transmitted object seems to be so real that when you reach out to touch, you are startled when your fingers thrust into a gauze of light. Awed reporters reached vainly for a champagne glass which Strick projected in his Broadway offices.

The hologram was discovered by Drs. Dennis Gabor and Ernest Lieth in the early 1960s.

To make the film, Strick formed the Laser Film Corp., and this week received a licence to be the first director to shoot a film with laser beams. "It may be only a toy," he said, "or it may be the most revolutionary innovation since the invention of the camera."

Hologram movies have not been made yet, he explained, because of the problems of lighting movie sets and projecting the films. Strick believes both problems can be licked.

Higher-powered, pulsing lasers can now be used to shoot the picture, with the drawback that only film with low emulsion speeds will trap the rays, meaning that for the moment outdoor scenes are out.

'Scripts Just Notes For Film'—Richardson

By LEE LANGLEY
Manchester Guardian

LONDON — It was, logically enough for a filmmaker who believes that the cinema is a matter of images rather than words, an image that first aroused Tony Richardson's interest in Ned Kelly. A highly mythical image: the brooding armoured, solitary horseman of Sidney's Nolan's paintings.

"What was important to me about Ned Kelly was the poetry and the temperament, the inner qualties of the man, not the physical thing. If you're looking for Burt Lancaster and a Western you won't like it."

"Ned Kelly," which opened at the London Pavilion, was made on location in Australia, which Richardson describes as "a marvellous country full of horrible people," and of crises, tribulations, and problems — mainly brought about by the casting of Mick Jagger as Kelly.

Does the director feel the result justifies the troubles? Yes, he says, he does. It had to be made in Australia, where it all happened. And Jagger was, for him, the ideal, the only possible casting. He's prepared to face the fact, of course, that not everyone may agree with him.

"I became interested in a man who was a criminal, a rvolutionary, a dreamer, an idealist—who wrote letters to Members of Parliament from his hideout. In choosing Mick I felt he was absolutely right for the part. He had the personality, he had the face . . ."

The script of "Ned Kelly" was written by Ian Jones, an Australian who is an authority on the subject, in collaboration with Richardson.

For the film he plans next, "I Claudius," based on Graves's book, with, he hopes, Jagger playing Caligula, Richardson has written the screenplay himself. Not that he likes writing.

"I don't like it at all, but all the writers I admire ultimately resent the director's intrusion and the fact that in the end the writer is the servant of the machine."

"And this must be so, because a script, as such, is nothing. It's part of a story the director is telling. The theatre, on the other hand, is a writer's medium, it's the word that speaks. In the cinema it is the image that must speak."

He says he loves doing theatre — and since the early, spectacular successes at the Royal Court with "Look Back in Anger," "Cards of Identity," "The Entertainer" and so on, he has directed regularly in London and on Broadway. But, he adds, he always feels the theatre is a sort of holiday. Really, he's a film maker.

"I do think that for a long time I was too influnced by the theatre and literary values. I still am, but I'm trying to purge myself of that. I think I have a literary hang-up and literary hang-ups aren't a good thing for a film director: the thing is that, finally, film is not about words.

But the English are very involved with words, and sometimes the very best writer isn't the best for the job because he won't adapt himself. I may not be a very good writer, but I don't think a script needs to be very well written — for me it's notes for a film. If you notice the words, I think that's wrong."

There are times, I point out, writer's hackle showing, when you notice the words because they just aren't good enough. He maintains this shouldn't happen if the director has done his job properly.

He cites "My Night with Maud" as a typical example of the literary movie, seized on with delight by the critics because it's so well written.

TONY RICHARDSON

"The Graduate?" . . . But he doesn't think it's cinema. This, I feel, won't do at all: can't you have both? "M.A.S.H.?" Pushed, he concedes that, but reiterates that a well written script is not vital.

Richardson does not go in much for mulling over his work: of the twelve films he has directed since "Look Back in Anger," he has no favourite, and never sees his old films over again. "I'm enthused by a subject, make it, and walk away from it." But he does think there is a pattern, a link in his work, all of which reveals, he feels, different facets of himself.

"I think that all the pictures I have made have a humanist base. I'm concerned with human action human character, and human behaviour, I'm not saying any more. People always want to pin you down, get you to evaluate what you've done. I leave that to others. I don't want to write record sleeves on my work."

By "others" he does not mean experts, especially crticis, whom he barred from "The Charge of the Light Brigade." He dislikes the idea of a filter between a work and its public: someone "telling them what to think. I believe in individual response, not sales technique. And although I'm appallingly pessimistic about almost everything—life in general—I'm not pessimistic about people's response to art.

"I think that a work of art that is alive will finally get through. This is the real fear of our society today: that a man must make a choice for himself, must say I don't want it made easy. That really one has to try to put back the power of choice to the individual."

When Richardson—long before it was fashionable to do so—broke into the big league by directing a major film without any previous experience, he was a gaunt, unapproachable young intellectual with an incredibly languid Oxford drawl overlaying the Yorkshire vowels. At 42 he has filled out a little and appears to enjoy his material and physical well-being.

WEEKEND'S TOP TV SHOWS

Tonight

PRO FOOTBALL. 5 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. The Winnipeg Blue Bombers and the Hamilton Tiger-Cats clash on Hamilton's home ground. Tom McKee, Russ Jackson and Don Chevrier cover the action for CBC.

FOOTBALL SPECIAL. 6:30 p.m., Channels 7 and 12. The Minnesota Vikings meet the Houston Oilers in a pre-season exhibition game on Texas ground.

JACKIE GLEASON. 7 p.m., Channel 8. In deepest Africa the vacationing Honeymooners set off on a hair-raising safari. Songs include Boys Who Bring 'Em Back Alive, We Must Be Out of Our Minds and It's Fun to Come Home.

ONCE MORE WITH FELIX. 7:30 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Julie Felix plays hostess to singers Harold Lang, Tom Rush, John Renbourn and Terry Cox. She sings This World Goes Round and Round and Pastures of Plenty. Tom and John team up for No Regrets.

COMEDY PLAYHOUSE. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. Simon Says Get Married is a spoof on computer matchmaking. Bob Newhart is in the starring role as painfully shy, introverted scientist Charles Fenton and Simon the Computer matches him up with a vivacious, extroverted beauty played by Dorothy Provine.

FAMILY AFFAIR. 8 p.m., Channel 6. A little romantic interest (played by Ida Lupino) enters French's relatively uncomplicated life. She is an English barmaid-turned-noblewoman who shakes French with a proposal they take up a romance they'd dropped years before. Good fun.

CATHERINE McKINNON. 8 p.m., Channel 8. Singers Joel Dennis and Allan Bruce join Catherine. She sings Step to the Rear, People and Catch the Wind. This is the last show of the series for Catherine.

ADAM-12. 8:30 p.m., Channel 5. Malloy and Reed investigate informer Tee Jay, an ex-junkie who's the suspect in an assault-and-robbery case.

ENGELBERT HUMPERDINCK. 9:30 p.m., Channel 4. Jonathan Winters makes a guest appearance (as Maudie Frickert and Elwood Suggins) and Dusty Springfield and Buddy Greco do musical bits. One production number spoofs the elaborate Hollywood musicals of a couple of decades ago.

Sunday

CHALLENGING SEA. 5 p.m., Channel 8. Surf's Up! is a look at surfing around the world, including film footage of top surfers in Hawaii and California and the highlights of a United States surfing championship at Huntinton Beach, California.

HE AND SHE. 5 p.m., Channel 12. A sick cat, a mouse in the house and a poison scare, the type of domestic crises which would singly flatten most women, all arise at the same time to turn a dinner party for Dick's boss into a first-class fiasco. Alice Ghostley is guest star, as the boss' wife.

DISNEY. 6 p.m., Channel 2. 7:30, Channel 5. Willie and the Yank is a three-part Civil War drama. Tonight The Deserter begins his adventures. Willie Prentiss is a young Confederate soldier who accidentally shoots his superior officer, then runs for the north.

MUSIC MACHINE. 7 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Rhonda Silver of the Machinery is in the spotlight. Moe Koffman and his orchestra back up the group for such songs as Departure by Rhonda, Try, Try Again by Bob Francis and Spill The Wine.

LAND OF THE GIANTS. 7 p.m., Channel 4. Great shades of King Kong! A great gorilla gets Valerie, but a friendly giant rushes to the rescue. And like the lion and the mouse, said giant is soon in need of the earthlings' assistance.

MY WORLD. 7:30 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Monroe is under fire on two fronts for his less-than-reverent attitude toward women. His editor bawls him out for some of the cartoon barbs he fires . . . and a suave widower is making quick points with his neglected wife. It's a rerun show, but worth seeing twice.

COMEDY TONIGHT. Jack E. Leonard swaps insults with Marty Barris, Jacqueline Susann and comics Lenny Schultz and Fred Willard round out the guest cast. Under fire are the generation gap, the army, war movies, big business, one-upmanship, businssmen's clubs and health. Laura Greene sings I'm a Woman.

SULLIVAN. 8 p.m., Channels 2, 6, 7, 12. Lee Marvin and Woody Allen are the headliners, and appearances are also made by Jo Anne Worley of Laugh-In; singers Shirley Bassey and Oliver; the Yale Glee Club; and the Castro Brothers.

SMILE-IN. 8:30 p.m., Channel 9. Ed Grant's Stove and other Stories of the Maine Woods. Marshall Dodge spins yarns like the time the wind lifted Ed Grant's cabin off its foundations and the fisherman who found a mink with human intelligence.

BONANZA. 9 p.m., Channel 5. Robert Lansing stars in Danger Road. Gunny Riley is a former army officer who was branded for desertion and Ben Cartwright can't bring himself to forgive the man . . . but he does insist, in finest Bonanza fashion, that Gunny get a fair break.

Avoid Labels, Indians Urged

Red Power as an organization longer exists, but the Indian movement is still going strong, a young Indian couple told a small gathering at the University of Victoria Thursday night.

Eight persons turned up at what they thought would be a Red Power meeting led by outspoken Mowhawk model Kahn-Tineta Horn. Miss Horn didn't show.

The Victoria Youth Council organized the meeting as part of Youth Week, but cancelled it when they received no word from Miss Horn.

The eight who had gone in hopes of hearing Miss Horn stuck around for three hours to hear Chuck and Nonnie Elliott of the Tsartlip reserve in West Saanich outline what was happening with the Indian movement.

"We're not Red Power. There's no longer a red power organization. We want to avoid labels. The term Red Power frightens people, they think of black power," said Elliott, counsellor of the Tsartlip tribe.

Elliott said he preferred to call North American Indians' activities the Indian Movement.

"We're not out to take anything that isn't ours, we just want justice for our people. We want our people to be able to think of other things besides where their next meal is coming from."

1970 Will Be 'A Good Year'

LYONS, France (AP) — Beaujolais vintage 1970 will be a "magnificent year," the French Wine Growers' Institute announced today.

Despite hail storms which destroyed some vineyards in the northern part of the Beaujolais growing area last month, the current vintage will be better than last year's both in quality and quantity, the institute said. The grape harvest begins around Sept. 15.

In the Burgundy wine-growing area, 50 miles farther north, the hail storms destroyed an estimated 35 per cent of the 1970 crop.

Rural Laugh-In Looking Better

By HARVEY PACK

NEW YORK — During the summer it is difficult to find anyone to interview along the TV beat. Most shows are either on haitus or busily taping the first weeks of the new season. Only a few days ago a press agent sadly confessed that even for money he could not come up with a warm body for an interview.

For the moment . . . that remark is invalid. CBS has come up with a warm body. A very warm body.

Her name is Lisa Todd and her form will be completely wasted on the small screen as she becomes the new girl on the scene in "Hee-Haw."

Red-blooded American men who have heretofore had no use for country music will suddenly find themselves adjusting the fine tuning when Lisa comes on the scene to do a few funny bits on CBS' rural "Laugh-In." She's an amazing looking gal and when she makes an entrance, everything on camera will be delightfully blotted out.

In heels, she stands almost six feet and her vital statistics are given as 40-24-38. Because she does not belive in hiding her assets, her press tour on behalf of "Hee-Haw" resulted in such abrupt head-turning in cities across the nation, that some oglers may never miss the mini.

At New York's Kennedy Airport, two advertising men rushing to catch a plane walked directly into a wall while trying to see if the back of Lisa was as impressive as the front.

SHOP OWNER LOSES POTFUL

GREAT YARMOUTH, England (UPI) — When Mrs. Alice Royal packed up her china stall, she came in for a shock. A helper had sold a 54-cent teapot containing the day's take — over $72.

Toronto Buys Today

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Tourist and Convention Bureau announced Friday it will sponsor the NBC Today Show, to be broadcast live from Toronto Sept. 17-18.

Shows of Canadian origin, to be produced live in Montreal and Ottawa as well as Toronto, are also being sponsored by the federal government, the Ontario government tions. Total cost is estimated at $150,000.

The Toronto bureau spokesman said this kind of exposure will increase Toronto's $172 million tourist market.

A PICTORIAL STUDY OF THE PEOPLES OF CANADA BY TOM STOCK

In the Bay Douglas Room 4th floor . . . starting Monday

Don't miss this interesting collection of Tom Stock paintings including contemporary Indians, old-time Indians and Eskimos. Another 300th Anniversary celebration at the Bay now.

TOM STOCK is a well-known magazine illustrator and writer who came to Canada over 30 years ago, via London and Paris, from Australia. He has lived among and painted both Eskimos and Indians from Coast to Coast. It is said his series of oil sketches are not only true portraits of our Indians and Eskimos, but valuable ethnological data.

Youth to Get Chance With Royals Sunday

Victoria Royals and Vancouver Spartans wind up their regular season schedules Sunday, meeting in a 2:30 p.m. contest at Swangard Stadium in Burnaby.

Royals, who clinched the Western Canada Soccer League's Coastal Division title by defeating Spartans last Saturday, have a bye in the west's semi-final playoff, which is scheduled for August 30 between Spartans and Vancouver Cougars.

For the Sunday contest in Burnaby, Royal coach Brian Hughes has stated he will start "the youngsters" who did not see action in Saturday's Spartan game.

They are Jan Bentley, Mark Robb, George Hyne and Bobby Duncan.

Labatts Stretch Playoff to Limit

Sparked by a one-hit performance by winning pitcher Bob Harris, Labatts downed Colwood Inn, 4-1, at Heywood Avenue Park Friday to extend their Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League semi-final series to the limit.

Fifth game of the best-of-five series will be played at Heywood Sunday, starting at 2 p.m.

Colwood's Ron Griffis took advantage of two brewer errors to put the Innkeepers ahead, 1-0, in their first turn at bat.

Singles by Ron MacDonald and Harris in the bottom of the opening frame, plus an error, a passed ball and a fielder's choice, produced for the tying and winning runs.

Who Is Left on Wayside as Bus Services Diminish? Old Folk . . . Children . . . and, of Course, the Poor

A widow will lose the job that keeps herself and her son. An 82-year-old pensioner will be unable to keep his doctor appointments.

These are but two of the Saanich Peninsula residents who will bear the brunt if the Vancouver Island Coach Lines is granted permission by the B.C. Public Utilities Commission to discontinue service to Sidney-Deep Cove, West Saanich and Cordova Bay.

There are many more.

A good proportion of them are elderly. They depend on the bus for their contact with the outside world.

They are already paying the price for living in an affluent society. As wages increase, forcing the bus company to raise fares, they count their pennies and limit their excursions to stores, banks, and their friends.

They're pushed further into

Two-Car Trend Snarling Roads, Draining Away Transit Funds

the isolation of old age and loneliness.

As one official at the Silver Threads Centre in Sidney explains:

"The one thing they have left is their independence. Most of them can't bring themselves to sponge off their neighbors for lifts. It's hard on their pride."

On the other end of the age scale, children will take the rap for a society unable to provide transportation to the YM-YWCA and other city activities that stretch both mind and muscle.

•

Mothers are among those who have written the commission, saying that already their children are forced to hitch-hike along a busy highway because of inconvenient bus schedules.

They worry now whether their children will pay the consequences of increased highway hitch-hiking.

Farmers will be hit — and their laborers.

Central Saanich Mayor A. M. Galbraith and Dixon Holloway, president of the Saanich Fruit Growers' Association, estimate that 75 per cent of the farmers' work force commute from the Victoria area.

Describing VICL's bid to stop service as "very short-sighted," Galbraith adds:

"It works two ways. The farmers get the help they need in order to survive and many unskilled people receive a chance to work."

Some residents say they will have to sell their homes and move closer to transportation.

Others fear that life savings, used to buy their homes, will be whittled away — that lack of transportation will drag down the value of real estate.

The social conscience of the four municipalities has been touched. In a combined brief to the PUC they've urged the commission to turn down the VICL application.

By PAT DUFOUR

Saanich may have a stronger case than the others.

In a separate brief the council has referred to a franchise in existence between the municipality and the company which is in effect until 1972.

The terms of the franchise call for a year's notice before the franchise can be dropped.

It also requires that the VICL seek agreement from council before it reduces or abandons bus routes.

This was not done. Instead, the coach lines sent a copy of its application to the council.

•

In a combined brief the chambers of commerce for Greater Victoria, Saanich, Central Saanich and Sidney, and North Saanich have also urged the commission to keep the Peninsula service operating.

There are four runs to and from Victoria and Cordova Bay each day. The first bus leaves Victoria at 8:30 a.m. and the final run comes back to town at 5:45 p.m.

Four return runs also service the Sidney-Deep Cove areas with the first bus leaving Victoria at 7 a.m. and the final run back to Victoria scheduled for 6:25 p.m.

The heaviest serviced route is the one feeding Sidney and Deep Cove. There are eight return runs each weekday with the first bus leaving Victoria at 6:30 a.m. and the last returning from Sidney at 7:35 p.m. An additional run, leaving Victoria at 10 a.m., is scheduled in the summer to connect with the Washington State ferry to Anacortes.

•

Fares are on a sliding scale, pegged at just under five cents a mile. As an example, Victoria to Brentwood costs 70 cents; Sidney to Victoria, 90 cents; and Cordova Bay to Victoria, 45 cents. There is no reduction for return fares but a package deal offers 10 tickets for the price of eight.

Although there will be some economic penalties involved if the VICL service folds, both the municipalities and the Chambers are more concerned with the social implications.

Unfortunately, neither the PUC or a private company like the VICL seem to share this concern.

The only basis for their decision is economics.

VICL say they are losing more than $100,000 a year on the three runs.

Traffic manager Jack Thomas points out the financial drain will be even greater when new union contracts are signed in March 1971. These will cost the company an extra $130,000 a year in wages.

The company says it has been using profits from the more lucrative Victoria-Mainland runs to help subsidize the Saanich Peninsula routes. VICL applied to PUC to increase rates for the crosswater runs May 15 but was turned down.

•

On the crosswater runs they must compete with the Pacific Stage Lines. Being a part of B.C. Hydro, PSL is not accountable to the PUC nor are its financial accounts available for examination. They disappear into those of its provincially-owned parent.

Main VICL criticism is that the company would be more efficient if it revised schedules, used smaller buses and added runs that would get workers from outlying jobs to downtown Victoria in time to start work and runs that would allow Saanich Peninsula residents to spend an evening in Victoria, or have their car-less friends visit them.

Here again, it's a matter of economics, Thomas says. More runs mean more drivers

Some Face The Prospect Of Selling Their Homes

— and it is union rates, not equipment, that creates crippling financial leaps.

Smaller buses, says Thomas, are not the answer. He cites, as an example the 2:45 p.m. Cordova Bay run.

"That's the peak run of the day, with school children using it. We average 28.3 passengers. This would mean putting on two buses — and two drivers."

Thomas says a run that delivered Cordova Bay residents into Victoria on time for work was rescheduled after the company carried out a survey of the area.

"The bus was going into town almost empty. We were told that if we put one on at 9 a.m. when mothers had their children away at school they would use it. This hasn't happened. The average load for the month of January was 7.8 passengers."

Restrictive union requirements on working hours, Thomas added, make it economically impossible to add extra runs in the evenings.

When VICL acquired its Saanich franchise in 1947 it was locally-owned. This picture changed when Harold Husband, now VMD president, sold out his major interest to International Utilities Corporation, an American company incorporated in Maryland and operating out of a Toronto head office.

The franchise, in those days, was a more lucrative monopoly. In 1947 a future with so many two-car families seemed as remote as interplanetary travel today.

Now the two-car trend is here to stay, producing colossal snarls on overburdened roads; draining away transit-system revenue.

Wooing drivers out of their cars and into buses is going to take some doing.

B.C. Hydro employees are good examples. In spite of the fact that they all receive bus passes as part of their work contract, the bulk of the head office staff in Victoria pass up free rides in favor of their cars.

•

The monopoly granted by a franchise becomes as outdated as the horse and buggy when, given exclusive rights, a private company can discard vital routes and still retain those that help line their bank account.

The Chamber of Commerce brief points out that VICL's sightseeing tours in the Victoria and Saanich districts produce some $72,368 in profit. They say this would more than offset the net saving of $63,000 to be gained by discontinuing the Saanich routes.

Restrictive land regulations, designed to preserve the environment, also compound the problem of providing efficient transportation.

While they slow the growing threat of suburban sprawl they also cancel out the possibility of fast-growing densely-populated areas where residents would be forced to use a transit system or face the ordeal of bumper-to-bumper congestion.

Even those most concerned about the possibility of the Saanich Peninsula being stripped of its transit system realize that it is a minority that will be affected if the VICL succeeds in pulling out Sept. 15.

But they also realize that it is the segment of our society least able to recover from the blow.

•

And there is also an awareness that the provision of a reliable transit system is a matter of public conscience.

The Chamber brief asks the PUC to call a public hearing on the Saanich Peninsula issue.

The PUC is empowered — but not required — to call a public hearing.

Even if the VICL's application is quashed and the Peninsula retains its service, such a hearing would point up one disturbing reality: the PUC rejection would provide only a breathing space for a problem that must be faced.

In 1972 VICL can phase out its franchise as it has already done in Sooke, the Metchosin and Langford areas, and Nanaimo.

It will also become obvious that the Peninsula issue is merely a part of the traffic dilemma that plagues the entire regional district.

Traffic patterns in and out of Victoria are providing a monumental headache already for the city's traffic engineer David Campbell. He estimates that the volume increases by six per cent each year and accidents by 20 per cent each year.

Side-effects are spreading beyond city limits and will spread further.

The signs are there. There will come a time when the only solution of all these problems may lie in a transit system planned on a regional district level.

The next article Monday looks at how this may be done.

Planners Schedule Hard Look at Harbor

Victoria's advisory planning commission will hold a special meeting, probably in late September, for a comprehensive review of plans for the Inner Harbor.

The meeting will bring all commission members up to date and give them an opportunity to assess where planning for the harbor should go, chairman, S. J. Cunliffe said today.

The studies which have been done over the years on the harbor have been referred to the commission but time has gone by and new members have been added, he said. So there's a need for an over-all review.

"We want this commission to get a clear picture of just what's in the mill so they can make some assessment."

The commission includes four city aldermen, Mayor Courtney Haddock, nine members appointed by council and a represetative of the Greater Victoria school board. It is supported by technical advisors from the city and Capital region board.

NEW POOL FINISHED IN MAY

Completion of Victoria's $1.75 million swimming pool will be delayed until May because of the prolonged construction lockout, project architect John Di Castri said Friday.

It was scheduled for completion in February.

"But we are in full gear now," he said. "We are still coming out of the ground and putting up basement walls."

The construction delay had one beneficial side-effect.

City comptroller Jim Bramley said the interruption enabled the city to pick up an extra $35,000 by using the allocated money for short-term investments.

The money will be used to offset additional expenditure from unexpected rock formation in the construction area, he said.

$27,500 Shot in the Arm Given Measles Vaccine Fund

The Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation of B.C. measle vaccine fund now stands at $55,500 following the receipt today of two donations totalling $27,500.

The B.C. Medical Services Fund and the Williamson Foundation have contributed $25,000 and $2,500 respectively.

The donations will go towards providing anti-German measles vaccine throughout the province for all children up to 12 years old. The only stipulation is that the program of vaccination is accomplished within two months.

Donations can be sent to Measles Vaccine Fund, c-o Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation of B.C., 3843-D Quadra Street.

Union Set to Appeal Woman's Early Retirement

The Canadian Union of Public Employees is appealing an arbitration decision which forced a woman employee of the Greater Victoria Public Library to retire at 60.

Men doing the same work as the woman are permitted to work until age 65.

The woman, who has not been identified, was forced to retire last June because the library board interpreted the staff pension plan to read that women must retire five years before men must.

An employee at the library for about 18 years, she had asked to stay on the job.

FINAL DECISION

Esquimalt Ald. Arthur Cuthbert, the library board's chairman, said today as far as the board is concerned it had made a final decision and he thought it was the right one.

The board isn't trying to hide a thing, he said. The matter was handled through the proper channels and the decision was not made in haste.

Alex Markides, CUPE field representative, said as far as the union is concerned, the employer has not complied with the written intent of the agreement.

The union has appealed an arbitration decision to the board of industrial relations.

Students to Take To the Streets

University of Victoria freshmen will take to the streets Sept. 19 as part of "Shinerama Canada," a nation-wide student campaign to raise money to fight cystic fibrosis, a major cause of death in young children.

Groups of two and three students will operate shoeshine stands throughout the city during the day. About 30,000 students from 60 universities are expected to participate across Canada.

Local freshmen last year raised over $5,200 for the Canadian Cystic Fibrosis Foundation for research and care of youngsters afflicted with the disease.

HITS LUNG

Cystic fibrosis hits young children in the lungs and digestive system causing breathing difficulties and faulty digestive cycles.

One in every 1,000 children is born with the disease which claims more victims than polio did at its pre-vaccine worst.

Arthur Mayse . . .

AS MY WIFE KNOWS ALL too well, my reaction to home movies is surefire and immediate. Unless they deal with fishing, I go to sleep.

Not obviously, mind, and never so soundly that a discreet nudge won't return me to Our Holiday in Hawaii, Daughter's Graduation, or The Grandchildren Playing with the New Pup.

We don't make home movies. I wish I did, and not merely so we could fetch out a projector, set up a screen, and bore the bejudas out of our guests.

It would be nice to have a proper film record of our family past. Instead, all we possess is a higgledy-piggledy of snapshots which we mean to sort out but never do.

I took a few of those photographs. They are identifiable by the fact that people in them are scythed off at knee-level, or have lost their heads.

My dear one gleamed most of our pictures and it was no easy task.

Before any holiday or outing, I would say, "Now, let's not forget to take a camera along."

Three of us promptly forgot. But our fourth remembered, and sooner or later would remind us of the fact.

"I think we should get some pictures of this camp," she would say.

Later, we'd be glad of those pictures. But at the moment, the rest of us had other matters in mind. Like fishing, or swimming, or loafing in the shade.

The dialogue then shaped itself more or less along these lines.

"You mean right now?"

Another voice: "Can't you take us where we are?"

Win: "No. You're too spread out. Anyway, I'd be pointing into the sun."

Voices (grumbling), "Okay, okay. Just let me get this line untangled first."

Or, "I don't see why you can't take them tomorrow."

Or by way of variation, "I thought we were going to go beachcombing."

There was no valid reason for this reluctance. It stemmed from laziness spiced with contrariness. Eventually, though, we would co-operate to the point of arranging ourselves as bidden. Sometimes we would even oblige to the point of saying 'Cheese!'

When developed, some of those induced smiles were scarcely distinguishable from snarls.

This was rank ingratitude, and a poor reward for Win's patience and foresight. As snarler-in-chief, I'm grateful now for those moments she snatched for us from time in its passing.

Because of them, children now grown are children still, and trout long sizzled and eaten have achieved a sort of immortality.

In this last connection, I have made an interesting discovery. Cameras shrink fish. On film, the speckled cutthroat that I remember as darn near as long as my arm drops inches and pounds.

(I've asked a fisherman who is also a photographer about this phenomenon. "Next time, he advises, "hold the fish broadside on and push it well out in front of you.")

My own ventures into photography have been less than lucky.

The lens creeps under my thumb, or I'm still fussing around with a light meter while the perfect setup dissolves and vanishes. Sometimes misfires that defy explanation occur.

Once I persuaded a mountaineer to arrange himself for picture purposes on a rock face, and at risk of my neck, achieved a position where I could get what should have been a dramatic silhouette.

I boasted a good deal about that shot, until a press photographer developed it. Cackling, he handed me the print.

"Nice chunk of rock," he said, "but where's your guy?"

I'm still not sure what happened to the climber. Maybe he got tired of waiting, and moved on. Or maybe the goblins got him.

In spite of such foulups, I'm still all for taking a camera along when we set off on our next vacation.

As usual, I'll forget, but Win will remember.

This time, I'll hold all fish two feet in front of me, and try not to snarl.

Pickersgill Ouster Rejected by Court

WINNIPEG (CP) — A motion that would have barred J. W. Pickersgill from participating in railway passenger train hearings ordered by the Canadian transport Commission was denied Friday in Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench.

Pickersgill is president of the commission. Monday the Canadian Railway Labor Association said Pickersgill had shown bias in favor of the CPR in a speech he made in Montreal June 9.

In Ottawa Friday the transport commission announced it will proceed as scheduled with public hearings next week in Calgary and Vancouver.

VICTORIAN IN 'NEW' ENGLAND

Impudence, Jousting Signal End To Servitude of 'Serving' Classes

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

LONDON — "Do you take sugar with your tea?" asked the waitress in one of those sidewalk London cafes where you stand up at the counter.

"Yes, please."

"Then stir it," she said.

I laughed at the impudence of this remark, yet found in it something subtly suggestive of a new independence among what used to be called England's serving classes.

This, of course is a fatuous classification, since we are all of us serving someone or other, and had I referred to this wench as a "serving" woman, I'm sure she'd have fetched me a clout with the wet dish cloth she held in her right hand.

Similarly, when I approached a bright-eyed young woman in a London bank and told her I had lost my computer number, she replied:

"Then you're a very naughty boy."

"Thanks for the boy," I replied, smoothing back my grey locks.

But this kind of jousting is not as reflective of the independent spirit as the indifferent attitude you encounter in many London stores, where the customer is made to feel of little importance.

* * *

One method of persuading a store clerk to take notice of you is to move away, as if in despair. The clerk will then look up from whatever document is preoccupying him and say:

"Yes?"

The dainty Chinese barmaid (a new phomenon) in a London pub expressed her independence in a different way. "You must be rich," she said. "You have big stomach."

"Don't be personal."

"So sorry — in Hong Kong we say, 'He is rich, he has big stomach.' "

London is now in the midst of another tourist boom (there were 12,000,000 tourists last year) and the overcrowding of stores, hotels, pubs and shows and the confusion of accents from so many parts of Europe and North America puts a strain on those who are paid to serve a huge variety of people.

Some say visitors from Canada and the United States, particularly the latter, are inclined to be over-exacting and demanding. In the spacious restaurant adjoining London's Royal Festival Hall, an American visitor asked the waiter three times for iced water as a prelude to the evening meal.

Then he exploded with: "Bring us iced water at once or fetch the manager."

As by a convulsive effort, the waiter produced iced water.

The clerk in a medium-priced hotel said most American women expect a full-length mirror and get "naggy" if they can only see themselves as far as the hips.

"Canadians generally are more reasonable," the clerk said. "They accept London as part of the Old World and quite often they're surprised to find us as up-to-date as we are."

* * *

Down in rural Surrey, about 30 miles from the heart of London, I met a taximan who told of driving two Canadian girls to a churchyard in a small village near Guildford.

"They wanted to photograph their great-grandmother's grave," he said, "which was all right by me. But they planned to spend only a couple of hours in the county of Surrey and rush on up to Scotland the same. This kind of helter-skelter sightseeing is very unsatisfactory.

"I persuaded them to stay the night in an old-world inn at Guildford and they were thrilled with the experience. They said they had 'done' London but I advised them to spend a few days in the south of England before rushing up to Scotland."

* * *

Everyone is agreed that standards of cooking in England's hotels and restaurants have improved immeasurably over the past three years. Good meals are offered cheaply at the pubs you find on almost every street corner and the serving of alcoholic beverages makes for a good-humored atmosphere.

Many teetotallers now eat in pubs because they offer better value in food and service than the cheaper restaurants. However, inflation is still rampant and the prices of many commodities, including beer and whisky are three times what they were before the Second World War. Cigarettes at six shillings for 20 are six times dearer than they were in 1939.

Business executives and people on fixed incomes complain of the high income tax — basically eight shillings and sixpence in the pound — but you hear fewer complaints from the workers because most of them are earning at least three times what they were in pre-war times.

* * *

Most visitors are charmed by the quiet, dignified atmosphere of England's country pubs. They have been initiated in Canada and the United States and, while the decor is often similar, the imitations fail to catch the atmosphere.

There is something in a weather-beaten English inn, with its painted wooden signboard hoisted proudly outside, that defies imitation. And the names themselves are picturesquely evocative — Live and Let Live, The Green Man, The Blue Lion, The Half Moon, The Pretty Pigs, The Lord Nelson, The Last Chance, The Royal Oak, The Cricketer's Arms, The Old Schoolhouse, The Archbishop Langton.

The Archbishop Langton is a 500-year-old inn ornamenting the little town of Friday Street, near Dorking, Surrey. This archbishop signed the Magna Carta at Runnymede in 1215 A.D. and his portrait, complete with cope and mitres, adorns the signboard outside.

Friday Street is a long way from Runnymede, but the archbishop travelled widely on horseback and his one visit to what was then a tiny hamlet is considered ample justification for linking the Church of England with a country pub.

600 Clerics Gather To Probe Evangelism

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 600 delegates from 36 Protestant denominations will meet here next week to probe the meaning and role of evangelism.

Among the denominations to be represented at the Canadian Congress on Evangelism are the Anglican Church of Canada, the United Church, the Presbyterian Church in Canada, the Baptist Federation of Canada, and smaller groups.

Rev. Leslie Tarr, a Baptist minister and public relations director for the congress, said the gathering will not be a "camp meeting."

"One of the primary aims is to find out what evangelism is."

The congress might help restore an emphasis on evangelism which had been discredited in the eyes of many church members because of "past excesses."

Among conference speakers will be Most Rev. Donald Coggan, Anglican archbishop of York, England and Dr. Leighton Ford, an associate of evangelist Dr. Billy Graham.

Others are: Dr. Kenneth Hamilton, professor of systematic theology at the University of Winnipeg; Dr. Carl Henry, visiting professor of theology at Eastern Baptist Seminary, Philadelphia, Dr. Donald Larson, chairman of social sciences at Bethal College, Minnesota; and Rev. T. R. Maxwell, chairman of the department of sociology and anthropology at Waterloo Lutheran University.

But Mr. Tarr said that "most of the action will be found in congress workshops."

One of the workshops is to centre on social questions—a weak point in Canadian evangelicalism in this century.

"Evangelicals should be in the vanguard of social progress," Mr. Tarr said.

The workshop will examine such issues as revolution, the classless society, nationalism and world federalism.

To Live on Sloop

POOLE, England (CP) — The Vancouver owner of a new 53-foot sloop sailed her out of this southern England port this week bound for the Mediterranean, where the boat will be used as a part-time home.

John R. Grey has been sent to Turkey by the Bechtel Corp. in charge of an oil-pipeline project between Turkey and Iran.

The sloop Caracharias was built in nearby Bournemouth by Southern Ocean Shipyard Ltd. She's a glass-fibre vessel of the Gallant 53 class.

With Grey were his wife Peggy, their daughter-in-law, Mrs. Carol Grey, and 16-year-old Susan Robinson of Vancouver.

Grey, whose father and grandfather were ocean-liner skippers, plans to use the Gallant for extensive cruising in the Mediterranean. His wife will live aboard for much of the time while he is in the field.

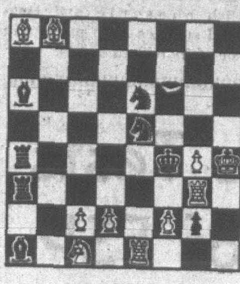
CHESS MASTER

By George Koltanowski

International Chess Master

PROBLEM
By Andreas Schonholzer, Germany
BLACK: 8



WHITE: 10
White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

IVAN MAKES A CRITICAL MOVE

In 1906, Ivan Jurevitch, a native of Kiev, Russia, went to see the publisher of the local newspaper, pleading, demanding and begging that the paper publish a chess column. Ivan maintained that it was the best game in the world and would create more intelligentsia in Russia. When he was turned down, he went to the window, opened it, without saying anything further, and—to the astonishment and consternation of the publisher—jumped out of the window. He fell two floors and was rushed to the hospital in serious condition. He survived and, a couple of months later, was back at the chess club of Kiev.

Jurevitch was a strong chess master. In the 1903 tournament of Kiev, he came in third (with 13 wins, four losses and one draw) 13½ points, behind Mikhael Tschigorin, 15 and Ossip Bernstein, 14, but ahead of such masters as Salwe, Rubinstein, Znosko-Borowsky.

Here is his game from this tournament against the winner of the event.

WHITE: Tschigorin.
BLACK: Jurevitch.

WITH HIS BOOTS ON

It happened during the championship of Holland held at Leiden in 1933; (it was won by Dr. Max Euwe with eight points). Dutch master Dr. A. G. Olland, born in Utrecht in 1867, was playing M. Hamming, who had the Black pieces.

RALLY TACKLES THREATENED JOB CUTS

4,000 U.S. Posties Gear for Fight

By MIKE CAUSEY

HONOLULU (WP) — Representatives of 200,000 American mailmen, meeting in convention here are making plans to insure that the new business-minded U.S. Postal Service doesn't shave services, and eliminate jobs to cut costs.

The 4,000 delegates to this AFL-CIO convention are well aware that creation of the new postal system — which meant a 14 per cent raise for its employees — could also mean belt-tightening that will threaten jobs, particularly in the letter carrier craft.

Although postal officials deny that such plans are in the works, staff members in Washington have worked up position papers showing how employment could eventually be cut by 100,000 if certain "marginal" services were eliminated.

The hard-headed businessmen who are supposed to manage the mail-moving business will have one major area to look for savings. The area is personnel, where 80 per cent of the department's nearly $8 billion a year budget is taken up in salaries and fringe benefits.

But while employee unions will be opposing any cuts — as citizens and job-holders — the men at the helm will be under great pressure to trim spending.

For the nearly 200 years that the post office department operated under Benjamin Franklin's grand design, the American people have had a love-hate relationship with the government department.

Now that that system has been changed, with promises of a balanced postal budget, improved service and better things for everyone, people will expect more.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

The Art of Evading Responsibility

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

Ring Lardner, an American writer of a generation or two ago, wrote a number of short stories which have earned him a place in the literature of his country. One of these stories is Alibi Ike, a story about a professional baseball player. This Ike is a very heavy hitter. And he is every bit as heavy at offering excuses and far-fetched explanations for everything he does, good, bad and indifferent.

Shortly after Ike joins a major league team, one of his fellow players says to another, "He looks like he could hit." The second player replies, "Yes, but he can't hit near as good as he can apologize." Many of us don't hit near as good as we apologize. We often try to evade our responsibilities by making excuses.

ADAM AND EVE

Remember the story of Adam and Eve and the serpent in the Garden of Eden? The Lord God tells Adam and Eve that they are not to eat the fruit of the tree growing in the middle of the garden. But along comes the serpent, a slick and subtle creature, and he explains to Eve that the Lord God really doesn't know what he's talking about. He explains that one is silly to let oneself be tied by silly moral conventions and that life will be richer and fuller if one eats the fruit.

Eve takes the advice of this smooth expert. She eats some of the forbidden fruit. She likes the taste of it. Then she offers some to Adam. He eats it. He likes it.

THE WIFE'S FAULT

Later the Lord God questions Adam about the fruit incident. Adam, behaving as husbands sometimes behave, explains that it was all his wife's fault. She offered him the fruit — and, after all, what could a simple husband do but eat it? The Lord God then turns to Eve and questions her. She demurely replies, "The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat."

This ancient story lays bare the heart of man. It declares the ease with which we evade personal responsibility, the alacrity with which we pass the moral buck. We are quite astute at finding serpents at which we can point to get ourselves off the moral hook.

"Business is business — and, anyway, everybody does it." "I don't remember doing it — I was pretty drunk at the time. And if you had my troubles, you'd get drunk once in a while too." "I'd have passed those exams, all right — if my teachers had really known their job." "It's a wonder I don't nag a lot more: My husband simply has no ambition." "We'd be OK financially, but my wife is so darned extravagant." "The trouble is that you older people don't do very much for us teenagers." "Things would be a lot better if only those young people showed as good judgment as we do." "The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat."

A HOLE-IN-ONE

Of course, when we enjoy a success, when it comes to our commendable achievements, we do not generally go seeking serpents to congratulate. As someone has observed, "A man will blame fate for other accidents, but feels personally responsible when he makes a hole-in-one."

Constantly to blame the beguiling serpents is an unmistakable sign of immaturity. One essential mark of maturity is in accepting personal responsibility. It is a sure sign of immaturity if you don't hit near as good as you apologize.

Elton Trueblood, an American Quaker philosopher, once put it in this way: "It is one of the marks of a good man, as indeed it is a mark of a fully mature man, that he should be willing to stand up and say, 'Yes, I did it. I am ashamed, but it was I who made the decision. I hope I may do better next time'."

VATICAN LIMITS PATRON SAINTS

VATICAN CITY (Reuters) — The Vatican today published new instructions to bring up to date the veneration of saints in the Roman Catholic Church, including a controversial order that every country should have only one patron saint.

The document follows reform of the Roman Catholic calendar last year, when pope Paul provoked an outcry in many countries by removing some 200 saints from universal veneration.

It says that from now on a nation, region, diocese, place, religious family or association shall be allowed only one patron saint.

The choice of patron saint in countries with more than one will be left to national committees.

The document also aims to abolish rhetoric and long-winded eulogies from prayers in honor of individual saints.

Researcher Claims Tests Prove Existence of ESP

WASHINGTON — Psychiatrist George Sjolund first got interested in extrasensory perception (ESP) when a patient told him a strange story about a dream of an auto accident she was in a month later.

Dr. Sjolund was in residency when the patient, a Baltimore resident, talked about her dream come true. The patient said the dream included such details as the date the accident was supposed to occur, the location, the name of a man in the other car and the New Jersey residence of those in the other car.

The patient explained that she did not want to leave the house on the day of the accident because she remembered it from the dream, but her mother insisted they go out.

But after the accident she did not leave the house on that particular day for the next six years until she had the appointment with Dr. Sjolund.

* * *

Dr. Sjolund decided not to dismiss the account as a hoax. Instead he started looking into ESP, a sort of sixth sense — broadly, the human capacity to receive information from the outside world without the use of any of the five senses.

Now, after three years of part-time study and research in ESP, Dr. Sjolund concludes: "All the evidence indicates that ESP does exist."

Some of this evidence includes results of an experiment that Dr. Sjolund works on one day a week at the Maryland Psychiatric Research Centre in Catonsville. The experiment doesn't conclusively prove that ESP exists. The experiment merely provides, Dr. Sjolund thinks, a small amount of evidence that ESP may exist.

In the experiment, Dr. Sjolund puts a person alone in a room that is soundproof except for a loudspeaker. There, the person sits in a comfortable chair and tries to figure out which of five colors has been lighted up on a machine in a room across the hall. The person indicates a choice by pressing one of five buttons representing each color on the machine. If the answer is correct, the person will know by a sign that lights up, but if wrong the person won't know the right answer.

* * *

Meanwhile, in the other room, one machine records the answers electronically, while another machine, fed by computer tape, is randomly lighting up new colors. Through a loudspeaker system, the person can talk to someone in the other room.

In his first experiment, Dr. Sjolund tested 50 people, with each making 100 choices. Instead of looking for individuals who seemed to have ESP on the basis of their tests, Dr. Sjolund totaled the 5,000 choices and found that 1070 were correct.

This result is a small indication to him that ESP exists, because by random chance there should have been only 1,000 correct choices. Dr. Sjolund explained that his result is statistically significant at .02; in other words, 98 of 100 times this result could not have occurred by chance.

* * *

Dr. Sjolund has started his experiment again. Of 2,000 total choices made so far, he should get 400 correct by random chance, but has 420.

In the experiment the person might be getting the colors correct, if chance is ruled out, through two kinds of ESP: clairvoyance, or ESP between a person and an object; telepathy, or ESP between two people. During the experiment another person sometimes sits in the other room and sees the color that is lighting up.

The third kind of ESP is precognition, or ability to predict future events. Dreams also may be related to ESP. Dr. Sjolund said one experiment in New York City has shown that while one person looked at a picture in one room, someone in another room sometimes had a dream about the picture.

Asked how advanced the scientific study of ESP was compared to other fields, Dr. Sjolund replied that man's understanding of ESP is about the same as his grasp of electricity and electromagnetics 100 years ago.

EX-SOLDIER WOULD RESTORE SEPARATE FORCES

Unification Judged Costly Failure

(Special to the Times)

TORONTO — Restoration of three separate Canadian armed services was advocated today by R. S. Malone, Winnipeg newspaper executive.

At the same time, he called for the "highest possible degree" of integration of supply, administrative and staff functions plus a "properly constituted defence council" to advise the government rather than the present commander-in-chief system.

Malone, a brigadier in the Second World War who was personal liaison officer to Field Marshal Montgomery in Italy and headed the Canadian mission to General MacArthur's Pacific headquarters, was speaking to directors of the Canadian National Exhibition after the annual Warrior's Day Parade.

He said it is estimated that the operational efficiency of the country's armed forces is about half of what it was before unification.

●

Instead of spending 25 per cent of the defence budget on modern equipment, as he said was forecast, the figure is closer to 17 per cent.

"It is also estimated that instead of staff and command efficiences, we now have the most over-commanded formations in the world," he said.

"Our proportion of officers to other ranks is now the highest in the world.

"The confusion resulting from unification has also created great difficulties in undertaking any effective joint operations with British and American units."

Malone, one of the few Canadian officers to serve in all theatres of the Second World War, has written extensively about military affairs. He is vice-president and general manager of FP Publications Limited and publisher of the Winnipeg Free Press.

In his speech, he said Canada for the first time "is in default" to its allies and itself in carrying the fair share of the collective defence burden.

He blamed lack of adequate defences on "miscalculation and mismanagement, not to lack of patriotism and courage."

The means to defend laws in an emergency or crisis do not exist in Canada, he said.

"A whole decade, at least, has been wasted in false assumptions, confused directions from the top, then bungled defence policies of the Hellyer period and now, no policies at all," he said.

(Paul Hellyer was defence minister who steered through integration of the armed forces.)

Malone said while Canada is not prepared "to make any contribution" towards security in other areas, "we seemingly have no hesitation in virtuously telling Britain that she must not sell ships and arms to South Africa. We have fallen victims to the hypocrisy and propaganda that this has something to do with apartheid politics.

●

"We must, of course, always press for peaceful settlements but we cannot ignore the growing dangers in the southern flank of NATO and the entire Mildle East. If the crunch comes, will NATO, through lack of military strength, be faced with the choice of nuclear suicide or giving in to blackmail?"

He said Britain and the United States will be faced in the immediate future with "painful withdrawals" from some areas of Asia and Africa and their efforts to preserve peace in these areas may fail.

Just returned from Europe, Malone said it is recognized there that Canada's foreign policies, "such as they are," flow directly from Prime Minister Trudeau's office.

"Instead of having a military policy formulated now as an extension of our foreign policy, we have seemingly reversed the process," he said.

●

"If anything, our foreign policy has been formulated to support our defence policy and our defence policy is designed simply to fit our budget in constant dollars.

"Our foreign policy white paper is construed abroad as merely an alibi or excuse, attempting to justify our wavering defence policies and withdrawal from NATO. The timing could not have been worse. During the next four to five years, NATO will have to face perhaps its most critical period, when the future patterns for peace in Europe may well be decided."

Police Court

A man who cannot read or write was sentenced Friday to six months in jail on two charges of gross indecency despite a plea for mercy by the defence on grounds that prison would have a disastrous effect on his personality:

Laurent Fournier, 28, of 3420 Quadra, appeared before Judge William Ostler for reading of a presentence report.

He was charged with committing homosexual acts with a seven and an eight-year-old boy in his apartment July 31.

He pleaded guilty to the charges Aug. 14.

Fournier was described to court as a "hesitant homosexual" whose life had been a succession of failures as he moved from job to job and province to province, repeatedly finding he was unable to cope with his work.

The defence asked Ostler to consider the effect upon his personality that would arise from sending him to a prison "where homosexuality is practised by common knowledge."

Even during custody awaiting sentence, Fournier has been "constantly pestered" by imprisoned homosexuals since the nature of his crime was first reported in the press, the defence said.

"The effects of a prison term could only be disastrous."

But Ostler, who began by saying that "the average person feels pity for a man like you," imposed a lengthy prison term anyway.

While he acknowledged that Fournier had "expressed shame and been perfectly honest," Ostler said it would be "even more disastrous" if he were able to continue this conduct with young children.

"This was loathsome conduct," he said, and suggested that such contact could affect children for the rest of their lives, with damage to personalities coming to light only years later.

During the exchange between Ostler and the defence Fournier remained impassive. He attempted to say something to the judge once but was brusquely cut short.

Ostler sentenced Fournier to six months in prison on each count, terms to be served concurrently.

Keith Shepherd, 28, of 325 Michigan, charged with committing arson at the apartment house where he lived, had the date of his preliminary hearing fixed at Sept. 4.

Fred Dewhirst, an 81-year-old man, died as a result of injuries suffered when he plunged 30-feet from his apartment window at 325 Michigan after falling while attempting to escape the flames.

* * *

Penelope Ann Clarke, 19, of 3780 Savannah, who appeared for presentence report on 11 counts of uttering forged documents and false pretences, was given a suspended sentence.

"I think this young woman was influenced by older and more experienced people," Ostler said.

* * *

John Charlebois, 58, of a downtown hotel, was sentenced to three months in prison when he pleaded guilty to a charge that he stole five watches and two sets of cuff links Thursday.

Court was told he took the merchandise, worth $30 from Metropolitan Stores.

He had a criminal record dating back to 1929, said prosecutor John Macintyre.

"You are obviously a persistent and unrepentant thief," Ostler said.

* * *

Gary Roy Brady, 18, of 409 Lochside, was remanded to Sept. 1 for preliminary hearing on a charge of trafficking in LSD.

* * *

John Garroway, 18, of 3166 Irma, was remanded in custody for a psychiatric examination. He originally pleaded guilty to stealing a package of cigarettes.

Obe Johnson, 22, of 996 McBrai, was remanded to Sept. 8 for trial after pleading not guilty to a charge of common assault and a charge of assault causing bodily harm.

* * *

David Harvey, 21, of 1038 Vista Heights, was remanded to Sept. 10 after pleading not guilty to a charge of possession of stolen property and a charge of criminal negligence.

They won't go anywhere without their new Intertherm™ Hot Water Electric Heater!

That's Because It Provides the Wonderful, Floor-to-Ceiling Warmth of HOT WATER HEAT WITHOUT PLUMBING
●
Permanent Systems for Entire Structures—and Portable Plug-in Models
●
Operates by a Revolutionary Principle—Electrically-Heated, Sealed-in Water!

Once you've enjoyed the soft, gentle, uniform, floor-to-ceiling warmth of INTERTHERM Hot Water Electric Baseboard Heating—you'll never want to be without it—at home, or when visiting.

For the INTERTHERM—both permanently-installed and portable models—produces the most comfortable, healthful, economical, cleanest, safest heat possible today. For entire homes, apartments, vacation lodges, hotels, motels, schools, commercial buildings—and hard-to-heat single rooms, offices and other small areas.

Here's How the INTERTHERM Provides Hot Water Heat Without Plumbing. The secret lies in the inner works of the heater, shown in the diagram at the right. This consists of a copper tube inside of which an electric heating element and a water and anti-freeze solution—that never needs replenishing—are permanently, hermetically sealed. The electric element heats the water. And the water heats the room.

An INTERTHERM System—Easily Installed Permanently in an Entire Structure—Takes the Place of Expensive-to-Install Central Heating Systems of All Types. Yet requires no furnace, boiler, pipes, ducts, flues, chimney, fuel storage tank and other costly components of a properly-installed central heating system.

The Portable INTERTHERM is easy to carry anywhere. And plugs into any 115-volt outlet.

Operation is Controlled Entirely by Thermostat which maintains the solution at exactly the temperature necessary for perfectly-balanced, floor-to-ceiling warmth at all times—regardless of outside temperatures. When the current is shut off the solution continues to heat the room.

Floors are kept warm. No heat is wasted at ceiling. No chilling drafts. No alternating too-hot and too-cold periods. No overheating to carbonize lint and dust particles that irritate nose and throat membranes; smudge walls, drapes and furniture. Can't cause a fire hazard. Can't scorch furniture or drapes—can't burn child or pet—if they come in contact. Many more advantages.

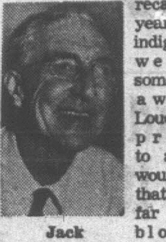
HOME GARDEN

Fall Fairs, Shows Near

By JACK BEASTALL

Within two weeks the round of fall fairs and flower shows will be well under way. We recall last year. How indignant we were over some of the awards. Loudly we proclaimed to all who would listen that we had far superior blooms in our garden. We even vowed to show them next year.



Jack

This is next year. If we were serious in our statements we have to work fast.

First we need the catalog or schedule of those shows in which we are interested. We cannot begin until we have the list of classes and the entry forms.

* * *

Next we have to study the general rules of the show, not scan them, but study until we understand exactly what is required and permitted.

Every word in a show schedule has a definite meaning. It means just what is says. Don't put in your own words, nor miss any that are there. Read each clause a dozen times until you realize exectly what the catalog committee is saying.

Then read through the divisions and classes, marking those in which you are interested.

Go back to the beginning of each division or group of classes for special rules governing number to be shown, size allowed, and so on.

One flower too many, or an inch extra on height or breadth, compels the judge to mark the entry "NAS" not according to schedule. The judge has no choice, he must abide by the rules in the schedule.

Some flowers are shown as they grow, branched flower stems and unopened buds included. Others must be disbudded as soon as the buds appear, and only one bloom allowed to remain on the stem.

Removing the buds the day before showing is not good enough.

There must be no indication that buds have been taken off therefore it must be done when the tiny bud growths are first seen, maybe six weeks before the show.

Obviously, when only one bloom is allowed on a stem it requires a fund of experience and careful timing to have that bloom at the peak of perfection at the time of judging. For safety, the exhibitor must have many blooms in different stages of development from which to select.

The complaints most frequently heard from the general public who visit flower shows are flowers hanging listlessly over the container with their tongues hanging out, and flowers and plants without names.

Flowers that wilt within an hour or so after the show opens indicate the exhibitor has picked them at 9 o'clock and set them up in the hall an hour later. The flowers have not been conditioned.

* * *

A first prize on such an exhibit shows the blooms were at the peak of perfection "at the time of judging," not, as so many suggest, a judge who was blind.

The main question is: Should the exhibitor be allowed to receive the award given by the judge? Many national and international flower groups stipulate that prizes will not be awarded unless the exhibit remains in good condition throughout the hours the show is open to the public.

To grab some flowers from the garden, rush to the hall and set them up, then receive a first prize and a trophy for an exhibit that wilted in an hour, does not engender the good feelings of fellow exhibitors nor the general public.

It is time our local gardening groups recognized this fact. A flower show is classed as educational and thus avoids amusement tax. Is there any educational value to wilted material and unnamed exhibits?

The general public may pay only a 50-cent admission, but for that admission they are entitled to see something worth while, and learn something from that which they see.

This brings us to the conditioning of cut flowers and shrub material to stand up to the heat of a show hall for three or more days.

* * *

Some flowers require special treatment such as burning ends of stems in a flame, or setting them in deep warm, hot, or boiling water. Such methods are fully discussed at the regular meetings of gardening groups, and can be found in several excellent library books.

For the general run of cut flowers and shrub material here are the basic rules:

(1) Water the plants thoroughly at the roots (not overhead) one week before the show.

(2) Water thoroughly again two days before cutting.

(3) For Thursday evening set-up, cut most material in the cool of Wednesday evening; at the latest, when cool on Thursday morning.

(4) Take one, or several, deep containers filled with cold water with you when cutting and drop each stem into the water as cut.

(5) Recut one-half to one inch off each stem while it is held under water. This removes the pocket of air which entered the stem when first cut.

(6) Attend to any special treatments (singeing or hot water) as soon as possible after cutting.

WEEK'S WORK

Cutting of young side shoots from yellow marguerites can be rooted now in a shaded coldframe or in a pot of sandy loam in shade of a shrub. These rooted cuttings can be wintered in a cool place free of hard frost.

Complete main plan for redesigning garden layout for less continual labor and more enjoyment.

Plant the little bulbs and corms of Snowdrops, Winter-aconite (Eranthis hyemalis), Winter Starflower (Ipheion), and fall and winter crocuses before they dry out.

If any house plant has been put into open garden soil for summer, pot before end of August and leave out for another week or so.

Sow some of the less common hardy summer annuals at end of month. These will germinate and remain in the ground to start growing again in spring for early summer.

Figs swelling on outdoor trees need watering. Watch for time when fully ripe. Then pick and eat to enjoy their delicious flavor.

Keep the July sowing of vegetables watered sufficiently, but do not chill the soil daily nor in the evening. This delays growth and you'll not be successful with the venture.

'Save-Your-Hair Day' Set for Mon. and Tues.

FOR BALDING HEADS LIKE THESE, a "SAVE-YOUR-HAIR DAY" has been announced. As long as you have some hair, you have an excellent chance to grow thicker hair by new methods of home treatment.

SCALP SPECIALIST HERE TO DEMONSTRATE NEW HOME TREATMENT

Now is the time to carry out that long delayed resolution to "do something about your hair."

For Monday and Tuesday, August 24 and 25 is "SAVE-YOUR-HAIR DAY" in Victoria. The event is sponsored by Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists. They have sent trichologist I. Edgar here to personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the Sussex Hotel.

WHAT CAUSES BALDNESS

Actually, the two most common causes of baldness are neglect and mistreatment of the hair. The most conspicuous thing about hair trouble is that it's progressive. Common disorders like dandruff or itchiness lead to hair loss. And once hair loss starts, it doesn't stop voluntarily. It has to be stopped.

EXPERT ANSWERS YOUR QUESTIONS

As a feature of "Save-Your-Hair Day" Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists offer a consultation service.

All you have to do is take your questions in person to their suite in the Sussex Hotel and let the trichologist give your scalp a complete examination.

These are the questions most people want information about:

1. How often should you wash your hair?
2. Which kind of shampoo is best for you?
3. Is brushing necessary?
4. What about dry or oily scalp?
5. Are "tonics" helpful?
6. When is dandruff dangerous to hair growth?
7. Can your hair be thickened?
8. What are home treatments like?

Take this list with you Monday or Tuesday to see Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists.

DON'T PUT IT OFF

Your hair is in better condition today than it will be next month or even next week. That's why we urge you to see the Harrison trichologist before more damage is done. Find out about our new home treatment methods for saving your hair.

Then you won't wake up a few years from now and find yourself bald — and painfully aware that you need not have been.

FREE SCALP EXAMINATION

See Mr. Edgar in person. Learn how the new Harrison method permits you to actually save and improve your hair in the privacy of your own home.

For a free examination and discussion of your hair problems ask the desk clerk at the Hotel Sussex Monday or Tuesday between 1 p.m. and 8 p.m. for Mr. Edgar's suite number. You don't need an appointment. Examinations are given in private.

GET THE FACTS

He will tell you what's wrong with your hair and scalp, what can and should be done about it, how little time and money will be required to put your scalp in condition to grow healthy hair again.

CHECK YOURSELF HERE AND NOW

Can't quite decide whether your hair needs expert attention? In general, it can be said that if you're concerned about your hair, you have good reason to be. But here's a check list of signs that point to a hairless future:

☐ Have noticeable dandruff?
☐ Scalp hard, tight?
☐ Scalp itchy or irritated?
☐ Hair dry and straw-like?
☐ Hair excessively greasy?
☐ Lose much hair in washing?
☐ Lose much hair in combing?
☐ Getting "highbrow?"
☐ Thin spot on crown?

If you've checked even one of these conditions, you should see Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists during "SAVE-YOUR-HAIR DAY".

STAMP NEWS

Fiji's Discovery Marked

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

"Explorers and discoverers of Fiji" is the title of four well-designed pictorials issued by Fiji Aug. 18. Thomas de la Rue and Co. Ltd. lithographed that quartet on block CA watermarked paper.

Pictures are: 2c, a portrait of Abel Tasman (d. circa 1659), and his ship's log, open to an entry concerning his sighting of Fiji (1643); 3c, the Endeavour, and a likeness of Capt. James Cook (1728-79), who in that ship discovered (1774) Vatoa Island, which is in the Fiji archipelago; 8c, a portrait of Capt. William Bligh (1754-1817).

Also depicted on that stamp is the longboat in which Bligh and 18 other men were set adrift after the mutiny on HMS Bounty in 1789. (The castoffs, who are shown in the boat, passed through the Fiji group during their long voyage); and 25c, an early Fijian ocean-going canoe, which Fiji's first discoverers may have used, and a bust of a Fijian explorer.

Fiji's first postage stamps were released in 1870, and later this year, Fiji is scheduled to release a trio commemorating the centenary of their appearance.

Today, the United States placed on sale a 6-cent stamp in Petersburg, Illinois, paying tribute to the author Edgar Lee Masters (1869-1950). Further details will be in my next column.

PHYSICIST HONORED

The sesquicentenary of the discovery of electromagnetism by the Danish physicist Hans Christian Oersted (1777-1851) was observed by an 80-ore stamp issued by Denmark Aug. 13. It was printed in green.

Two more aditions to Barbuda's "British monarchs" series appeared this month. One shows Richard II (1367-1400), and the other Henry IV (1367-1413).

Aug. 12 was the date on which the Bailiwick of Guernsey placed on sale a horticulture-agriculture set. Featured are: 4d, tomatoes; 5d, a Guernsey cow; 9d, a Guernsey bull, and 1s 6d, freesias (flowers).

Recently I was visited by J. Pascoe Taylor, who gave me information on the upcoming philatelic show B.C. Cenpex '71, of which he is treasurer and chairman. It will be a centennial celebration of B.C.'s joining Confederation, and will be held in the Royal Towers Motor Hotel, New Westminster, on Sept. 3, 4 and 5, 1971. Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson will open the exhibition.

More particulars concerning B.C. Cenpex '71 may be obtained by writing to Mr. Taylor at 2616 East 21st Ave., Vancouver 12.

By the way, Canada will be issuing a stamp next year for the 100th anniversary of British Columbia's entering Confederation.

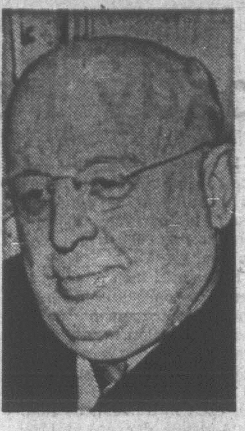
Asian Productivity Year is the theme of a 10-cent adhesive released by the British colony of Hong Kong Aug. 5.

On Aug. 14, Ethiopia released a trio for International Education Year.

Four pictorials issued Aug. 4 by the Seychelles observe the 100th anniversary of the British Red Cross Society.

A lithographed pair (3c and 35c) from the British Solomon Islands for the Red Cross centenary came out Aug. 17.

The Mowat stamp is, without a doubt, one of the worst stamps Canada has ever issued. As well as being poorly colored, it has faults of design too numerous to men-



35 YEARS in continuous control of Alberta is marked by the Social Credit Party tonight with a banquet in Edmonton. The banquet honors the late William Aberhart (top), the first Socred premier, who led his party to a landslide victory in 1935, taking 57 of the 63 seats in the legislature. He was succeeded in 1943 by E. C. Manning (centre) who retired in 1968 and handed over the reins to the present premier, Harry Strom (bottom).

Zoomobile Launched

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor John V. Lindsay put the city's first zoomobile on the road Thursday. It is intended to bring a look at the animal world to children in their own neighborhoods. The 35-foot long truck-trailer set off on its travels through the city carrying 30 species including a boa-constrictor, gibbons, and a mynah bird.

BIRDS SINK $8,000 FOUNTAIN

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — The well-fed ducks and geese at Virginia Lake seem to have developed a taste for styrofoam.

Parks and recreation director Rocco Spina said the $8,000 fountain at the suburban lake sank because the birds ate its styrofoam base.

Spina said the fountain will be hoisted to the surface and a new base will be inserted.

"We'll use something like vinyl. Something that will have a horrible taste," Spina said.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Tell me, please, and quickly, what I can give a teething puppy to teeth on besides my hand? I'm going to end up with bloody stumps at this rate. He's three months old and a German shepherd. His name is Bruno but I should have named him Shark. — B.D.

DEAR B.D.: The longer a puppy is allowed to teeth on fingers the less willing he will be to accept less interesting substitutes, but be insistent. Those to keep handy might include better quality nylon bones and larger sized, chew bones. Fresh knuckle bones may be acceptable if trimmed before giving them to the puppy to remove any chunks of hanging tendon which might be torn loose and swallowed. These bones should themselves be replaced when and if a puppy actually begins to "get to them." There are many rubber and synthetic toys which are acceptable but many more are not. The "no-no's" include those small enough to be swallowed whole or soft enough to be torn apart and swallowed piecemeal. Or, they may contain appendages from buttons to bows which can be torn off and then swallowed. Consider the puppy may consume anything — digestible or otherwise.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Miss Muffett, our cat, had a terrible case of distemper and we were lucky to save her. She recovered quickly, though. Quickly enough, in fact, to come up with a litter of kittens three months later. They are still nursing her but we wonder if they might not be exposed to the virus, maybe, in the house and be in danger of coming down with it too. Her kittens are a bit timid but tender and affectionate and we would hate to lose them with such a horrible disease.—H.G.

DEAR H.G.: Miss Muffett's maudlin offspring should be well protected from the disease as long as they are nursing. Her milk should provide them with a high degree of protection because of her recent bout with the disease. At seven or eight weeks, though, the doctor would want to give them additional protection by beginning their immunization against this feline distemper.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER, Is there any reason why a bath given in lukewarm water and using a mild, castile soap can be anything but safe for a puppy? All the folderol I've heard and read about bathing a puppy is a lot of nonsense as far as I'm concerned. After all, why should a puppy be more delicate than a baby who bathes all the time? — K.C.

DEAR K.C.: True, a puppy needn't be more delicate than a baby but there are some differences. An important one is the coat. It's harder to quickly dry a puppy so as to avoid chilling. A chilled puppy would be particularly susceptible to disease and especially the viral diseases, distemper and hepatitis. It is safer, therefore, to not bathe puppies, under normal circumstances, until they are vaccinated against these diseases. A puppy's ears are more difficult to rinse completely than a baby's. So if you should get soap into those ears, it certainly could cause trouble. (Soap — even Castile — can cause very serious eye irritation so it's a good bet to put a drop of bland oil in the eyes ahead of time to help protect them.)

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

In the back part of the house, where my office and bedroom take up the southwest corner, we have shades on half a dozen windows instead of draperies. Those shades get kind of limp when the relative humidity is high. If I leave one of them hanging at a certain point for several days, and then pull it down, the bend of the roller remains for many hours. The damp weather also is tough on lamp shades. They wrinkle and pucker.

When the weather is wet and there is water in the air, the silk or cotton fabrics of lamp shades and window shades absorb some of the moisture during the night. The fibres in the fabric loosen and the shades look like I'd better give them away to somebody who doesn't care.

By mid-morning, however, life gets a little brighter. The air begins to dry out and the fibres lose the water. The fabric in the lamp shades stretches as the fibres became taut. Even in houses with dehumidifiers, the lamp shades sag during the night. Night-time is the time when the weather is usually wettest.

POLLUTION CONTROL COSTLY

Plant Closing Threatened

VANCOUVER (CP) — Stiff anti-pollution regulations could shut down the Port Alice pulp mill, the president of Rayonier Canada (B.C.) Ltd. said Friday.

G. S. Bowell told the inquiry into pollution by the forest industry that the present 53-year-old mill on Neroutsos Inlet on the north end of Vancouver Island would be closed by his company if the regulations were put into effect.

Asked if the company would consider building a new mill to replace it, Bowell replied:

"I would guess that it would not be economical to build a new plant, considering the earnings of the present plant during the past five years."

The after-tax earnings of the mill since 1965, according to the brief submitted by the company to the inquiry, totalled aproximately $5 million.

The mill has 1,100 employees, including those in four logging camps.

INQUIRY ENDS

The inquiry, conducted by W. N. Venables, director of the B.C. pollution control branch, ended Friday after eight days of hearings at the B.C. Research Council building here.

The Rayonier brief, solely on the much-criticized Port Alice operation, said the company was prepared to spend $12 million in pollution abatement equipment for the mill during the next eight years.

The company is under strong pressure by the pollution control branch to clean up its operation" and must submit a preliminary report on its plans by Sept. 15.

The company currently has no permit from the branch to dispose of effluent into Neroutsos Inlet.

Henry Castillou, president of the Richmond Anti-Pollution Association, called for a strict enforcement of existing anti-pollution legislation.

He said the provincial government should direct "substantially" more money and manpower to the B.C. Forest Service, the pollution control branch and any other anti-pollution agency.

OFFERS SYSTEM

West Vancouver engineer Peter Robinson, in a brief to the inquiry, said pulp mills, by using a system invented by him, could cut down sharply on water effluent.

He said that kraft pulp mills had been banned in Denmark and West Germany, because of the amount of pollutant material they produce.

The United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union told the inquiry in its brief that it believed the fishing industry is suffering because of the debris left dumped in the Fraser River by logging operations.

Mr. Venables said at the end of the inquiry that he appreciated hearing from such a wide variety of people about pollution caused by the forest industry.

The inquiry's advisory panel will prepare a series of recommendations about possible standards of pollution control to be adopted by the provincial government.

The recommendations are not expected to be ready for some months.

Tiger Cages Not Replaced

SAIGON (AP) — A South Vietnamese government spokesman said today that the "tiger cages" on Con Son Island were no longer being used, but he acknowledged that construction of new cells to replace them had not yet started.

The spokesman, Nguyen Ngoc Huyen, said the interior ministry has taken bids from building contractors for the new cells. But he could not say when work will start or be finished.

Huyen denied a claim by the Saigon Students' Union this week that the government had built underground vaults to replace the "tiger cages." He said the prisoners formerly held in the disciplinary cells had been moved to cells in other prison buildings on the island, 140 miles southeast of Saigon in the South China Sea.

The government announced July 21 that it would abolish the "tiger cages" and replace them with new maximum security cells of a different type.

The announcement followed a controversy that developed after two U.S. congressmen visited Con Son Island and revealed the existence of the cages.

The congressmen, Representatives Augustus F. Hawkins (Dem. Calif.) and William R. Anderson (Dem. Tenn.), charged that several hundred prisoners, most of them anti-government political prisoners, were confined in the cages under crowded conditions, were denied adequate food and care and were subjected to physical mistreatment.

The cages are cells about nine feet by five feet with steel-bar ceilings. Most of the cells housed three to five prisoners. The cages were reported to have housed up to 500 prisoners at various times.

BARBERS CLIPPED

BEDFORD, England (UPI) — Police consulted legal experts to determine appropriate charges to be filed against five men who cut off the beard and moustache of a 29-year-old Sikh.

Among the alternatives: the theft of a beard or taking it without the owner's permission, causing bodily harm by frightening a victim, common assault or behavior likely to cause a breach of the peace.

STANFIELD: The Personal Approach?

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — With Robert Stanfield's apparent success in small groups, there are plans for the Conservative leader to devote more time to "meet-the-people" events rather than emphasizing formal speeches.

Party officials — sounding somewhat like advisors to former prime minister Lester Pearson — say their leader's human qualities, sense of humor and interest in other people emerges far better in small, informal groups of people than on a speaker's platform.

There are expected to be far more events like the recent tour of downtown Hamilton, and the walk around pollution-problem spots in Toronto where the Conservative leader chatted easily with residents and those immediately involved with local problems.

In this type of situation, says one party official, Stanfield comes across as "someone who cares."

Some Conservatives MPs have been advocating for some time that more emphasis by put on the "human qualities" of Stanfield, coupling it with continued attacks on the "inhuman" approach by government to such issues as unemployment.

So far, say sources, Stanfield has not tipped his hand about plans to build up momentum leading to the next general election campaign. But his meet-the-people program obviously is part of this.

Apart from his recent visits to Hamilton and Toronto, he goes to Alberta next month to spend six days in a largely informal atmosphere. He will be a few days on a beef farm, and later visit a wheat farm.

In the last six months, Stanfield has engaged in a heavy round of speechmaking, usually striking out at Finance Minister Benson's white paper on taxation.

While he still faces many other speeches, officials say that efforts will be made to include meet-the-people periods in his travels. There is also expected to be more emphasis on question-and-answer sessions with such groups as students.

"What we would like," said one source, "is to see Mr. Stanfield have face-to-face meetings with as many people as possible."

There was also reported to be generally favorable reaction concerning the publicity Stanfield received after he went on a Toronto stage recently to be kissed by members of the cast of Hair.

But there were also a few letters to arrive in Ottawa saying in effect, tut-tut.

"One kissing politician is enough," wrote one woman.

Immigration Machinery Broken Down

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — A breakdown in federal machinery is allowing immigrants who would never get past normal channels to enter Canada as visitors, then stay.

Appalled officials say the flow is 30,000 a year and rising as a result of loopholes and a lenient appeal board.

The proportions of the problem are best seen at the appeal board, an independent nine-member body that handles 85 to 100 cases a month.

It is getting apppeals against deportation at the rate of 250 to 300 a month. After two years of operation, it has a backlog of 3,000 cases.

In other words, if appeals stopped today, it would take the board 2½ years to catch up.

A selective immigration system started in 1967 is aimed at weeding out unskilled, uneducated applicants in their home country via a test.

But Canada also has waived visa requirements for visitors who are here less than three months, created the appeal board, and given deportees the right to appeal at public expense.

APPEALS TAKE TIME

This means anyone can come to Canada as a visitor, then seek landed status once here. If he is ordered deported, he may appeal at once, usually with the knowledge that it will be months and possibly years before a definitive order is made.

Because the board can quash an order on compassionate grounds, would-be immigrants who are appealing often marry quickly on arrival in Canada. Marriage and children born in this country naturally enhance their chances of staying.

Easy access to social security cards and a job make the short-cut route even more attractive.

The immigration appeal board was formed in late 1967 with seven members. It has nine now, and there is talk of enlarging it. But a spokesman says this isn't the answer. The board would have to be unwieldy to really cut into the backlog.

The board will divide into panels of three this fall to hold hearings in Toronto and Montreal as well as Ottawa. "But if we sat night and day, it would take months to get up to date," a spokesman says.

Tiny Adak Island Said Considered For Nerve Gas

ANCHORAGE (AP) — The Anchorage Daily News said Friday the United States have been scouting Adak Island in the Aleutians as a possible site for storing nerve gas now kept on Okinawa.

The newspaper said it was told by informed sources that a navy inspection team headed by Vice-Admiral William F. Bringle, commander of the navy's Pacific Air Arm, was in Adak early this week to inspect the suitability of the island as a storage site for the gas.

The military immediately denied the report.

Admiral Bringle, whose headquarters are in Hawaii, had visited Adak and Kodiak late last week and this week, but said that his mission was an "administrative inspection" of naval air units in Alaska.

The News said "authoritative sources informed the paper that a weapons storage depot on Adak and a facility on nearby Taa-Aga Island are being considered as the actual storage sites."

Johnston Island in the Pacific was listed as a possible alternative.

The military has been trying to find a home for the 13,000 tons of nerve gas — which belongs to the army — since pressure for its removal from Okinawa began to mount earlier this year.

A plan to ship the nerve gas to the Umatilla army depot near Hermiston, Ore., earlier this year, met with intense opposition from Pacific Northwest congressmen and the governors of the states of Washington and Oregon. The plan was dropped.

A subsequent plan to possibly ship the gas to the Kodiak naval station also apparently was dropped at the insistence of Alaska's Sen. Mike Gravel, Gov. Keith Miller and Rep. Howard Pollock.

WOULD YOU BELIEVE THAT AS LITTLE AS $25 DOWN AND $25 A MONTH WILL BUY YOU A LOT ON THIS BEAUTIFUL ISLAND?

It's true! Beautiful lots on this magnificent sweep of sandy beach in the sunny B.C. Gulf Islands can be bought at the ridiculously low down payment of $25. Pay off the balance at $25 per month . . . and live and enjoy your property while you pay for it! What's the catch?

There is no catch!

We made an exceptionally good buy on a fine group of lots on one of the most desirable of British Columbia's Gulf Islands. This is not "wilderness" land. The property is a legal subdivision, with a registered map of lots. The land is high and dry. There are literally miles of white, sandy beaches. The fishing is tremendous. The climate is something you have to experience to believe. Don't take our word for it . . . read what established periodicals have said about this area:

"They are the Unknown Islands. They are potentially the largest and most spectacular marine playground in the world. Their natural beauty beggars description."
VANCOUVER SUN, Editorial, Oct. 30, 1961

"At Savary Island you will find all the fabled charms of the South Seas, long reefs, miles of white sand beaches, warm bathing, some of the Northwest's best salmon fishing, and wonderful clams and oysters, all free."
NORMAN D. FORD, "Today's Best Buys in Vacations," New York, 1960

"We made our headquarters at the Royal Savary Hotel, a gay little hostelry that'll do you proud. A typical day: up with the birds and out after those lusty big Northwest salmon. Mornings we played golf on the hotel's free beach course. Afternoons we lazily sun-tanned on the beach, swam, water-skied. Then cocktails, a superb dinner, dancing, and dreaming around a glowing beach fire. MAN, WHAT MORE CAN YOU ASK?
JAMES C. WHITE, in "13 Offbeat Vacations"
Man's Magazine, July, 1959

Or if you would like the recommendation of a fellow who really got around this old world, and reached Savary Island by way of the beautiful South Seas, how about this?

"At sunset we sailed 'twixt the main and a lovely verdant isle which I named Savary's Island. Here we landed and made camp on a fine sandy beach."
. . . from the Ship's Log of Captain George Vancouver, in the year 1792

"These beautiful, uncrowded islands have beaches so warm and sunny they resemble Hawaii. Savary Island, one of the most beautiful, is easiest to reach."
CORONET MAGAZINE article—
"Island Hideaways Close to Home"

Beauty? Yes, . . . aplenty. But beauty and relaxation are not the only advantages of this island paradise. Here is an investment real estate situation beyond compare.

Waterfront property in B.C. is at a premium. Before long the price of sandy-beached property of this type . . . easily accessible and highly desirable . . . will be priced out of reach of all but the wealthy.

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

The sound of school bells . . .

Just as we predicted . . . mothers with their young in hand are beating a trail to Wilson's junior shop . . . bent on outfitting their school agers with the sort of sturdy, quality clothing that will not only look smart, but give long, honest wear . . . None of this constantly having to replace business! . . . Every school-age child should own one of Wilson's English Gloverall duffle coats . . . with attached hood and bone toggle closing . . . They're warm, weather-poof, and may be had in sizes 4 to 20 . . . in charcoal, navy, camel, beige and bottle green . . . We noticed a particularly good range of boys all-wool sweaters . . . Both V- and crew-necks . . . in lambswool, shetland and heavy knits . . . sizes 6 to 18 . . . Lots of pullovers and cardigans for girls . . . in easy-care machine-washable Courtelle . . . various attractive colors . . . and if your girl-child doesn't have to wear a school uniform . . . one of the most attractive school garments you can get her is an all-wool tartan kilt imported from Scotland . . . A white blouse or a pullover in one of the tartan colors teams up beautifully with one of these kilts . . . Do look, too, at the St. Michael's orlon dresses for 5 to 9-year-olds . . . Jacquard tops with plain pleated skirts . . . or plain tops with colored trim on the skirt . . . You can toss these right in the washer and they'll come out looking as good as new! . . . W. & J. Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

In Hawaii, for every 100 single women over 14 . . . there are 191 single men!

Eye-popping values at Miss Frith's . . .

You could have knocked us over with a ping pong ball when we caught sight of the price tag on a very smart mink-collared coat we were admiring at Miss Frith's the other day . . . Ye gods! Only $99 for this high quality garment . . . in a period when prices all over the place are going up . . . up . . . up? . . . Must be some mistake we thought! . . . not so . . . It seems Miss Frith's were fortunate enough to get these coats especially made for them . . . at a very special price . . . and are, of course, passing on the benefit of their astuteness to you, their customers . . . Not only the coats . . . which are all wool in solid colors of black, teal, brown and grey, with genuine mink collars . . . but good looking tweed suits as well . . . tagged at a mere $60 . . . Makes you think of the good old days, doesn't it? . . . The suits are styled with the attractive longer jacket . . . A-line skirt . . . well-tailored in all-wool tweed with an overcheck design . . . lovely autumn shades . . . same tweed fabrics are also used for tailored topcoats . . . double-breasted with wide lapels, slash pockets and back half-belt . . . Same $60 price tag too! . . . All we can say is that these delightful coats and suits look as if they should cost double their price! . . . Miss Frith Fashions, 1619 Douglas St., 383-7181.

The lengthening of skirts will inevitably change a woman's manner of walking, so we're told.

Sweet dreams in these sweet nighties . . .

Not wishing to court bankruptcy . . . we don't often succumb to temptation on our "Doing the Town" safaris . . . but one look at a new Van Raalte nightie just received by Saba's this week and we were sunk . . . Bought it on the spot, in fact! . . . Think it's mainly the lovely, unusual color that got us . . . called "viola", it's a cross between rose and lilac . . . the gown's opaque nylon tricot gathered into a delicate lace and sheer nylon yoke . . . very feminine and pretty . . . Same nightie can also be had in black . . . oo la-la! . . . Price is $9 . . . For fall nights, when the air turns cool, Saba's have a pet of a sheer brushed nylon nightie . . . printed all over with big blue, rose or turquoise polka dots on a white background . . . Three-quarter length sleeves end in elastic and frill . . . frills around the neck and down the front . . . These nighties . . . long length priced at $9 . . . $8 for the short version . . . are very new and quite beguiling . . . We think our younger readers, especially, will want to own one or more of these . . . Great for college dormitory life! . . . Also new at Saba's . . . from Van Raalte . . . are Crepessence nylon slips . . . with lovely lace tri mat top and around the bottom . . . Saba's, 1130 Douglas St., 384-0561.

You see the gypsy dress . . . just above the ankle with deep hemline flounce . . . everywhere in Italy this summer.

Dashing and debonair handbags . . .

Some mighty handsome handbags arrived at Wilson's just recently . . . several of them one of a kind . . . but a characteristic they all have in common is roominess . . . and a look of complete "rightness' with the new clothes which are also being unpacked almost daily at Wilson's . . . To mention the one-of-a-kinds first . . . there's a honey gold suede bag with matching snakeskin trim . . . Two front pockets supplement the big, leather-lined inner compartments . . . and there's a matching change purse . . . something you don't find too often these days . . . Price of this beauty . . . which can be carried by hand or over the shoulder . . . is $85 . . . A very versatile bag, on the dressy side, is butter-soft crushed leather in a rich tobacco shade . . . double handles and a V-shaped top flap with a gold metal triangular trim . . . $50 . . . Another sporty colored bag in crushed leather has one deep outer pocket and an outer zip compartment . . . zipped right, across the top, and leather-lined . . . it's very light-weight, extremely roomy, and a "natural" for travel . . . A convertible shoulder strap features a black crushed leather bag with silver metal trim . . . $40 . . . and there are several nice pouchy leather bags . . . just the thing for pant suits . . . in cognac, camel, or black . . . Big and roomy and just $25 at . . . W. & J. Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Color for the kitchen . . .

A great little gift for under $5 . . . $4.75, to be precise . . . is one of the new chopping boards we saw displayed at Montague Bridgman's last week . . . All in the interest of adding color and charm to the kitchen . . . and we guarantee that even the female who has everything wouldn't turn her dainty little nose up at one of these! . . . Made by the same people in England who make those gorgeous hot plate mats and coasters we've told you about in the past . . . these chopping boards are really something special! . . . They're bonded on both sides with long-lasting, tough melamine finish . . . that you can hack at with impunity . . . so they're just as efficient as all get-out . . . On top of which, they're a pleasure to look at . . . Designs are extremely good . . . running mostly to stylized flowers, fruits or abstracts . . . One is a still life of cheeses so realistic it will make your mouth water . . . (Incidentally, these chopping boards also make grand cheese trays . . . and colorful and useful bar accessories) . . . and believing all we've said about color, there's one design in stark black and white . . . an etching of a bunch of grapes . . . which is most attractive! . . . Shapes are round, or square or rectangular . . . all with handles, and holes to hang the board up on the wall when not in use . . . Noticed one of these packaged with a matching tea towel . . . $6.75 for the set . . . Montague Bridgman Ltd., 811 Government St., 383-0821.

Two great P & O cruises coming up . . .

If you're flirting with the thought of taking a real, super-super cruise this coming winter . . . one that will stimulate you, rest you and refresh you . . . drop in to Paulin's and ask them to give you brochures on P & O's Circle Pacific Holidays . . . The Waltzing Matilda cruise . . . a two-month voyage aboard the Oronsay leaving Vancouver next Jan. 18 . . . and the Jade Tiki . . . a happy three-month cruise on the Canberra next March 4 . . . Fascinating reading . . . and if one of these doesn't whet your appetite for getting away from it all, nothing will! . . . Waltzing Matilda takes you to Hawaii, Samoa and Fiji Islands, New Zealand, Australia, Singapore, Hong Kong and Japan . . . Includes shore excursions and a four-day overland tour of Japan . . . There are also optional tours you may take in Australia and New Zealand, at a modest extra cost . . . And what a good time of year to escape from the winter doldrums in Victoria! If you prefer to do your cruising in springtime . . . the Jade Tiki cruise is even more exciting . . . Three months, this one . . . going to the same ports but in the opposite direction . . . and including five spring-fresh days in Japan . . . staying at the best hotels, and taking in all the sights . . . Since both these P & O cruises have been terrifically popular in the past . . . we think we should remind you to let Paulin's make your bookings early . . . so that you can have your pick of accommodation . . . Paulin Travel, 1006 Government St., 382-9168.

Florsheim shoes fit marvellously! . . .

Seldom do you find shoes that manage to combine exciting styling with divine fit and solid comfort the way Florsheims do! . . . They're terribly smart . . . without being faddish or extreme in any way . . . and the secret of their fit and comfort lies in the exclusive Wispa-Shank construction which made Florsheims one of the top shoes in the U.S. . . . before they were manufactured in Canada, thus bringing the price down considerably . . . Munday's have their new fall patterns in now . . . and we're even more impressed than we were when we saw our first Canadian-made Florsheims a year ago . . . The use of navy blue patent is new this fall . . . you'll find it in a draped top and gold buckle shoe, which also comes in black patent . . . A dressy, high draped-front shoe with cuban-height heel comes in brown patent only . . . A very smart plain classic pump with roll top and higher, slenderer heel, may be had in either black calf or patent . . . Another pump in brown, beige or black patterned calf, has a banded top . . . As for walking shoes, there's a high-cut mottled brown, or black calf slip-on . . . and a brown suede with imitation stacked heel and rippled crepe sole . . . All these Florsheim shoes are priced at $26.95 . . . and Munday's have handbags to match some of them . . . from $12.95 . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

ARBUTUS CRAFTS WORKERS OFF TO PNE

These three workers have reason to smile. Sunday they will leave for the Pacific National Exhibition in Vancouver. Beatrice Schachtel, left, will demonstrate weaving while Kal Ormond makes corsages and John Mabee does cane work. They are members of the Arbutus Crafts workshop for the disabled which operates at 1119 Vancouver Street. The workshop is supported through personal donations, the Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation grant and proceeds from an annual craft sale each October.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Constant Coffee

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who complains constantly to me because she lives in a clannish neighborhood. She says that her neighbors come over for coffee every morning even before she has her last one off to school. And a few of them stay until it's time for lunch and she can't get her housework done.

They don't wait to be offered coffee — they help themselves. (She uses five pounds of coffee a week and she is the only adult in her family who drinks it.)

I told her to put a sign outside her door, "Sorry, no time for coffee today," but she says she hasn't got the nerve.

Her husband travels, and when he's home the neighbors are there having coffee right with him. How can I help my friend get rid of these pests? I'm afraid she'll have a nervous breakdown.—West Sider.

DEAR WEST: Many people complain that they are constantly being "imposed upon;" by unwelcome guests, but for some strange reason they never do anything about it. This leads me to suspect that the "victim" not only secretly enjoys these drop-in pests, but enjoys complaining about them. It's her coffee, her time and her problem. When she complains to me, I'll recommend a foolproof pest exterminator.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a great person — except for one thing: his temper. He has never hit me, but I'm starting to get scared. He gets mad over the least little thing He broke the leg off the TV because he couldn't get a clear picture, and if somebody happens to get a wrong number and rings our place by mistake he yells as them like they committed some kind of crime.

He has always had a hot temper but he used to cool down fast. Now he gets mad at the least little thing and he stays mad for hours — and sometimes days. Could something be wrong with him?—Scared.

DEAR SCARED: Yes. But I am no doctor which is what your husband needs in order to determine if his fits of anger are symptoms of a serious illness or if he is just overreacting in a childish way.

DEAR ABBY: X and I are getting married soon at a formal wedding in a church. Three out of the four ushers have long hair. This will look terrible with tuxes. I think those three should either cut their hair or wear one of those short stretch wigs they have for men now.

X says we have no right to ask them to do either. My mother is having a fit.

If these boys show up in the wedding party with their long hair, I know there will be a lot of criticism from my relatives. What is your opinion?—B.

DEAR B: You have no right to ask the ushers to pose as shorthaired types. (I doubt if they would agree to do it, anyway). It seems to me that everyone should be accustomed to seeing long hair on men by now. If it's clean and well cared for, what is there to criticize?

Prescription Includes Two Martinis a Day

MIAMI, Fla. (Reuters) — A couple of stiff drinks downed daily by a woman in her last few weeks of pregnancy can prevent one cause of mental retardation in the infant, a medical researcher has reported.

Dr. Richard Waltman, associate professor at the Brooklyn Cumberland Medical Centre in Brooklyn, N.Y., reported at a University of Miami medical conference that hyperbilirubinemia, an excess amount of a liver product which produces jaundice and nerve-system damage, can be prevented by alcohol in moderate amounts.

But he said that drinking any alcohol at all before the last few weeks of pregnancy can be risky and the unborn baby can easily become intoxicated.

To prevent the liver condition, Dr. Waltman recommended the "pleasant oral consumption" of reasonable amounts of alcohol at the proper time.

"What's reasonable? A couple of martinis a day," he said.

Barrett's Style . . . Strictly Early Government

By BRUCE YEMEN

It was one of those still autumn days in Victoria when the quiet that shrouded the legislative buildings seemed almost ominous.

Three news-hungry reporters paced nervously outside the padded doors of Premier Bennett's office.

Little did they know that at that very moment, deep in the cellar of a nearby government building, Bennett's new arch-rival was prowling and skulking through the dusty gloom.

It was Dave Barrett, newly-named leader of the Opposition, apparently looking for skeletons in the government's closets.

Now, several months later, the real story can be told.

Barrett was looking for furniture for his new office.

As the office now shows, it was a successul underground movement. With a few tips from "key government sources," particularly the men on the buildings' staff of the public works department, Barrett assembled a collection of fine old oak furniture.

Most of it dates back to the early part of the century or beyond, and the style can be described as "early government."

Except for Barrett's desk, the furniture has a solid, well-built look.

His desk, which dates from about 1900, is well-built but it has almost a dainty look in contrast with the sleek massiveness of desks favored by today's swivel-chaired executives.

Can you tell the man by his furniture?

Barrett, a down-to-earth sort, agreed that it's possible his choice of antique government furniture may show a sense of respect for political tradition.

"Politicians come and go," he said, "but the institution goes on."

But basically, he said, it shows that he and his wife, Shirley, have been keen on antiques for a number of years. It's a matter of personal taste.

Former Opposition Leader Bob Strachan, for instance, had furnished his office in modern style, yet was widely regarded as an old-fashioned type of politician.

Amateur psychologists would find it interesting that Barrett has chosen a small desk under which his legs are readily visible to visitors.

For the average man of power, that's just too much insecurity-making exposure. Large desks are for hiding behind or for intimidating visitors.

Barrett often doesn't even sit behind the desk when people come to visit. He sits casually beside it on an old chair, talking man-to-man, or woman, as the case may be.

Asked whether this was an old social-worker habit (Barrett is a social worker), Barrett grinned and said, "Oh, you noticed that."

But amateur psychologists had better not read too much into Barrett's prized liquor cabinet.

"It's purely a decorative piece," he said, opening the door to partially illustrate his point. The cabinet was reportedly used by Charles Edward Pooley, speaker of the legislature around the turn of the century.

If the liquor cabinet is a decorative piece, the 50-year-old black leather couch is what Barrett calls his "piece de resistance."

The big, billowy horse-hair-stuffed couch has two stories attached to it. One is that Duff Pattullo, hard-nosed premier from 1933 to 1941, kept the couch in his office.

The other story, less prestigious but more fascinating, is that the couch was used by Tom Uphill, free-thinking independent Labor MLA for Fernie from 1920 to 1960.

"In either case," Barrett says, "there must be quite a reputation attached to it."

The furniture didn't all come out of cellars. The couch, for instance, was being carefully protected from garbage-collectors by J. A. Sadler, senior welfare department official.

He parted with it after getting a solemn promise from Barrett to take good care of it. As it is, Barrett is worried that the aging black leather won't last much longer. Repair efforts are getting more difficult.

One of the pieces, an old standup clerk's desk, was talked away from Hunter Vogel, Social Credit MLA for Langley, who is the party's whip during the legislative session.

Barrett's secretary, Mrs. Joyce Thomas, who completed the deal by telephone, reports that Vogel seemed a little vague about what he was giving away and asked for the right of recall.

The curtains in Barrett's office were made from old, rust-colored floral-patterned material in a public works storage room. Women volunteers from Victoria area NDP associations sewed the drapes.

Barrett has left the buff and brown color scheme unchanged, and the light green rug has stayed. Two of his personal antiques — a Tiffany lamp and a 100-year-old wine-velvet lap desk complete with secret compartments, add extra touches of old-fashioned style to the room.

Barrett has a little gallery of framed photographs on his wall, with top place reserved for Amor de Cosmos, Premier of B.C. from 1872 to 1874.

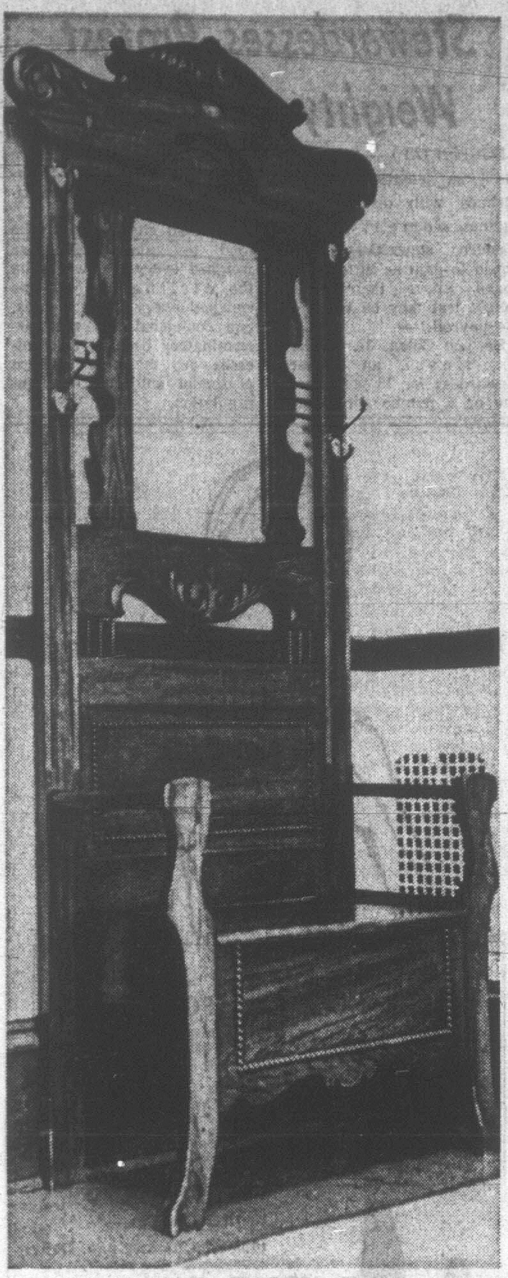
"He was the world's first hippie," Barrett says. Other photos are of the first socialist MLAs elected in B.C. and of the various CCF-NDP leaders through the years, but not including himself.

What would Premier Bennett think of it all?

Barrett is quick to point out that his furnishing effort has involved not a single capital expense for the taxpayers, a point that should gladden the premier's heart.

One last question, Mr. Barrett. Would you take this furniture with you if you and the premier ever changed offices in a few years?

Dave Barrett, modest and wily to the end, gave it a little thought, looked his questioner right in the eye and said: "No comment."



Hall-stand complete with mirror, coat-hooks and a flip-up seat for storing galoshes is one of Dave Barrett's office antiques.

Photos by Bill Halkett

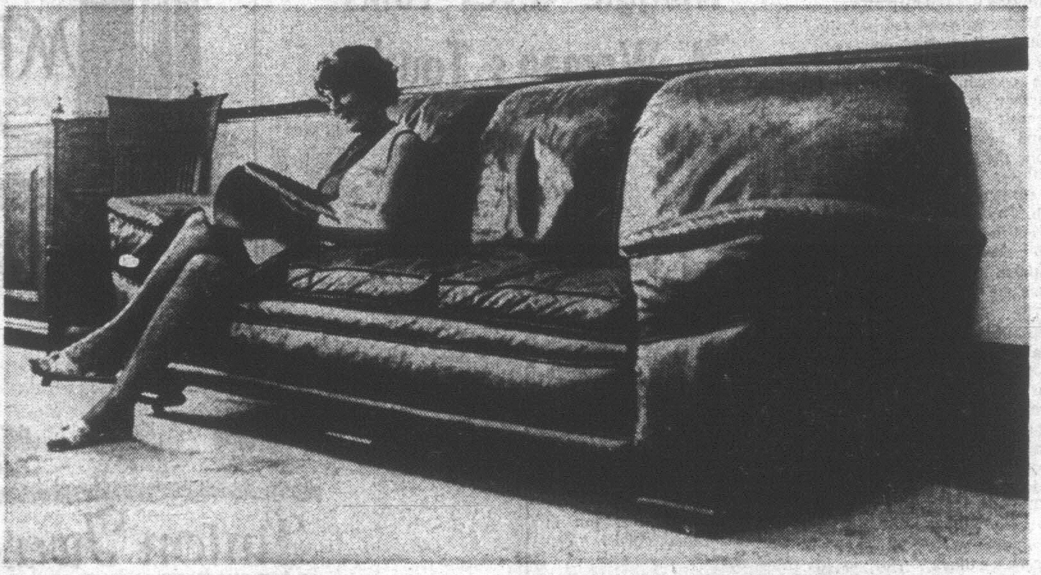
Opposition Leader Dave Barrett sits behind the finely-crafted, leather-top, oak desk that the provincial public works department found for him in a warehouse. In the right rear corner is an old, stand-up clerk's counter and on the left is an antique liquor cabinet, which, it should be explained, was moved close to desk for photographic purposes. Barrett was a bit late for the picture — he was out looking at old lamps in antique shops.



Secretary Joyce Thomas tries out the big, black leather couch that her boss, Dave Barrett, negotiated away from the welfare department. Barrett says the couch is about 50 years old and is rich in political history.

Women of Spain Fight for Revision of Equality Laws

By MARTIN DAVIS

MADRID (Reuters) — The women of Spain, overworked, underpaid and poorly educated, have started a campaign to better their lot by attacking male pride and female apathy.

Reports, books, conferences and organizations are trying to hoist the Spanish woman from the position one research report calls "among the world's least-privileged female communities."

Despite a Spanish government's ruling in 1961 laying down female equality of salary, education and job, an independent research body called Foessa has shown that the mentality of Spanish society has reflected little of the spirit of the law.

The law itself is "dispersed and contradictory" and in need of urgent revision, the report adds.

Foessa statistics estimate that 26.1 per cent of women and 46.7 per cent of men are opposed to the idea of women working, with upper and working classes the most hostile.

In the textile and chemical industries alone, women working the same hours in the same job as men are earning up to 46 per cent less in wages. Similar cases are cited in other industries. Women are also forbidden to work at night.

A government decree passed July 24 proposes to supplement the 1961 law and help Spain's 3,000,000 working women 19 per cent of the labor force to claim new social security benefits.

The decree stipulates subsidies for married women with large families and provides for baby-sitter and post-natal care services. And married women will no longer need their husbands' approval to accept employment.

A national commission for the working woman has lobbied the labor ministry to amend a law which now means marriage compensation is lost if a woman resumes or starts work.

It also asked for protection against collective labor agreements discriminatory to women and called for housework to be listed as a recognized profession worthy of social security payments.

RUN SCHOOLS

The most streamlined and organization in Spain is the women's section of the Opus Dei international Roman Catholic lay body. Its associates, whether lawyers or domestic servants, aim at "the sanctification of ordinary work."

Opus Dei girls run centres in Madrid to train domestic servants. Other schools include university-standard studies and subjects ranging from drafting and hairdressing to courses in classical and modern art.

But the Opus Dei women reject the claims of a book called The Alienation of Women, which denouced the Spanish man for "relegating women to the role of an object" and holding double standards of virginity.

A leading Opus Dei member said: "We were the first organization of the Roman Catholic Church to recognize the value of sex for women, within matrimony. But there has been no radical change in our recognition of chastity. Naturally all our girls are totally in respect of the law against birth control."

Stewardesses Protest Weighty Regulation

BOSTON (AP) — A stewardess has charged Eastern Airlines with discrimination against women, asserting Eastern stewardesses are afraid to gain as little as one pound above their hiring weight lest they be taken off the payroll.

Bernice Dolan, 37, of Halifax, Mass., an Eastern stewardess for 15 years, was one of a number of women who testified Monday beore the Massachusetts commission against discrimination.

She said stewardesses who tend to gain weight are weighed every two weeks by the airline and all are weighed every three months. She contended this was discriminatory because stewardesses are the only Eastern personnel subject to weight regulation.

Germans Consider Modernization Of Divorce Laws

By PETER REHAK

BONN (AP) — The government wants to recognize that women are able to fend for themselves in today's industrial society.

This is somewhat of a revolution. Present laws operate on the principle that Pop brings home the bacon and Mama raises kids and takes care of the home. If Pop's roving eye gets him into trouble Mama can take him to divorce court and get support for herself for the rest of her life.

"This is a turn-of-the-century idea which no longer corresponds to developments in society and is not compatible with the independent position the constitution grants women," Justice Minister Gerhard Jahn said in an introduction to his draft of the legislation, due to come before parliament next year.

"Our view is that man and wife today have equal responsibility in a marriage."

They and not the law have to decide who takes on responsibility for what in case of a divorce, he added.

ALIMONY TEMPORARY

Under the proposed law, the courts will grant alimony only on a temporary basis — until the economically weaker partner is able to support himself or herself. The husband must support his wife while she taking care or minor children or while she is is entitled to be trained for a job. The draft says a woman is entitled to be training for a job corresponding to her capabilities, but alimony stops once she is supporting herself.

The husband must compensate for any pension rights the wife lost due to marriage.

Jahn calls this arrangement an improvement over the present law, providing for life-long alimony, because in the long run it will make the economically-weaker partner independent.

The draft also proposes to do away with the principle of a guilty party in divorce proceedings. The party deemed guilty now is assessed the bulk of the financial burden imposed by a divorce.

A divorce will be granted if a court decided a marriage has failed.

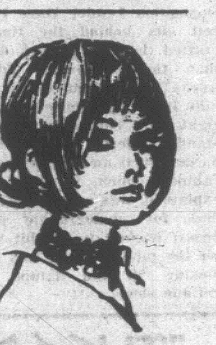
COURT CAN REFUSE

If both partners agree to a divorce, living apart for a year will constitute a failure of the marriage. If one of them does not consent, three years of separation will be grounds for the court to declare a failure.

The court can refuse a divorce "in extraordinarily extreme cases" where it feels one of the partners faces hardship.

Jahn is throwing his draft open to debate and suggestions before he brings it before parliament. The West German Lawyers' Association will discuss it in the fall and church groups will get a chance to express their views.

hair styles for teens



THE SHAG COMBINED WITH THE SLICK

CUT: Divide the hair in half. The front half is layered forward in shaggy bangs tapering down the sides to lengths ending at the jaw. The back is long to the shoulders in a blunt-tipped cut.

TO SET: Tape bangs and sides in place with two rows of one inch rollers in back as shown. Spray with a setting lotion.

TO COME: The front is brushed forward with a shaggy look and the back is brought back to the nape smoothly then coiled into a neat little knot.

MARGARET SMITH

Maggie Gives Talks A Woman's Touch

DETROIT (AP) — Margaret Smith, a widowed mother of three, is the only woman on either side of the bargaining table in contract talks in the auto industry.

A former auto assembly line worker, she is one of the 200,000 women among the 1.6 million members of the United Auto Workers.

Maggie, as she is known, sits with the UAW team in negotiations with American Motors. She began her fourth round at "the main table" recently in Detroit.

Language gets rough occasionally, "but then the boys say, 'Excuse me, Maggie,' and I say, 'Oh, that's OK'."

Does Maggie ever put in her two cents worth? "You bet." How?

"Depends on when the scotch comes up."

Her parents were born in Scotland, but she is American-born and lives in Konosha, Wis.

Would she mind telling a reporter how old she is? "No. That means I won't tell you."

Maggie went to work in 1952 and says she spent 10 years "up and down the assembly line" doing various jobs.

Her husband, Lyell, a plant guard, died in 1957.

Study Reveals Impairments

A study of 52 pre-schoolers in the vicinity of Campus View elementary school uncovered six children with hearing impairments, three serious enough to require surgery.

Officials of the Greater Victoria school board say the study underlines the problem parents and teachers face in spotting hearing defects among youngsters.

Dr. John Weins, the board's director of instruction, said Thursday he is reluctant to make a general statement based on the survey's results. But there is no question the problem is more serious than many people, including teachers, suspect.

The 52 children were tested for a number of characteristics, including hearing and sight. The survey showed all those with vision problems were being treated.

Educators say that's not surprising because it's relatively easy to spot a child squinting. But the child with hearing troubles may compensate, sometimes unconsciously learning to lip read to support poor hearing. Perhaps he will tend to stand near a corner where his ears can more readily collect the sound waves.

Many parents tend to speak loudly, if not shout, at children and this too could hide a hearing problem. Where there is any doubt in a parent's mind, the youngster should be taken to his doctor.

The school board moves its special class for hard-of-hearing children to Uplands school next month.

Calls It Quits

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Mrs. Mary Morgan, a waitress at a downtown restaurant for the last 13 years, quit her job Thursday. Mrs. Morgan, 55, was beaten and kicked early Thursday when two men walked into the restaurant and took $17. They also threatened her with a screwdriver. It was the 23rd time in the last 13 years that the restaurant was robbed while Mrs. Morgan was at work.

Victoria's Prospects Not Good, Says Expert

By HUMPHRY DAVY

The long-term prospects of Victoria being an ideal place to live are not good, a Vancouver economist and land-use consultant said here Friday.

"You are making the same mistakes as other Canadian cities," said Gordon Soules.

The erosion of the region's human environment is already taking place in downtown Victoria and in some rural areas, he said.

Soules is publisher of a new booklet "Vancouver At Your Feet," describing walks citizens can take in public parks.

He's in Victoria making a survey of public green belts with a view to writing a "follow-up" on walking areas here.

He criticized the growing number of high-rise buildings.

"This in time will cut out the sunlight in your downtown area and lead to serious congestion and other problems," he said. "I wonder if you realize that it's quite an experience for visitors from large centres to walk on streets which let the sunlight in."

He said the capital region is not acquiring land fast enough for parks and green belts to take care of future needs.

(The population of the metropolitan area is expected to increase from 190,000 to 240,000 in 10 years.)

"Main arterial highways will also gobble up a lot of your land and destroy the landscape as construction of the new Patricia Bay Highway is already doing," he said.

Soules was not impressed with Victoria's claim that it has more parks on a per capita basis than any other Canadian city.

Such comparisons are misleading as North American cities are infamous for their shortage of parks and open spaces, he said.

He said the problem is mainly caused by town planners and politicians who "go by the book."

That is they work on a formula — so many acres for so many people.

"They overlook the fact that no one can say that so many people only require so many acres of parkland.

"And they overlook the long-term economic effects which result in over-crowding — subsidizing buses to city centres, expansion of police forces to cope with crime and traffic, health and social problems."

Soules feels a city can make no better an investment than buying land to create open spaces.

He said cities in the United States which had failed to provide a human environment are faced with serious problems.

Soules' ideal city is one which provides every district with a green belt.

What disturbs him about Victoria's metropolitan area is the common belief that it has sufficient green area and there is no need to be concerned for the future.

"The longer you wait, the higher the land values," he said. "Vancouver can't do all that it would like to do because the land values are too high now."

Soules said his booklet on walks in the Greater Vancouver area is selling well.

It was prepared in his spare time over four years and not for financial remuneration, he said. One of his assistants was Lois Spindler, a teacher at Simon Fraser University.

"I'm doing this because I'm interested in human environment," he said. "I would like to see more and more people use their parks. The more they do so, the more will be the demand for open spaces."

The Big One They Let Go Free

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the Vancouver Aquarium's narwhal expedition to Baffin Island are talking about the one that was allowed to get away.

"We caught this magnificant big bull, 15½ feet long, with a six-foot tusk and weighing 4,000 pounds," said Ralph Shaw, president of the Vancouver Aquarium, who has just returned from the expedition.

"His family was with him, but they got away, the mother and some youngsters.

"We kept him for two days and then let him go. He was too big. With a 4,000-pounder, the transportation problems would be enormous."

The 12-man expedition, headed by aquarium director Dr. Murray Newman, is looking for five young narwhals between 600 and 1,000 pounds each.

The big bull was caught in Milne Inlet, 60 miles southwest of Pond Inlet on the northeast tip of Baffin Island.

10 MILLION GRANT

Fund Bid Supported

Chamber of commerce directors Friday agreed to support Victoria centennial committee in competing with other centres for the major slice of a $10 million federal grant to B.C. next year.

Conditions of the grant are not yet spelled out, centennial coordinator A. O. Hood told directors meeting at Century Inn. But he felt chances of getting maximum benefit from the money would improve with the earliest possible bid, which is for $6 million to erect a culture centre.

"We've been told $6 million is reaching for the sky," Hood said. "But it is a great deal easier to scale down if you find you must than to scale up once your foot is in the door."

Hood said alternative proposals for the money, if Ottawa could be persuaded, include a new public library or substantial improvements to the existing one, and Gorge waterway development.

Government affairs director Dave Fraser moved support for the bid in principle, recognizing that Vancouver for one would also have a strong claim.

Chamber president Philip Holmes Noted:

"There is not a capital city in Canada which has not gained a major cultural centre in recent years (except Victoria)." He said Ottawa should now give Victoria such consideration.

And in reference to Fraser's reservation: "If we are going to have a fight over ... we might as well start fighting right now."

A campaign to get businesses registered to vote in municipal elections is ready to start in Greater Victoria, Fraser reported. He said there are many eligible firms but few registrations.

In Victoria city the deadline for adding new names to the municipal voters list is Sept. 30, up to which the chamber will be making direct appeals to business.

Use Money For Park, Club Urges

The federal government's $10 million gift for B.C.'s centennial celebrations next year, should be used to create a new national park, Dr. John W. E. Harris, president of the Victoria Outdoor Club, said today.

"I feel British Columbians as a whole would support such a project," he said. "A park serves all people and increases in value and use as time goes on."

"We are going to need more parks if we are going to take care of the large number of visitors expected here in the next few years," he said. "And we are going to need them for our own people."

New Trial Ruled In Threat Case

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A U.S. Court of Appeals judge has ruled that a threat against a U.S. president can be the basis of a conviction "only if made with a present intention to do injury to the president."

"There is no danger to the president's safety from one who utters a true threat and has no intent to do actually what he threatens," Judge J. Brazton Craven wrote in the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals decision reversing the conviction of Ronald Douglas Patillo.

The decision ordered a new trial for Patillo, convicted in U.S. District Court at Norfolk of threatening the life of President Nixon and sentenced to four years in prison.

The appeals court said that a true threat must be made "knowingly and willingly" with the intention of following through.

Weddings

King — Goddue

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized on August 1, 1970, at 7 p.m., at St. Andrew's Cathedral, Blanshard Street, when Myrtle Florence Goddue, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Goddue, of Irma Street, exchanged marriage vows with Mr. Reginald Ronald King, son of Mrs. R. King and late Mr. R. King of Outlook, Saskatchewan. Reverend P. Quigley officiated and Mr. E. Allen played the organ.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was a radiant bride in a floor-redingote style coat with a high influence was shown in the bride's Chantilly lace coat worn over her sleeveless sheath gown. The long sleeved Redingote style coat with a high neckline and cross-over bolero bodice, had a full train sweeping back from the waist. A four-tiered silk illusion veil, misted from a jewelled floral headpiece. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and stephanotis. Matron of honor was Mrs. Leona Quayle, bridesmaids Miss Beryl Thomas, Miss Pat McDowell and junior bridesmaid Miss Colleen Goddue, sister of the bride. The bridesmaids wore sleeveless formals of ice blue crystal charm, they were empire style with fitted bodices and high necklines adorned with white lace, soft bows and sashes added back interest to the full skirts. Flowers were tucked into their bouffant hair do's to match their bouquets of white carnations tipped in blue to match their gowns with blue ribbons. The mother of the bride wore mauve ensemble, shoes and hat to match and wore a pink rose corsage. Mother of the groom wore navy blue ensemble with shoes and hat to match and wore a yellow rose corasage. The best man was Mr. Robert King, brother of the groom, ushers were Mr. Robert Ganner, Mr. Derrick Yeoman and Mr. Brian Miller.

A buffet reception was held at the Holyrood House. A three-tiered wedding cake centred the head table and uncle of the bride, Mr. Robert Ganner proposed toast to the bride. Music was supplied by Davis Combo.

For her going away outfit, the bride wore grey and yellow check walking suit with wide brim grey hat and grey patent shoes and purse to match. Her corsage was a yellow orchid. Mr. and Mrs. King left on a motoring trip to Phoenix, Arizona to visit with groom's aunt and uncle and on their return took up residence at 2039 Kings Road, Victoria, B.C.

Morrison — Simpson

A double ring ceremony July 18th, 1970, at 7 p.m., united in marriage Donna Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Simpson, Obed Avenue, Victoria, to Mr. Cory William Dwight Morrison, son of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Morrison, Brighton, Ontario. Reverend P. Isles officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a floor length gown of logoda silk, featuring an empire waist. Her shoulder length veil was held in place by a floral headpiece. She carried a colonial bouquet of pink sweetheart roses and white stephanotis. Miss Elaine Ives attended the bride as maid of honor, bridesmatron was Mrs. Eli MacKay and bridesmaid was Miss Diane Nolan. They were attired in pink and mauve with floral headpieces and colonial bouquets entone. Best man was Mr. John Fitzpatrick, with Messrs. Gordon Wilson and Gary Headricks ushering the guests.

A reception followed at the Union Centre where Mr. Richard Rusk proposed the toast to the bride. After the reception the couple left for a trip to the Mainland. The bride chose a white dress and coat ensemble for her going away outfit. The couple now are residing in Victoria.

Kilgore — Daviss

Reverend Harold Allen officiated at a double-ring ceremony in Fairfield United Church, July 25th, 1970, at 7 p.m., when Madeline, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Daviss, 1151 Oxford Street, Victoria, exchanged wedding vows with Mr. Rodney Wayne Kilgore, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kilgore, 5046 Lochside Drive.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in her own creation of white floor-length empire style gown of bridal lace, with sleeves that featured three bridal poufs made of organza, and trimmed with lace. A satin train fell from the lace trim at back. Her tulle veil was held in place by a headpiece of organza flowers. The bride's bouquet containing many red gladiolus petals formed a large beautiful rose.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Avril Flynn, as matron of honor, and Miss Leslie Peakock as bridesmaid. They wore identical empire style gowns of pink floral print, and carried bouquets of yellow and pink gladiolus petals, forming large roses. The bride's youngest sister, four-year-old Lisa, was flower girl. She was wearing a similar style gown of the same floral print material, and carried a basket of assorted flowers. The groom's brother, Mr. Larry Kilgore was best man, and Messrs. Bruce Quayle and John Barns ushered in the guests.

Following the ceremony, a reception attended by relatives and friends, was held at War Amputees Hall. The toast to the bride was made by her uncle, Mr. Jack Daviss. After the reception they left for the Interior on a short honeymoon. On their return, the young couple will live in Victoria. For her going away outfit, the bride chose a pale pink dress and coat ensemble with white accessories, and a corsage of pink carnations.

Among the guests were the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Jessie Woodhall. Out-of-town guests were Mrs. Elsie Kidwell, California; Mrs. Hilda Kilgore, Saskatchewan; Mrs. Dora Bell, Regina; Mr. and Mrs. John Dobie, Duncan, B.C., and Mr. Bill Flynn, Alberni, B.C.

Moore — Hope

A wedding which took place at Carberry, Manitoba, on Saturday, August 15th, 1970, united in marriage Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Hope, and Mr. James Henry "Dinty" Moore, recently retired from staff of Victoria Press Ltd., Victoria, B.C.

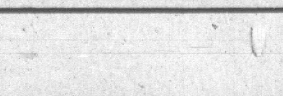
Given in marriage by her son, Mr. Charles Hope, of Brandon, Manitoba, the bride was attended by her daughter, Miss Muriel Hope, Winnipeg, Manitoba. Mr. Gilbert Goodwin of Flin Flon, Manitoba, brother of the bride, supported the groom.

At the wedding supper which followed, Mr. Glenn Tomyn, of Moose Jaw, Sask., proposed the toast to the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore left on a month's visit to England and on their return will reside at Carberry.

Elliott — Hale

Mr. and Mrs. Bertram C. Hale, 1413 Newport Avenue, Victoria, have pleasure in announcing the marriage of their younger daughter Beryl Cendrienne, to Mr. and George S. Elliott, son of the late Dean and Mrs. Spencer H. Elliott, on August 14th, in Vancouver, B.C.



Burnett — Mottershead

Wedding vows were exchanged on August 1, 1970, in Church of Our Lord, when Bishop D. A. G. Rankilor united in marriage Marguerite Evelyn Mottershead, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Kamann, of 2019 Chaucer Street, Victoria, B.C., to Mr. David James Burnett, youngest son of Mrs. J. W. Burnett, 411 Walter Street, Victoria, B.C.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a pale yellow lace and chiffon gown with a matching headpiece. Completing her outfit was the groom's gift of a sapphire and gold pendant. The brides bouquet was a cascade of yellow roses and white carnations. Matron of honor, Mrs. Barbara McNeilly was attired in a pale green chiffon gown with matching headpiece. Her bouquet was a cascade of pale yellow carnations. Best man was Mr. Lewis Kamann, brother of the bride. The bride's two sones, Messrs. Dennis and Brian Mottershead and the groom's son, Mr. Gary Burnett, ushered the guests. A reception followed in the Governor's Suite, Executive House, where Mr. B. McNeilly proposed the toast to the bride. Guests were greeted by the bride's mother, attired in an ensemble of pink and wearing a corsage of pink roses. The groom's mother wore a blue ensemble and a corsage of pink roses. The mothers were assisted in greeting the guests by Mrs. E. Winter and Mrs. Doreen Phillips. Special guests were the groom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. David Burnett, Sr., of Victoria.

The happy couple left for a honeymoon at Lake Tahoe. They will reside in Nanaimo, on their return.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. L. Kamann and Lon, Mrs. R. Phillips, Mr. Thomas Eade, Mr. D. Grundland, Mr. and Mrs. A. Pettigrew, Miss Jayne Graham, all of Nanaimo. Mr. and Mrs. J. Burnett, Jr. from Halifax; Mr. and Mrs. J. Kamann, and Charlene from Courtenay; Mr. R. Rispan, from Edmonton.

Twining — Izard

A lovely wedding took place in Christ Church Cathedral, Victoria, B.C, on Saturday, August 8th, 1970, when Dean Brian Whitlow officiated at the marriage of Ethel Margaret Izard, only daughter of Mr. E. W. Izard and the late Mrs. Izard, and the Reverend John Sanford Twining, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Twining, formerly of Gordon Head. The Cathedral Choir under the direction of Mr. Beal Thomas led the singing of "Praise my soul, the King of Heaven" as the bride entered, and rendered the anthem "Jesu Joy of Man's Desiring" during the signing of the register. Given away by her father, the bride was attended by her nieces, Miss Margot Izard and Miss Patricia Izard. Mr. Russell Twining of Vancouver was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Mr. Richard Izard and Mr. Richard Twining, nephews of the bride and groom. As the bridal party approached and left the church the tower bells were rung be fellow ringers of the bride, among those taking part being the bride's brother, Mr. J. Arthur Izard, and two of her nephews, Mr. Ted Izard and Mr. Ian Izard. They were later joined by her father, Mr. E. W. Izard, when hand-bell ringing was performed at the reception in the garden of her home, "Slindon," 980 Arundel Drive, where the toast to the bride was proposed by Canon S. J. Wickens. Following a honeymoon at Point-no-point, Jordan River, the couple returned to Victoria until August 21st when they planned to leave by car for Saskatchewan to take up residence in St. Mary's Rectory, Birch Hills, near Prince Albert.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Ferguson wish to thank their many friends who sent cards, flowers and gifts to commemorate their Golden Anniversary, and those who visited them during the open house on Aug. 16 all of whom contributed so much towards an event that will always remain a pleasant memory.

9 IN MEMORIAM

SMITH—Edward Melville.
The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for Thou art with me; Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: Thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; and I will dwell in the House of the Lord for ever.—23rd Psalm.
—Fond memories, Karl and Elsie.

SMITH—Edward Melville
—Rest in Peace, Dear Edward.
And ever near us, though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread;
For all the boundless universe
Is life—There is no death.
Goodnight my love.
—Lucy.

They are not lost
Who find the light of Sun and stars and God.
—Your beloved Mother.

"Everything seen is transitory, all else is eternal. Emotions are so minute, they would only bring a smile to his face."
—Lovingly remembered by his Sisters and Families.

A CRUISE TO FRIENDLY COVE

This interesting water trip takes place every Wednesday and Saturday afternoon up to September 12th.

MV. UCHUCK III leaves the Gold River Dock at 1:15 p.m. and journeys to Friendly Cove in Nootka Sound. She returns to Gold River at approximately 7:00 p.m.

The ship lies at the Friendly Cove Dock for one hour and you have the opportunity of setting foot on the same land that Captain Cook did in 1784.

You will enjoy the scenery during the voyage and much of the view looks exactly as it did when H.M.S. "Resolution" made her land-fall in the area.

There is a coffee shop on board and you are welcome to visit any part of the ship.

Air Data Access May Cause Harm

WASHINGTON (AP) — Granting the public free access to Federal Aviation Administration data on airline maintenance problems would do more harm than good for aviation safety, FAA Administrator John H. Shaffer said Friday.

But Representative John E. Moss (Dem. Calif.), chairman of the House of Representatives subcommittee on government information and author of the 1967 Freedom of Information Act, said the records should be made public.

Shaffer said he had rejected a request by consumer advocate Ralph Nader for data filed with the FAA by the airlines about mechanical problems that arise in day-to-day operations.

Nader presumably demanded access to maintenance records to support his contentions of poor airline maintenance and government inspection.

Some of the information provided the FAA is required by law. But the airlines go beyond that and voluntarily provide a wealth of additional useful information, Shaffer said.

"If we are compelled to divulge this information it will dry up, Shaffer said. "The airlines are not required to provide it, and we won't get it.

Moss contends the FAA is clearly in violation of the Federal Aviation Act in making the records available to the aviation industry, but withholding them from specific persons.

Moss said he has asked the lawyer of the transportation department to provide any information he may have on the legal basis for the FAA's position.

Firemen Thanked For Save

Working all Tuesday night, the Victoria fire department made a great save of property at 553 Hillside, owner Percy Wright said Friday.

He said the five-alarm fire threatened two residences and his business, but was confined to one apartment causing an estimated $50,000 damage.

Wright said his gift shop and home suffered only smoke and water damage.

"I want to publicly express my thanks to the city firemen who, through their tireless efforts and at considerable risk to themselves, saved my building from destruction," Wright said.

He said he was also grateful for assistance given the firemen by the Victoria police. And he thanked the persons who turned in the alarms.

Wright was in Duncan when the fire broke out. He said firemen guessed the cause of the blaze could have been spontaneous combustion or a cigarette.

Wright said police and firemen infrequently receive thanks for their work. He said he was particularly impressed by the way firemen stayed on and cleaned up the mess after the blaze was under control.

Fun Day At Cathedral

It's fun day Sunday for parishioners of Christ Church Cathedral.

They will attend in their sports clothes a service at 10 a.m. and then attend a turkey barbecue outside the church.

The barbecue will be followed by a cricket match in Topaz Park between the rector's warden's team and the people's warden's team.

There will also be a softball game for the youngsters and one for those who don't want to play cricket.

Evensong will be celebrated at the regular time — 7:30. The 10 a.m. service will replace the usual 9:30 and 11 services.

South Pender Customs Office Extends Service

The Canada Customs office at Bedwell Harbor on South Pender Island will extend its seasonal service to include all September.

Service from Sept. 15 to 30 will be available only between the hours of 9 a.m. amd 5 p.m.

Those wishing to clear customs outside those hours are advised to go to Sidney, Victoria, Chemainus or Nanaimo during the last two weeks where 24-hour customs service is available.

Choirs to Sing At Beacon Hill

Choirs of the Victoria and Esquimalt churches of the Nazarene will sing together at the outdoor gospel service starting at 7 p.m. Sunday at the Cameron bandshell in Beacon Hill Park.

Other artists will include a group of teen-age singers and Glen Park who will play the saxophone.

Spraying Stopped

ALTA LAKE (CP) — British Columbia Hydro and Pacific Great Eastern Railway have stopped spraying herbicides in the Squamish-Lillooet regional district, district chairman Donald Gow announced Thursday.

"The spraying has ceased, but whether it's because they've completed the job or whether they are taking a serious look at the situation, we don't know," he said. The board had passed a resolution asking the provincial government to tell its departments and Crown agencies not to spray herbicides in the district.

MAN ACCUSED OF SHOOTING RCMP OFFICER

PORT ALBERNI — Allan Wayne Dick, 23, was charged in provincial court today with shooting an RCMP constable in the right cheek with a .22 rifle.

He was remanded without plea until Friday.

Constable W. A. Van De Braak, 28, of 1111 Kendall, was shot while standing on the road in the Number Two Indian Reserve about 4:35 Friday.

RCMP spokesmen said De Braak was taken to West Coast General Hospital and discharged after treatment for minor injuries.

As an RCMP car answering a complaint approached a building on the reserve, a shot hit the windshield and went through one officer's hat, without injuring him. Reinforcements were called and Const. Van De Braak was shot in the cheek.

CONTROVERSIAL PORTRAIT to mark Princess Margaret's 40th birthday was unveiled Friday at the National Gallery in London. Social Credit Maps New National Strategy

EDMONTON (CP) — The Quebec-based Ralliement Créditiste stepped up its campaign for support in the West Friday as the Social Credit movement began celebrating its 35th birthday.

National leader Real Caouette led a group of Quebec Créditistes, including seven members of Parliament and two members of the Quebec National Assembly, to the opening of a two-day western policy conference. With them came a plea to reach over any barriers separating French Canada and the West and form a revitalized national Social Credit party capable of winning the next federal election.

The federal Social Credit Rally is organizing nationally under Mr. Caouette under original Social Credit concepts.

The convention here plans to draft a new constitution and discuss organization and strategy for the next federal election. The constitution will be presented to a national convention next year.

One of the Créditistes in attendance was Camil Samson, the 35-year-old provincial leader who led the party to 12 seats in the Quebec election last spring.

Mr. Samson told a banquet following the first working session that Social Credit in Quebec is willing to help the West and in turn needs western support.

"We should be like brothers. We can't go alone. This is a fight we have to do together—all together."

"We might have a little difference in language but we have the very same problem—lack of money.

It was 35 years ago today that William Aberhart became premier of Alberta and formed the first Social Credit government in Canada. Since then the government has not been defeated and British Columbia also has gone Social Credit.

Most of Friday's conference agenda involved informal discussions. Resolutions on policy and a new draft constitution were expected to be presented today.

For Mr. Caouette it was a third visit to the West in 15 months to help establish Rally branches in each of the four provinces.

He told a news conference before the convention that Alberta now has 500 active Rally supporters, British Columbia about the same, Saskatchewan 200 to 300 and "strong support" in Manitoba.

Noticeably absent from the convention were young people and big names from Alberta and British Columbia provincial party ranks. Many of the 100 delegates were elderly and most were middle-age. Only three MLAS, with the exception of the Quebec group, attended. All were from Alberta.

The delegates appeared convinced that they must organize the federal party without direct aid from their provincial counterparts.

Representatives of the western provinces said that combined federal-provincial organizations would not benefit revitalization of the party on a federal scale. However, they said the movement's principles cannot be changed and a federal Social Credit government would help sister governments in the provinces to realize these concepts fully.

The federal Rally now has 13 seats in the House of Commons but all are from Quebec and delegates say the present constitution needs revision to suit all Canada.

Cables Go Underground

PORT HARDY — A large part of B.C. Telephone Company's cable facilities are going underground near Port Hardy.

It is installing 11,000 feet of cable, more than 7,500 feet of it underground.

It will go underground from Beaver Harbor Road and along Airport Road. Poles will be removed, and overhead wires will be replaced with underground connections.

Another cable will be placed within the town.

But in the MacMillan Bloedel subdivision, 2,800 feet of 400-pair cable will be strung aerially along Market to Hastings.

Statement To Police, Not Court

Robert John Fair, 42, of 1907 Brighton made the statement "I'm not a hippie, I work for a living" to police and not to provincial court as the Times erroneously reported Aug. 19.

Prosecutor John Mcintyre told court Fair made the statement when arrested on his third charge of impaired driving, Aug. 15.

Fair was sentenced to the mandatory minimum three-months in prison after pleading guilty to the charge.

Second Cholera Case Confirmed by Israel

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — The Israeli health ministry reported a second case of cholera here today.

A ministry spokesman said a Jewish male resident of Jerusalem was taken to hospital and preliminary tests indicated cholera.

The first case of cholera either in Israel or Israeli-held territories was confirmed Friday when a 30-year-old woman from the refugee camp of Anara on the occupied west bank of the Jordan River was found to have the disease.

The camp of 5,000 was sealed off and the Israeli health authorities began inoculating the residents.

A health ministry spokesman said today there was no cause for panic and that the danger to the Israeli public was still slight.

Medical units throughout the country have been put on the alert to watch out for symptoms of the disease. The public has been asked to be strict about hygiene.

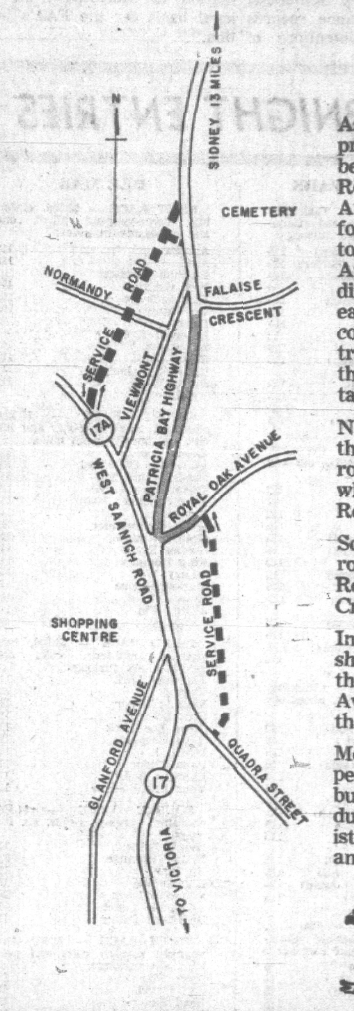
NOTICE

Patricia Bay Highway



As a result of the present construction program the Patricia Bay Highway will be closed to vehicular traffic between Royal Oak Avenue and Falaise Crescent August 24. At the same time direct access for several months, starting Monday, to the Patricia Bay from Royal Oak Avenue will also be closed and traffic redirected over a new service road lying east of the Patricia Bay Highway and connecting to Quadra Street. Pedestrian traffic between Royal Oak Avenue and the West Saanich Road will be maintained.

Northbound traffic will be diverted along the West Saanich Road to a new service road west of the Patricia Bay Highway which rejoins it at a point opposite the Royal Oak Burial Park.

Southbound traffic will use the same route. Access will be maintained to the Royal Oak Burial Park and Falaise Crescent.

In the accompanying sketch plan the shaded sections represent the portions of the Patricia Bay Highway and Royal Oak Avenue to be closed and the dotted lines, the new paved service roads.

Most of the time service roads are expected to carry traffic without difficulty but it is possible some delays may occur during rush hours. Commuters and tourist, therefore, are asked to make allowances

OTTAWA SETS TIME LIMIT

Mail Mediator Has 10 Days

More Meetings Held Today

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Trudeau says the government is prepared to give the new postal mediator a week to 10 days to achieve results in the mail dispute.

Trudeau spoke against the background of a highwater mark in the wave of postal strikes with 10,987 workers out in 111 post offices as talks under mediator Thomas O'Connor of Toronto resumed today.

More than a million welfare and baby bonus cheques were undelivered as a result of the tie-up.

All mail deposted in Greater Victoria boxes over the past two days has been collected, Leon Hall, supervisor of public service, said this morning.

★ ★ ★

It will be on its way today, he added. There was rural mail delivery today and will be full delivery Monday.

A full staff is back on the job but Hall said it would be two or three days before they are able to catch up on the backlog of incoming mail.

Trudeau said he will be leaving for a Mediterranean holiday late this weekend or Monday, as Mr. O'Connor, a labor relations expert, has not yet completed his work. In any case, the cabinet is to discuss the postal situation again next Wednesday, Trudeau said.

★ ★ ★

O'Connor had preliminary exploratory meetings with government and postal union representatives Thursday and met them again today in what is seen as his first attempt to start real mediation.

President of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers William Houle said Friday in Kitchener he is pleased with the appointment of O'Connor as mediator.

Houle told a meeting of the postal workers that O'Connor "is a fast worker" and that more was accomplished at the initial meeting than in all negotiations with former mediators.

★ ★ ★

"I have a feeling that the government is trying to reach a settlement as soon as possible," Houle said. "They could pass legislation to end the strike but are afraid of the impact such action would have."

Negotiations resumed today in a hotel in the city's west end as all parties strove to avoid publicity.

Burning Freighter 'Critical'

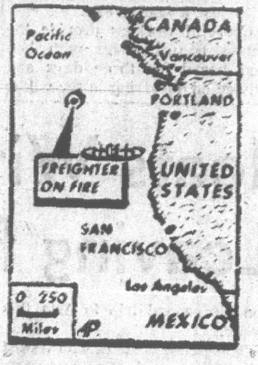
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Water pumps to battle fires raging in a 466-foot Philippine freighter far at sea have quit operating, the United States Coast Guard reported today.

The skipper of the Don Jose Figueras radioed that the vessel's situation was "critical," as it listed 23 degrees to starboard and its portside hull started cracking. A crew of 40 and two passengers were aboard.

The Figueras, loaded with general cargo, was on a Great Circle route from the Philippines to Balboa, Panama. The coast guard said its position was 985 miles northwest of San Francisco.

The Ogishima Maru, a 754-foot motor ore carrier, was the first of four nearby vessels to reach the Figueras and reported five hours later the freighter's captain said the fire was intensifying and that he needed more firefighting equipment. The skipper also said there were no injuries.

A coast guard C-130 airplane from San Francisco dropped inflatable liferafts and reported before turning back for refuelling that there was no plan to abandon ship.



U.S. SENATORS CONCERNED

Cambodia Involvement Seen

FULBRIGHT
. . . outlines fear

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Fears of a United States involvement in Cambodia grew among key senators today despite administration assurances there are no plans to send American advisers to help Phnom Penh.

The senators are concerned that a new $40 million aid program to the Lon Nol government will have to involve advisers in its implementation.

The advisers could then be followed by U.S. troops in the same pattern that led to large-scale military involvement in South Vietnam.

The new program was outlined Friday by a top state department official in a closed-door briefing for the Senate foreign relations committee.

Senator J. William Fulbright (Dem.-Ark.), chairman of the committee, later outlined Senate fears when he said the aid probably would involve electronic monitoring equipment for guiding U.S. planes in operations over Cambodia.

The United States, he told reporters, "probably will use some advisers or whatever you want to call them to operate the electronic things."

Democratic Senate Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said of U.S. aid to Cambodia: "I am not happy about it. It is the involvement question which disturbs me."

Another committee member, Senator Frank Church (Dem.-Idaho), commented: "I feel that American bureaucracy has established a pattern of operation — that any sizable assistance to Cambodia would lead to a growing American pressure in Phnom Penh.

Immediately after the committee briefing by Marshal Green, assistant state secretary for Far Eastern affairs, the Senate passed by voice vote an amendment prohibiting the United States from financing South Vietnamese, Thai and other non - American troops fighting in support of the Cambodian or Laotian governments.

WEAPONS BILL

The measure by Fulbright to ban U.S. employment of so-called mercenary troops was attached to the pending $19,234 million defence weapons procurement bill.

Fulbright said he was hopeful the amendment would survive a joint Senate-House of Representatives conference committee which will try to work out differences in the separate versions of the bill.

Assurances that the United States would not get involved in the ground war in Cambodia were given by President Nixon after the U.S. troop incursion against Communist sanctuaires there.

Church said the briefing indicated that "it is clear that the dimension of American involvement in Cambodia is growing."

He said that Green did not deny the new aid program for Cambodia would cost $40 million, as was reported earlier. It is expected to involve substantial supplies of small arms and military equipment in the current

IWA Set to Meet Peterson On Thursday for Key Talks

Negotiators for the International Woodworkers of America will meet Thursday in Vancouver with Labor Minister Leslie Peterson.

But the 10-man bargaining committee for 28,000 coastal forest workers will meet Monday to decide whether to postpone balloting on the Nemetz contract settlement proposal until that time.

Jack MacKenzie, new spokesman for the union's negotiating committee, said in Vancouver today a telegram from the labor minister has just been received proposing the Thursday meeting. It will be held at 2 p.m.

In telegrams to Jack Moore, IWA president, and John Billings, president of Forest Industrial Relations, Friday, Peterson said he would be prepared "to meet separately with the parties if they so wish during the course of the next 10 days.

"In the meantime," he continued, "I would ask that a vote on the acceptance or rejection of the report by both union and management be suspended."

Peterson said he was "alarmed at the positions taken by the parties both officially and unofficially" in respect to the report by Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz of the British Columbia Court of Appeals, special mediator in the dispute.

The IWA, whose negotiators Thursday urged rejection, accepted Mr. Peterson's offer, proposing Monday for the meeting because of "the urgency of an early solution to this problem."

MacKenzie replied: "We are prepared to do anything possible to settle the matters still in dispute so we welcome any assistance the minister can provide."

Billings said industry was complying with Peterson's request and that "no meetings are planned for several days until the study is completed."

The study so far, he said, has shown that the total cost of implementing the Nemetz recommendations over the proposed two years would be $35 million.

MacKenzie, who is regional vice-president of the IWA,

Search Continues For Lost Jet Pilot

MONTREAL (CP) — A ground and air search continued today for Capt. Denis Lambert, a Canadian Forces pilot missing since he was forced to bail out after a collision in the air between two CF-5 supersonic jets Friday.

A spokesman for the Canadian Forces base at Bagotville, Que., said 12 men were participating in the ground search while a Dakota from Trenton, Ont., and a helicopter, an Otter, a T-33 and some CF-5 aircraft were conducting the air search.

Capt. Lambert, about 30, is from Arvida, Que.

He and Lieut. Marc Fortier of Quebec City, both flying a routine training mission, were forced to eject early Friday over a wooded area 85 miles north of Bagotville.

Lieut. Fortier was picked up by a helicopter late Friday afternoon and was reported "in good condition."

The wreckage of the two jets was found a mile apart.

Warrant Officer Ray Cossette said the collision occurred while the two jets were on a routine training flight flying at about 14,000 feet.

Capt Roy Phillips from the Canadian Forces base at Trenton, Ont., was to lead 21 aircraft in the search for Capt. Lambert today.

A member of the search party which recovered Lieut. Fortier said in an interview the two DC-3s were to watch for some signal, either radio or flares, from Capt. Lambert.

He said the ejection seats are outfitted with flares, a radio pack and an inflatable life raft. No details on the collision were available.

Ten days t' git th' postal service settled. Thet's almost time enuff t' git a letter from Vancouver.

ISRAELI EVIDENCE 'IRREFUTABLE'

Truce Breaks Continuing?

By The Associated Press

Israel says it has new "irrefutable" evidence that Egypt is "continuing grave violations" of the Middle East ceasefire by moving more anti-aircraft missiles closer to the Suez canal.

The complaint, the fourth since the ceasefire went into effect Aug. 7, was based on material gathered Thursday, Israel said.

The Israeli military command said the evidence indicates "the construction of missile batteries and other preparational work still in progress" within 20 miles of the canal. The terms of the truce bar new military deployment within 30 miles of the waterway.

There was no Egyptian comment on the charges. Egypt has refused to acknowledge any of Israel's charges of ceasefire violations.

In Washington, the state department dismissed an Egyptian protest against United States surveillance of the ceasefire by U-2 spy planes and satellites.

The semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahram called such flights a "pretext for espionage," but state departfent spokesman Robert J. McCloskey said the U.S. had received no official statement on the matter from Egypt and would continue the surveillances.

CPR OIL SPILL

B.C. River Polluted After High Runoff

FIELD (CP) — Tractors and other equipment were brought to Field today in an effort to stem the flow of oil from a sump, owned by the CPR, which escaped into the Kicking Horse River Friday night.

A national parks spokesman said the spill occured when the river, unusually high because of warm weather that melted mountain snow, overflowed its banks and filled one of three sumps a few feet from the edge of the river. The sumps were used by the CPR as a dump for bunker heavy oil when steam locomotives were used on the line more than 15 years ago.

The swirling waters tore away part of the bank and allowed the heavy oil to escape into the river.

China Plans 'Shock Work'

TOKYO (AP) — Communist China spelled out today a strategy of "shock work" — mobilizing giant work forces for major projects — to catch up with "advanced world levels" in industry and science.

The idea, a Peking broadcast said, is to break down "the barriers between trades and occupations, doing away with the arbitrary division of labor between enterprises." Workers from "a dozen, or dozens, or even hundreds of units" are brought together, it said, to "make a powerful fist."

The broadcast by the official New China news agency was made up of excerpts from a recent article in the Communist party newspaper People's Daily by Kuo Chi-wei, not further identified.

The article said: "We mean to use shock work to crush aside the usual ways of work, exert efforts to catch up with and surpass the advanced world levels, use indigenous and simple methods to outshine modern methods, use the mass line to replace that of exclusive dependence on experts, and use the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and arduous struggle to oppose the lazy bones' philosophy of asking everything from higher authorities and seeking things ostentatious and foreign."

Thousands Camping At U.K. Rockfest

FRESHWATER, England (CP) — Thousands of people are already camping out on the Isle of Wight waiting for what is expected to be the biggest feast of pop music in Europe this year.

Predictions are that 250,000 youngsters will attend the five-day, $1.25-million Isle of Wight festival beginning next Wednesday.

Canadian singers Joni Mitchell and Leonard Cohen are among the performers scheduled to appear at the festival.

Residents of the island, off the south coast of England, have fought a bitter battle against the affair for months with delaying tactics, threats and site sabotage.

However the county council after inspecting the site, near Freshwater on the western half of the island, gave their approval. Fiery Creations Ltd., the festival promoters, have built a tin and canvas city with double corrugated-iron fences nine feet high, between which 150 guard dogs will prowl.

SARDINE SYNDROME: Would Darwin Agree?

LONDON (Reuters) — Two British social biologists have put forward the theory that increased violence in the world has been caused by overcrowding, not by any inherent agressiveness in human nature.

The 20th century is exceptionally cruel and violent and becoming more so, the two scientists, Dr. W. M. S. Russell and his wife Claire, contend.

"If we could eliminate population stresses altogether, our societies could become as free, friendly and peaceful as those of wild monkeys, and infinitely more creative," they write in the August issue of The Ecologist, a new British monthly.

Their article, The Sardine Syndrom, draws a parallel between the behavior of monkeys and humans when subject to over-population.

Among monkeys living in the wild in Africa, quarrelling is rare and violence almost non-existent.

But in monkeys living under the stresses of an enclosure, "quarrelling is frequent and violence appreciable, sometimes leading to serious wounds and death," the Russells said.

Social advancement among monkeys confined in zoos is often attained "by brutal aggression and nothing else."

For thousands of years, there have been two schools of thought about human aggression and its expression in violent crime, riots and war, the Russells noted.

Some people maintain that aggressiveness is an inherent quality of human nature. Others have taken the view that it is a response to intolerable frustrations.

Russell is a lecturer at Reading University. His wife is a researcher into social behavior.

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, AUGUST 22, 1970—PAGE 19

Who Are Left on Wayside as Bus Services Diminish?

Old Folk . . . Children . . . and, of Course, the Poor

A widow will lose the job that keeps herself and her son. An 82-year-old pensioner will be unable to keep his doctor appointments.

These are but two of the Saanich Peninsula residents who will bear the brunt if the Vancouver Island Coach Lines is granted permission by the B.C. Public Utilities Commission to discontinue service to Sidney-Deep Cove, West Saanich and Cordova Bay.

There are many more.

A good proportion of them are elderly. They depend on the bus for their contact with the outside world.

They are already paying the price for living in an affluent society. As wages increase, forcing the bus company to raise fares, they count their pennies and limit their excursions to stores, banks, and their friends.

They're pushed further into the isolation of old age and loneliness.

Two-Car Trend Snarling Roads, Draining Away Transit Funds

As one official at the Silver Threads Centre in Sidney explains:

"The one thing they have left is their independence. Most of them can't bring themselves to sponge off their neighbors for lifts. It's hard on their pride."

On the other end of the age scale, children will take the rap for a society unable to provide transportation to the YM-YWCA and other city activities that stretch both mind and muscle.

•

Mothers are among those who have written the commission, saying that already their children are forced to hitch-hike along a busy highway because of inconvenient bus schedules.

They worry now whether their children will pay the consequences of increased highway hitch-hiking.

Farmers will be hit — and their laborers.

Central Saanich Mayor A. M. Galbraith and Dixon Holloway, president of the Saanich Fruit Growers' Association, estimate that 75 per cent of the farmers' work force commute from the Victoria area.

Describing VICL's bid to stop service as "very short-sighted," Galbraith adds:

"It works two ways. The farmers get the help they need in order to survive and many unskilled people receive a chance to work."

Some residents say they will have to sell their homes and move closer to transportation.

Others fear that life savings, used to buy their homes, will be whittled away — that lack of transportation will drag down the value of real estate.

The social conscience of the four municipalities has been touched. In a combined brief to the PUC they've urged the commission to turn down the VICL application.

By PAT DUFOUR

Saanich may have a stronger case than the others.

In a separate brief the council has referred to a franchise in existence between the municipality and the company which is in effect until 1972.

The terms of the franchise call for a year's notice before the franchise can be dropped.

It also requires that the VICL seek agreement from council before it reduces or abandons bus routes.

This was not done. Instead, the coach lines sent a copy of its application to the council.

•

In a combined brief the chambers of commerce for Greater Victoria, Saanich, Central Saanich and Sidney, and North Saanich have also urged the commission to keep the Peninsula service operating.

There are four runs to and from Victoria and Cordova Bay each day. The first bus leaves Victoria at 8:30 a.m. and the final run comes back to town at 5:45 p.m.

Four return runs also service the Sidney-Deep Cove areas with the first bus leaving Victoria at 7 a.m. and the final run back to Victoria scheduled for 6:25 p.m.

The heaviest serviced route is the one feeding Sidney and Deep Cove. There are eight return runs each weekday with the first bus leaving Victoria at 6:30 a.m. and the last returning from Sidney at 7:35 p.m. An additional run, leaving Victoria at 10 a.m., is scheduled in the summer to connect with the Washington State ferry to Anacortes.

•

Fares are on a sliding scale, pegged at just under five cents a mile. As an example, Victoria to Brentwood costs 70 cents; Sidney to Victoria, 90 cents; and Cordova Bay to Victoria, 45 cents. There is no reduction for return fares but a package deal offers 10 tickets for the price of eight.

Although there will be some economic penalties involved if the VICL service folds, both the municipalities and the Chambers are more concerned with the social implications.

Unfortunately, neither the PUC or a private company like the VICL seem to share this concern.

The only basis for their decision is economics.

VICL say they are losing more than $100,000 a year on the three runs.

Traffic manager Jack Thomas points out the financial drain will be even greater when new union contracts are signed in March 1971. These will cost the company an extra $130,000 a year in wages.

The company says it has been using profits from the more-lucrative Victoria-Mainland runs to help subsidize the Saanich Peninsula routes. VICL applied to PUC to increase rates for the crosswater runs May 15 but were turned down.

•

On the crosswater runs they must compete with the Pacific Stage Lines. Being a part of B.C. Hydro, PSL is not accountable to the PUC nor are its financial accounts available for examination. They disappear into those of its provincially-owned parent.

Main VICL criticism is that the company would be more efficient if it revised schedules, used smaller buses and added runs that would get workers from outlying jobs to downtown Victoria in time to start work on time and runs that would allow Saanich Peninsula residents to spend an evening in Victoria, or have their car-less friends visit them.

Here again, it's a matter of economics, Thomas says. More runs mean more drivers — and it is union rates, not equipment, that creates crippling financial leaps.

Some Face The Prospect Of Selling Their Homes

Smaller buses, says Thomas, are not the answer. He cites, as an example the 2:45 p.m. Cordova Bay run.

"That's the peak run of the day, with school children using it. We average 28.3 passengers. This would mean putting on two buses — and two drivers."

Thomas says a run that delivered Cordova Bay residents into Victoria on time for work was rescheduled after the company carried out a survey of the area.

"The bus was going into town almost empty. We were told that if we put one on at 9 a.m. when mothers had their children away at school they would use it. This hasn't happened. The average load for the month of January was 7.8 passengers."

Restrictive union requirements on working hours, Thomas added, make it economically impossible to add extra runs in the evenings.

When VICL acquired its Saanich franchise in 1947 it was locally-owned. This picture changed when Harold Husband, now VMD president, sold out his major interest to International Utilities Corporation, an American company incorporated in Maryland and operating out of a Toronto head office.

The franchise, in those days, was a more lucrative monopoly. In 1947 a future with so many two-car families seemed as remote as interplanetary travel today.

Now the two-car trend is here to stay, producing colossal snarls on overburdened roads; draining away transit-system revenue.

Wooing drivers out of their cars and into buses is going to take some doing.

B.C. Hydro employees are good examples. In spite of the fact that they all receive bus passes as part of their work contract, the bulk of the head office staff in Victoria pass up free rides in favor of their cars.

•

The monopoly granted by a franchise becomes as outdated as the horse and buggy when, given exclusive rights, a private company can discard vital routes and still retain those that help line their bank account.

The Chamber of Commerce brief points out that VICL's sightseeing tours in the Victoria and Saanich districts produce some $72,368 in profit. They say this would more than offset the net saving of $63,000 to be gained by discontinuing the Saanich routes.

Restrictive land regulations, designed to preserve the environment, also compound the problem of providing efficient transportation.

While they slow the growing threat of suburban sprawl they also cancel out the possibility of fast-growing densely-populated areas where residents would be forced to use a transit system or face the ordeal of bumper-to-bumper congestion.

Even those most concerned about the possibility of the Saanich Peninsula being stripped of its transit system realize that it is a minority that will be affected if the VICL succeeds in pulling out Sept. 15.

But they also realize that it is the segment of our society least able to recover from the blow.

•

And there is also an awareness that the provision of a reliable transit system is a matter of public conscience.

The Chamber brief asks the PUC to call a public hearing on the Saanich Peninsula issue.

The PUC is empowered — but not required — to call a public hearing.

Even if the VICL's application is quashed and the Peninsula retains its service, such a hearing would point up one disturbing reality: the PUC rejection would provide only a breathing space for a problem that must be faced.

In 1972 VICL can phase out its franchise as it has already done in Sooke, the Metchosin and Langford areas, and Nanaimo.

It will also become obvious that the Peninsula issue is merely a part of the traffic dilemma that plagues the entire regional district.

Traffic patterns in and out of Victoria are providing a monumental headache already for the city's traffic engineer David Campbell. He estimates that the volume increases by six per cent each year and accidents by 20 per cent each year.

Side-effects are spreading beyond city limits and will spread further.

The signs are there. There will come a time when the only solution of all these problems may lie in a transit system planned on a regional district level.

The next article Monday looks at how this may be done.

Planners Schedule Hard Look at Harbor

Victoria's advisory planning commission will hold a special meeting, probably in late September, for a comprehensive review of plans for the Inner Harbor.

The meeting will bring all commission members up to date and give them an opportunity to assess where planning for the harbor should go, chairman, S. J. Cunliffe said today.

The studies which have been done over the years on the harbor have been referred to the commission but time has gone by and new members have been added, he said. So there's a need for an over-all review.

"We want this commission to get a clear picture of just what's in the mill so they can make some assessment."

The commission includes four city aldermen, Mayor Courtney Haddock, nine members appointed by council and a represetative of the Greater Victoria school board. It is supported by technical advisors from the city and Capital region board.

NEW POOL FINISHED IN MAY

Completion of Victoria's $1.75 million swimming pool will be delayed until May because of the prolonged construction lockout, project architect John Di Castri said Friday.

It was scheduled for completion in February.

"But we are in full gear now," he said. "We are still coming out of the ground and putting up basement walls."

The construction delay had one beneficial side-effect.

City comptroller Jim Bramley said the interruption enabled the city to pick up an extra $35,000 by using the allocated money for short-term investments.

The money will be used to offset additional expenditure from unexpected rock formation in the construction area, he said.

$27,500 Shot in the Arm Given Measles Vaccine Fund

The Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation of B.C. measle vaccine fund now stands at $55,500 following the receipt today of two donations totalling $27,500.

The B.C. Medical Services Fund and the Williamson Foundation have contributed $25,000 and $2,500 respectively.

The donations will go towards providing anti-German measles vaccine throughout the province for all children up to 12 years old. The only stipulation is that the program of vaccination is accomplished within two months.

Donations can be sent to Measles Vaccine Fund, c-o Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation of B.C., 3843-D Quadra Street.

Union Set to Appeal Woman's Early Retirement

The Canadian Union of Public Employees is appealing an arbitration decision which forced a woman employee of the Greater Victoria Public Library to retire at 60.

Men doing the same work as the woman are permitted to work until age 65.

The woman, who has not been identified, was forced to retire last June because the library board interpreted the staff pension plan to read that women must retire five years before men must.

An employee at the library for about 18 years, she had asked to stay on the job.

FINAL DECISION

Esquimalt Ald. Arthur Cuthbert, the library board's chairman, said today as far as the board is concerned it had made a final decision and he thought it was the right one.

The board isn't trying to hide a thing, he said. The matter was handled through the proper channels and the decision was not made in haste.

Alex Markides, CUPE field representative, said as far as the union is concerned, the employer has not complied with the written intent of the agreement.

The union has appealed an arbitration decision to the board of industrial relations.

Students to Take To the Streets

University of Victoria freshmen will take to the streets Sept. 19 as part of "Shinerama Canada," a nation-wide student campaign to raise money to fight cystic fibrosis, a major cause of death in young children.

Groups of two and three students will operate shoeshine stands throughout the city during the day. About 30,000 students from 60 universities are expected to participate across Canada.

Local freshmen last year raised over $5,200 for the Canadian Cystic Fibrosis Foundation for research and care of youngsters afflicted with the disease.

HITS LUNG

Cystic fibrosis hits young children in the lungs and digestive system causing breathing difficulties and faulty digestive cycles.

One in every 1,000 children is born with the disease which claims more victims than polio did at its pre-vaccine worst.

Arthur Mayse . . .

AS MY WIFE KNOWS ALL too well, my reaction to home movies is surefire and immediate. Unless they deal with fishing, I go to sleep.

Not obviously, mind, and never so soundly that a discreet nudge won't return me to Our Holiday in Hawaii, Daughter's Graduation, or The Grandchildren Playing with the New Pup.

We don't make home movies. I wish I did, and not merely so we could fetch out a projector, set up a screen, and bore the bejudas out of our guests.

It would be nice to have a proper film record of our family past. Instead, all we possess is a higgledy-piggledy of snapshots which we mean to sort out but never do.

I took a few of those photographs. They are identifiable by the fact that people in them are scythed off at knee-level, or have lost their heads.

My dear one gleamed most of our pictures and it was no easy task.

Before any holiday or outing, I would say, "Now, let's not forget to take a camera along."

Three of us promptly forgot. But our fourth remembered, and sooner or later would remind us of the fact.

"I think we should get some pictures of this camp," she would say.

Later, we'd be glad of those pictures. But at the moment, the rest of us had other matters in mind. Like fishing, or swimming, or loafing in the shade.

The dialogue then shaped itself more or less along these lines.

"You mean right now?"

Another voice: "Can't you take us where we are?"

Win: "No. You're too spread out. Anyway, I'd be pointing into the sun."

Voices (grumbling), "Okay, okay. Just let me get this line untangled first."

Or, "I don't see why you can't take them tomorrow."

Or by way of variation, "I thought we were going to go beachcombing."

There was no valid reason for this reluctance. It stemmed from laziness spiced with contrariness. Eventually, though, we would co-operate to the point of arranging ourselves as bidden. Sometimes we would even oblige to the point of saying 'Cheese!'

When developed, some of those induced smiles were scarcely distinguishable from snarls.

This was rank ingratitude, and a poor reward for Win's patience and foresight. As snarler-in-chief, I'm grateful now for those moments she snatched for us from time in its passing.

Because of them, children now grown are children still, and trout long sizzled and eaten have achieved a sort of immortality.

In this last connection, I have made an interesting discovery. Cameras shrink fish. On film, the speckled cutthroat that I remember as darn near as long as my arm drops inches and pounds.

(I've asked a fisherman who is also a photographer about this phenomenon. "Next time, he advises, "hold the fish broadside on and push it well out in front of you.")

My own ventures into photography have been less than lucky.

The lens creeps under my thumb, or I'm still fussing around with a light meter while the perfect setup dissolves and vanishes. Sometimes misfires that defy explanation occur.

Once I persuaded a mountaineer to arrange himself for picture purposes on a rock face, and at risk of my neck, achieved a position where I could get what should have been a dramatic silhouette.

I boasted a good deal about that shot, until a press photographer developed it. Cackling, he handed me the print.

"Nice chunk of rock," he said, "but where's your guy?"

I'm still not sure what happened to the climber. Maybe he got tired of waiting, and moved on. Or maybe the goblins got him.

In spite of such foulups, I'm still all for taking a camera along when we set off on our next vacation.

As usual, I'll forget, but Win will remember.

This time, I'll hold all fish two feet in front of me, and try not to snarl.

EX-SOLDIER WOULD RESTORE SEPARATE FORCES

Unification Judged Costly Failure

(Special to the Times)

TORONTO — Restoration of three separate Canadian armed services was advocated today by R. S. Malone, Winnipeg newspaper executive.

At the same time, he called for the "highest possible degree" of integration of supply, administrative and staff functions plus a "properly constituted defence council" to advise the government rather than the present commander-in-chief system.

Malone, a brigadier in the Second World War who was personal liaison officer to Field Marshal Montgomery in Italy and headed the Canadian mission to General MacArthur's Pacific headquarters, was speaking to directors of the Canadian National Exhibition after the annual Warrior's Day Parade.

He said it is estimated that the operational efficiency of the country's armed forces is about half of what it was before unification.

●

Instead of spending 25 per cent of the defence budget on modern equipment, as he said was forecast, the figure is closer to 17 per cent.

"It is also estimated that instead of staff and command efficiences, we now have the most over-commanded formations in the world," he said.

"Our proportion of officers to other ranks is now the highest in the world.

"The confusion resulting from unification has also created great difficulties in undertaking any effective joint operations with British and American units."

Malone, one of the few Canadian officers to serve in all theatres of the Second World War, has written extensively about military affairs. He is vice-president and general manager of FP Publications Limited and publisher of the Winnipeg Free Press.

In his speech, he said Canada for the first time "is in default" to its allies and itself in carrying the fair share of the collective defence burden.

He blamed lack of adequate defences on "miscalculation and mismanagement, not to lack of patriotism and courage."

The means to defend laws in an emergency or crisis do not exist in Canada, he said.

"A whole decade, at least, has been wasted in false assumptions, confused directions from the top, then bungled defence policies of the Hellyer period and now, no policies at all," he said.

(Paul Hellyer was defence minister who steered through integration of the armed forces.)

Malone said while Canada is not prepared "to make any contribution" towards security in other areas, "we seemingly have no hesitation in virtuously telling Britain that she must not sell ships and arms to South Africa. We have fallen victims to the hypocrisy and propaganda that this has something to do with apartheid politics.

●

"We must, of course, always press for peaceful settlements but we cannot ignore the growing dangers in the southern flank of NATO and the entire Mildle East. If the crunch comes, will NATO, through lack of military strength, be faced with the choice of nuclear suicide or giving in to blackmail?"

He said Britain and the United States will be faced in the immediate future with "painful withdrawals" from some areas of Asia and Africa and their efforts to preserve peace in these areas may fail.

Just returned from Europe, Malone said it is recognized there that Canada's foreign policies, "such as they are," flow directly from Prime Minister Trudeau's office.

"Instead of having a military policy formulated now as an extension of our foreign policy, we have seemingly reversed the process," he said.

●

"If anything, our foreign policy has been formulated to support our defence policy and our defence policy is designed simply to fit our budget in constant dollars.

"Our foreign policy white paper is construed abroad as merely an alibi or excuse, attempting to justify our wavering defence policies and withdrawal from NATO. The timing could not have been worse. During the next four to five years, NATO will have to face perhaps its most critical period, when the future patterns for peace in Europe may well be decided."

Police Court

A man who cannot read or write was sentenced Friday to six months in jail on two charges of gross indecency despite a plea for mercy by the defence on grounds that prison would have a disastrous effect on his personality.

Laurent Fournier, 28, of 3420 Quadra, appeared before Judge William Ostler for reading of a presentence report.

He was charged with committing homosexual acts with a seven and an eight-year-old boy in his apartment July 31.

He pleaded guilty to the charges Aug. 14.

Fournier was described to court as a "hesitant homosexual" whose life had been a moved from job to job and province to province, repeatedly succession of failures as he finding he was unable to cope Fournier had "expressed shame with his work.

The defence asked Ostler to consider the effect upon his personality that would arise from sending him to a prison "where homosexuality is practised by common knowledge."

Even during custody awaiting sentence, Fournier has been "constantly pestered" by imprisoned homosexuals since the nature of his crime was first reported in the press, the defence said.

"The effects of a prison term could only be disastrous."

But Ostler, who began by saying that "the average person feels pity for a man like you," imposed a lengthy prison term anyway.

While he acknowledged that Fourner had "expressed shame and been perfectly honest," Ostler said it would be "even more disastrous" if he were able to continue this conduct with young children.

"This was loathsome conduct," he said, and suggested that such contact could affect children for the rest of their lives, with damage to personalities coming to light only years later.

During the exchange between Ostler and the defence Fournier remained impassive. He attempted to say something to the judge once but was brusquely cut short.

Ostler sentenced Fournier to six months in prison on each count, terms to be served concurrently.

Keith Shepherd, 28, of 325 Michigan, charged with committing arson at the apartment house where he lived, had the date of his preliminary hearing fixed at Sept. 4.

Fred Dewhirst, an 81-year-old man, died as a result of injuries suffered when he plunged 30-feet from his apartment window at 325 Michigan after falling while attempting to escape the flames.

* * *

Penelope Ann Clarke, 19, of 3780 Savannah, who appeared for presentence report on 11 counts of uttering forged documents and false pretences, was given a suspended sentence.

"I think this young woman was influenced by older and more experienced people," Ostler said.

* * *

John Charlebois, 58, of a downtown hotel, was sentenced to three months in prison when he pleaded guilty to a charge that he stole five watches and two sets of cuff links Thursday.

Court was told he took the merchandise, worth $30 from Metropolitan Stores.

He had a criminal record dating back to 1929, said prosecutor John Macintyre.

"You are obviously a persistent and unrepentant thief," Ostler said.

* * *

Gary Roy Brady, 18, of 409 Lochside, was remanded to Sept. 1 for preliminary hearing on a charge of trafficking in LSD.

* * *

John Garroway, 18, of 3166 Irma, was remanded in custody for a psychiatric examination. He originally pleaded guilty to stealing a package of cigarettes.

Obe Johnson, 22, of 996 McBrai, was remanded to Sept. 8 for trial after pleading not guilty to a charge of common assault and a charge of assault causing bodily harm.

* * *

David Harvey, 21, of 1038 Vista Heights, was remanded to Sept. 10 after pleading not guilty to a charge of possession of stolen property and a charge of criminal negligence.

* * *

Joseph Fenton, 45, of 1875 Dickson in Sidney, was fined $350 for impaired driving. Court was told he drove July 18 with a blood alcohol reading of .18 per cent.

* * *

Robert Alexander Edgeworth, 33, of 107 Glentena, was fined $400 for impaired driving. He drove with a blood alcohol content of .20 per cent Aug. 5, court was told.

* * *

William Aaron, 44, of 570 Niagara, was sentenced to six months in prison after pleading guilty to indecently assaulting a nine-year-old boy.

Aaron appeared before Ostler Thursday for presentence report.

Ostler said Aaron's claim that the boy seduced him was "too absurd."

They won't go anywhere without their new Intertherm™ Hot Water Electric Heater!

That's Because It Provides the Wonderful, Floor-to-Ceiling Warmth of
HOT WATER HEAT WITHOUT PLUMBING
Permanent Systems for Entire Structures — and Portable Plug-in Models

Operates by a Revolutionary Principle— Electrically-Heated, Sealed-in Water!

Once you've enjoyed the soft, gentle, uniform, floor-to-ceiling warmth of INTERTHERM Hot Water Electric Baseboard Heating—you'll never want to be without it—at home, or when visiting.

For the INTERTHERM—both permanently-installed and portable models—produces the most comfortable, healthful, economical, cleanest, safest heat possible today. For entire homes, apartments, vacation lodges, hotels, motels, schools, commercial buildings—and hard-to-heat single rooms, offices and other small areas.

Here's How the INTERTHERM Provides Hot Water Heat Without Plumbing. The secret lies in the inner works of the heater, shown in the diagram at the right. This consists of a copper tube inside of which an electric heating element and a water and anti-freeze solution—that never needs replenishing—are permanently, hermetically sealed. The electric element heats the water. And the water heats the room.

An INTERTHERM System — Easily Installed Permanently in an Entire Structure — Takes the Place of Expensive-to-Install Central Heating Systems of All Types. Yet requires no furnace, boiler, pipes, ducts, flues, chimney, fuel storage tank and other costly components of a properly-installed central heating system.

The Portable INTERTHERM is easy to carry anywhere. And plugs into any 115-volt outlet.

Operation is Controlled Entirely by Thermostat which maintains the solution at exactly the temperature necessary for perfectly-balanced, floor-to-ceiling warmth at all times — regardless of outside temperatures. When the current is shut off the solution continues to heat the room.

Floors are kept warm. No heat is wasted at ceiling. No chilling drafts. No alternating too-hot and too-cold periods. No overheating to carbonize lint and dust particles that irritate nose and throat membranes; smudge walls, drapes and furniture. Can't cause a fire hazard. Can't scorch furniture or drapes — can't burn child or pet — if they come in contact. Many more advantages.
